'It don't much matter, sir,' says Tom, 'I ain't long for this world. Eight weeks of marriage, especially with this young woman, might reconcile me to my fate. I think,' he says, 'I could go off easy, after that.' With which he embraces her with a very dismal face, and groans in a way that might move a heart of stone—even of philosopher's stone.

'Egad,' says the old gentleman, 'that reminds me—this bustle put it out of my head—there was a figure wrong. He'll live to a green old age—eighty-seven at least!'

'How much, sir?' cries Tom.

'Eighty-seven!' says the old gentleman.

Without another word, Tom flings himself on the old gentleman's neck; throws up his hat; cuts a caper; defies the waiting-maid; and refers her to the butcher.

'You won't marry her?' says the old gentleman, angrily.

'A nice life after it!' says Tom. 'I'd sooner marry a mermaid, with a small-tooth comb and looking-glass.'

'Then take the consequences,' says the other.

'With those words—I beg your kind attention here, gentlemen, for it's worth your notice—the old gentleman w[illegible] the fore-finger of his right hand in some [illegible] liquor from the crucible that was spi[illegible] the floor, and drew a small triangle on Tom's forehead. The room swam before his eyes, and he found himself in the watch-house.'

'Found himself where?' cried the vice, on behalf of the company generally.

'In the watch-house,' said the chairman. 'It was late at night, and he found himself in the very watch-house from which he had been let out that morning.'

'Did he go home?' asked the vice.

'The watch-house people rather objected to that,' said the chairman; 'so he stopped there that night, and went before the magistrate in the morning. 'Why, you're here again, are you?' says the magistrate, adding insult to injury; 'we'll trouble you for five shillings more, if you can conveniently spare the money.' Tom told him he had been enchanted, but it was of no use. He told the contractors the same, but they wouldn't believe him. It was very hard upon him, gentlemen, as he often said, for was it likely he'd go and invent such a tale? They shook their heads and told him he'd say anything but his prayers—as indeed he would; there's no doubt about that. It was the only imputation on his moral character that ever I heard of.'

Importance of Presence of Mind in a Family.

1. If a man faints, place him flat on his back, and let him alone.

2. If any poison is swallowed, drink instantly half a glass of cool water with a heaping teaspoonful each of common salt and ground mustard stirred into it; this vomits as soon as it reaches the stomach, but for fear some of the poison remains, swallow the white of one or two raw eggs, or drink a cup of hot coffee. The two being antidotes for a greater number of poisons than any dozen other articles known, with the advantage of their always being on hand; if not, a pint of sweet oil, or lamp oil, or 'drippings,' or melted butter, or lard, are good substitutes, especially if they vomit quickly.

3. The best thing to stop the bleeding of a moderate cut instantly, is to cover it over profusely with cobweb, or flour and salt, half and half.

4. If the blood comes from a wound by jets or spirts, be spry, or the person will die in a few minutes, because an artery is severed; tie a handkerchief loosely around, near the part between the wound and the heart; put a stick between the handkerchief and the skin and twist it around until the blood ceases to flow; keep it there until the doctor comes; if in a position where the handkerchief cannot be used press the thumb on a spot near the wound, between the wound and the heart; increase the pressure until the bleeding ceases, but do not lessen the pressure for an instant until the physician arrives so as to glue up the wound by the coagulation or cooling of the hardening blood.

5. If the baby is tired, rest; if the brain is tired, sleep.

6. The three best medicines in the world are warmth, abstinence and repose.

A WORD TO APPRENTICES.—Apprenticeship is the most important stage of life through which a mechanic is called to pass; it is emphatically the spring season of his days; the time when he is to reap in after years. If he spare no labor in its proper culture, he is sure of obtaining an abundant harvest; but, if, in the culture of the mental soil, he follow the example of many in tilling the earth, and carelessly and negligently dues his work, like them he will find the seeding time past, and his ground bringing forth only weeds and briars. Let the young apprentice bear in mind, when he commences learning any business, that all hopes of success in the future are doomed to fade away like the morning mist, unless he improves the golden season. Let him bear in mind that he can become master of his business only through the closest application, and the most persevering industry; and that unless he does master it, he may bid farewell to all visions of future prospect and success. The apprentice is the foundation of the great mechanical edifice, and surely if the foundation of a structure be not firm, the structure itself crumbles and falls to the earth. Then young friends, persevere, be studious and attentive; study well all the branches of your business, both practical and theoretical—and you will not fail, when your time shall come to take an active part in life, to be of use, not only in your own particular business, but in society.

THOUGHTS FOR YOUNG MEN.—Costly apparatus and splendid cabinets have no magical power to make scholars. In all circumstances, as much is under God, the master of his own fortune, to be is the former of his own mind. The Creator has so constituted the human intellect, that it can grow only by its own action, and by its own action it most certainly and necessarily grows. Every man must, therefore, in an important sense, educate himself. His books and teachers are but helps; the work is his. A man is not educated until he has the ability to summon, in case of emergency, all his mental power to vigorous exercise to effect his proposed object. It is not the man who has seen the most, or has read most, who can do this; such a one is in danger of being borne down, like a beast of burden, by an over-loaded mass of other men's thoughts. Nor is it the man that can boast merely of native vigor and capacity. The greatest of all the warriors that went to the siege of Troy, had not the pre-eminence because nature had given him strength and he carried the largest bow, but because self discipline taught him how to bend it.

Poetry.

TIME.

Time—what is it, gently stealing,
Gently moving from the main?
'Tis a ripple is its rising,
Soon to ebb away again.
Time—'tis something ever moving,
Wildly whirling on its way;
Staying never—ever onward,
'Tis the passing of a day.

Time—a river in its flowing,
Downward rushing to the sea;
Till the angel's trumpet sounding,
Tells that time no more shall be,
Lost amid the deep below,
Ye existing but to know it
Is eternity to know.

Time—a fragment, rent and riven,
On the everlasting main,
Fleeting, fleeting, onward driven;
To its continent again.
'Mid the context of th' Eternal,
This parenthesis it scan,
Is it read within its limits
All the history of man.

Time—a season ever ranging;
'Tis a stage a varied play;
Man the actor, ever changing,
Ne'er continues in one stay.
Time the first-born of creation,
First to live and last to die,
'Twixt its first and last pulsation,
Time transacts her mystery.

Time—a treasure rich and costly,
Now entrusted to thy care;
Now to use it, or abuse it—
'Tis a priceless thing and rare,
Shall we not, then, learn to cherish
This provision that is made?
Seasons pass, and moments perish,
And to our account are laid.

Literature.

The Lamplighter's Story.

(From the "Picnic Papers.")

(Concluded)

'Why don't you throw him away?' says Tom. 'What do you keep such unpleasant thing s here for?'

'Throw him away!' cries the old gentleman. 'We use him constantly in astrology. He's a charm.'

'I shouldn't have thought it,' says Tom, 'from his appearance. Must you go, I say?'

'The old gentleman makes him no answer, but climbs up the ladder in a greater bustle than ever. Tom looked after his legs till there was nothing of him left, and then sat down to wait; feeling (so he used to say) as comfortable as if he was going to be made a free-mason, and they were beating the pokers.

"Tom waited so long gentlemen, that he began to think it must be getting on for midnight at least, and felt more dismal and lonely than ever he had done in all his life. He tried every means of whiling away the time, but it never had seemed to move so slow. First, he took a nearer view of the child with three heads, and thought what a comfort it must have been to his parents. Then he looked up a long telescope which was pointed out of the window, but saw nothing particular in consequence of the stopper being at the other end. Then he came to a skeleton in a glass case, labelled "Skeleton of a Gentleman—Prepared by Mr. Mooney,"—which made him hope that Mr. Mooney might not be in the habit o preparing gentlemen that way without their own consent. A hundred times at least he looked into the pot where they were boiling the philosopher's stone down to the proper consistency, and wondered whether it was nearly done. 'When it is,' thinks Tom, 'I'll send out for sixpenn'orth of sprats, and turn 'em into gold fish for a first experiment. Besides which, he made up his mind, gentleman, to have a country house and a park; and to plant a bit of it with a double row of gas lamps a mile long, and go out every night with a French-polished mahogany ladder, and two servants in livery behind him, to light 'em for his own pleasure.

"At length and at last, the old gentleman's legs appeared upon the steps leading through the roof, and he came slowly down: bringing along with him the gifted Mooney. This Mooney, gentlemen, was even more scientific in appearance than his friend; and had, as Tom often declared upon his word and honour, the dirtiest face we can possibly know of, in this imperfect state of existence.

Gentlemen, you are all aware that if a scientific man isn't absent in his mind, he's of no good at all. Mr. Mooney was so absent, that when the old gentleman said to him, 'shake hands with Mr. Grig,' he put out his leg. 'Here's a mind, Mr. Grig,' cries the old gentleman in a rapture. 'Here's philosophy! Here's ruminiation! Don't disturb him,' he says, 'for this is amazing!'

Tom had no wish to disturb him, as in nothing particular to say; but he was so uncommonly amazing, that the old gentleman got impatient, and determined to give him an electric shock to bring him to—'for you must know, Mr. Grig,' he says, 'that we always keep a strong charged battery, ready for that purpose.' These means being resorted to, gentlemen, the gifted Mooney revived with a loud roar, and he no sooner came to himself, than both he and the old gentleman looked at Tom with compassion, and shed tears abundantly.

'My dear friend,' says the old gentleman to the Gifted, 'prepare him.'

'I say,' cries Tom, falling back, 'none of that you know. No preparing by Mr. Mooney, if you please.'

'Alas!' replies the old gentleman, 'you don't understand us. My friend informs him of his fate. I can't.

The Gifted mustered up his voice, after many efforts, and informed Tom that his nativity had been carefully cast, and he would expire at exactly thirty-five minutes, twenty-seven seconds, and five-sixths of a second past nine o'clock, a. m., on that day two months.

Gentlemen, I leave you to judge what were Tom's feelings at the announcement, on the eve of matrimony and endless riches. 'I think,' he says in a trembling way, 'there must be a mistake in the working of that sum. Will you do me the favour to cast it up again?'

'There is no mistake,' replies the old gentleman, 'it is confirmed by Francis Moore, Physician. Here is the prediction for to-morrow two months.' And he showed him the page, where sure enough were these words—'The decease of a great person may be looked for, about this time.'

'Which,' says the old gentleman, 'is clearly you, Mr. Grig.'

'Too clearly,' cries Tom, sinking into a chair, and giving one hand to the old gentleman, and one to the gifted. 'The orb of day has set on Thomas Grig for ever!'

'At this affecting remark the Gifted shed tears again, and the other two mingled their tears with his, in a kind—if I may use the expression—of Mooney and Co's entire. But the old gentleman recovering first, observed that this was only a reason for hastening the marriage, in order that Tom's distinguished race might be transmitted to posterity; and requesting the Gifted to console Mr. Grig during his temporary absence, he withdrew to settle the preliminaries with his niece immediately.

'And now, gentlemen, a very extraordinary and remarkable occurrence took place; for, as Tom sat in a melancholy way in one chair, and the Gifted sat in a melancholy way in another, a couple of doors were thrown violently open, the two young ladies rushed in, and one knelt down in a loving attitude at Tom's feet, and the other at the Gifted's. So far, perhaps, as Tom was concerned—as he used to say—you will say there was nothing strange in this; but you will be of a different opinion when you understand that Tom's young lady was kneeling to the Gifted, and the Gifted's young lady was kneeling to Tom.

'Hallos! stop a minute!' cries Tom; 'there's a mistake. I need condoling with by sympathising woman, under my afflicting circumstances; but we're out in the figure. Change partners, Mooney.'

'Monster!' cries Tom's young lady, clinging to the Gifted.

'Miss!' says Tom. Is that your manners?'

'I abjure thee!' cries Tom's young lady, 'I renounce thee. I never will be thine. Thou,' she says to the Gifted, 'art the object of my first and all engrossing passion. Wrapt in thy sublime visions, thou hast not perceived my love; but, driven to despair, I now shake off the woman and avow it. Oh, cruel, cruel man!' With which reproach she laid her head upon the Gifted's breast, and put her arms about him in the tenderest manner possible, gentlemen.

'And I,' says the other young lady, in a sort of ecstasy, that made Tom sta t,—'I neverbe abjure my chosen husband too. Hear me, Goblin!'—this was to the Gifted—'Hear me! I hold thee in the deepest detestation. The maddening interview of this one night has filled my soul with love—but not for thee. It is for thee, for thee young man,' she cries to Tom. 'As Monk Lewis finely observes, Thomas, Thomas, I am thine, Thomas, Thomas, thou art mine: thine for ever, mine for ever!' With which words, she became very tender likewise.

'Tom and the Gifted, gentlemen, as you may believe, looked at each other in a very awkward manner, and with thoughts not at all complimentary to the two young ladies. As to the Gifted, I have heard Tom say often, that he was certain he was in a fit, and had it inwardly. 'Speak to me! oh, speak to me!' cries Tom's young lady to the Gifted.

'I don't want to speak to anybody,' he says, finding his voice at last, and trying to push her away. 'I think I had better go I'm—I'm frightened,' he says, looking about as if he had lost something.

'Not one look of love!' she cries.—'Hear me, while I declare—'

'I don't know how to look a look of love,' he says all in amaze. 'Don't declare anything. I don't want to hear anybody.'

'That's right!' cries the old gentleman, (who it seems had been listening). 'That's right! Don't hear her. Emma shall marry you to-morrow, my friend, whether she likes it or not, and she shall marry Mr. Grig.'

'Gentlemen, these words were no sooner out of his mouth than Galileo Isaac Newton Flamstead (who it seems had been listening too) darts in, and spinning round and round, like a young giant's top, cries, 'Let her. Let her. I'm fierce; I'm furious I give her leave. I'll never marry anybody after this—never. It isn't safe. She is the falsest of the false,' he cries, tearing his hair and gnashing his teeth; 'and I'll live and die a bachelor!'

'The little boy,' observed the Gifted, gravely, 'albeit of tender years, has spoken wisdom. I have been led to t e contemplation of womankind, and will not adventure on the troubled waters of matrimony.'

'What!' says the old gentleman, 'not marry my daughter! Won't you, Mooney? Not if I make her? Won't you? Won't you?

'No,' says Mooney, 'I won't. And if anybody asks me any more, I'll run away, and never come back again.'

'Mr. Grig,' says the old gentleman, 'the stars must be obeyed. You have not changed your mind because of a little girlish folly—h, Mr. Grig?'

'Tom, gentlemen, had had his eyes about him, and was pretty sure that all this was a device and trick of the waiting-maid, to put him off his inclination. He had seen her biding and skipping about the two doors, and had observed that a very little whispering from her pacified the Salamander directly.

'So,' thinks Tom, 'this is a plot—but it won't fit.'

'Eh, Mr. Grig?' says the old gentleman.

'Why, sir,' says Tom, pointing to the crucible, 'if the soup's nearly ready—'

'Another hour beholds the consummation of our labours,' returned the old gentleman.

'Very good,' says Tom, with a mournful air. 'It's only for two months, but I may as well be the richest man in the world for that time. I'm not particular. I'll take her, sir. I'll take her,'

'The old gentleman was in a rapture to find Tom still in the same mind, and drawing the young lady towards him by little and little, was joining their hands by main force, when all of a sudden, gentlemen, the crucible blew up with a great crash; everybody screams; the room is filled with smoke; and Tom, not knowing what may happen next, throws himself into a Fancy attitude, and says, 'Come on, if you're a man!' without addressing himself to anybody in particular.

'The labours of fifteen years!' says the old gentleman, clasping his hands and looking down upon the Gifted, who was saving the pieces, 'are destroyed in an instant!'—And I am told gentlemen, by the by, that this same philosopher's stone would have been discovered a hundred times at least, to speak within bounds, if it wasn't for the one unfortunate circumstance that the apparatus always blows up, when it's on the very point of succeeding.

'Tom turns pale when he hears the old gentleman expressing himself to this unpleasant effect, and stammers out that if it's quite agreeable to all parties, he would like to know exactly what has happened, and what change has really taken place in the prospects of that company.

'We have failed for the present, Mr Grig,' says the old gentleman, wiping his forehead, 'and I regret it the more, because I have invested my neice's five thousand pounds in this glorious speculation. But don't be cast down,' he says, anxiously—'in another fourteen years, Mr. Grig—'

'Oh!' cries Tom, letting the young lady's hand fall. 'Were the stars very positive about this union, sir?'

'They were,' says the old gentleman.

'I'm sorry to hear it,' Tom makes answer, 'for it's no go, sir.'

'No what?' cries the old gentleman.

'Go, sir,' says Tom, fiercely, 'I forbid the banns.' And with these words—which are the very words he used—he sat himself down in a chair, and, laying his head upon he table, thought with a secret grief what was to come to pass on that day two months.

'Tom always said, gentlemen, that that waiting-maid was the artfullest minx he had ever seen; and he left it in writing in this country when he went to colonise abroad, that he was certain in his own mind she and the Salamander had blown up the philosopher's stone on purpose, and to cut him out of his property. I believe Tom was in the right, gentlemen; but whether or no, she comes forward at this point, and says, 'May I speak, sir?' and the old gentleman answering, 'Yes, you may,' she goes on to say that 'the stars are no doubt quite right in every respect, but Tom is not the man.' And she says, 'Don't you remember, sir, that when the clock struck five this afternoon, you gave Master Galileo a rap on the head with your telescope, and told him to get out of the way?' 'Yes, I do,' says the old gentleman. 'Then,' says the waiting-maid, 'I say he's the man, and the prophecy is fulfilled.' The old gentleman staggers at this, as if somebody had hit him a blow on the chest, and cries, 'He! why, he's a boy!' Upon that, gentlemen, the Salamander cries out that he'll be twenty-one next Lady-day; and complains that his father has always been so busy with the sun round which the earth revolves, that he has never taken any notice of the son that revolves round him; and that he hasn't had a new suit of clothes since he was fourteen; and that he wasn't even taken out of nankeen frocks and trowsers till he was quite unpleasant in 'em; and touches on a good many more family matters to the same purpose. To make a long story short, gentlemen, they all talk together, and cry together, and remind the old gentleman that as to the noble family, his own grandfather would have been Lord Mayor if he hadn't died at a dinner the year before; and they show him by all kinds of arguments that if the cousins are married, the prediction comes true every way. At last, the old gentleman, being quite convinced, gives in; and joins their hands; and leaves his daughter to marry anybody she likes; and they are all well pleased; and the Gifted as well as any of them.

'In the middle of this little family party, gentlemen, sits Tom all the while, as miserable as you like. But when everything else is arranged, the old gentleman's daughter says, that their strange conduct was a little device of the waiting-maid's to disgust the lovers he had chosen for 'em, and will he forgive her? and if he will, perhaps he might even find her a husband—and when she says that, she looks uncommon hard at Tom. Then the waiting-maid says that, oh dear! she couldn't bear Mr. Grig should think she wanted him to marry her; and that she had even gone so far as to refuse the last lamplighter, who was now a literary character (having set up as a bill-sticker;) and that she hoped Mr. Grig would not suppose she was on her last legs by any means, for the baker was very strong in his attentions at that moment, and as to the butcher, he was frantic. And I don't know how much more she might have said, gentlemen (for, as you know, this kind of young women are rare ones to talk,) if the old gentleman hadn't cut in suddenly, and asked Tom if he'd have her, with ten pounds to recompense him for his loss of time and disappointment, and as a kind of bribe to keep the story secret.

'It don't much matter, sir,' says Tom, 'I ain't long for this world. Eight weeks of marriage, especially with this young woman, might reconcile me to my fate. I think,' he says, 'I could go off easy, after that.' With which he embraces her with a very dismal face, and groans in a way that might move a heart of stone—even of philosopher's stone.

'Egad,' says the old gentleman, 'that reminds me—this bustle put it out of my head—there was a figure wrong. He'll live to a green old age—eighty-seven at least!'

'How much, sir?' cries Tom.

'Eighty-seven!' says the old gentleman.

Without another word, Tom flings himself on the old gentleman's neck; throws up his hat; cuts a caper; defies the waiting-maid; and refers her to the butcher.

'"You won't marry her!" says the old gentleman, angrily.

'"A thousand lives after it!" says Tom. "I'd sooner marry a mermaid, with a small-tooth comb and looking-glass."

'"Then take the consequences," says the other.

'With those words—I beg your kind attention here, gentlemen, for it's worth your notice—the old gentleman with the fore-finger of his right hand in some liquor from the crucible that was spilt on the floor, and drew a small triangle on Tom's forehead. The room swam before his eyes, and he found himself in the watch-house.'

'Found himself where?' cried the vice, on behalf of the company generally.

'In the watch-house,' said the chairman.

'It was late at night, and he found himself in the very watch-house from which he had been let out that morning.'

'Did he go home?' asked the vice.

'The watch-house people rather objected to that,' said the chairman; 'so he stopped there that night, and went before the magistrate in the morning. 'Why, you're here again, are you?' says the magistrate, adding insult to injury; 'we'll trouble you for five shillings more, if you can conveniently spare the money.' Tom told him he had been enchanted, but it was of no use. He told the contractors the same, but they wouldn't believe him. It was very hard upon him, gentlemen, as he often said, for was it likely he'd go and invent such a tale? They shook their heads and told him he'd say anything but his prayers—as indeed he would; there's no doubt about that. It was the only imputation on his moral character that ever I heard of.'

Importance of Presence of Mind in a Family.

1. If a man faints, place him flat on his back, and let him alone.

2. If any poison is swallowed, drink instantly half a glass of cool water with a heaping teaspoonful each of common salt and ground mustard stirred into it; this vomits as soon as it reaches the stomach, but for fear some of the poison remains, swallow the white of one or two raw eggs, or drink a cup of hot coffee. The two being antidotes for a greater number of poisons than any dozen other articles known, with the advantage of their always being on hand; if not, a pint of sweet oil, or lard oil, or 'drippings,' or melted butter, or lard, are good substitutes, especially if they vomit quickly.

3. The best thing to stop the bleeding of a moderate cut instantly, is to cover it over profusely with cobweb, or flour and salt, half and half.

4. If the blood comes from a wound by jets or spirts, be spry, or the person will die in a few minutes, because an artery is severed; tie a handkerchief loosely around, near the part between the wound and the heart; put a stick betwe n the handkerchief and the skin and twist it around until the blood ceases to flow; keep it there until the doctor comes; if in a position where the handkerchief cannot be used press the thumb on a spot near the wound, between the wound and the heart; increase the pressure until the bleeding ceases, but do not lessen the pressure for an instant until the physician arrives so as to glue up the wound by the coagulation or cooling of the hardening blood.

5. If the body is tired, rest; if the brain is tired, sleep.

6. The three best medicines in the world are warmth, abstinence and repose.

A WORD TO APPRENTICES.—Apprenticeship is the most important stage of life through which a mechanic is called to pass; it is emphatically the spring season of his days; the time when he is to reap in after years. If he spare no labor in its proper culture, he is sure of obtaining an abundant harvest; but, if, in the culture of the mental soil, he follow the example of many in tilling the earth, and carelessly and negligently does his work, like them he will find the seeding time past, and his ground bringing forth only weeds and briars. Let the young apprentice bear in mind, when he commences learning any business, that all hopes of success in the future are doomed to fade away like the morning mist, unless he improves the golden season. Let him bear in mind that he can become master of his business only through the closest application, and the most persevering industry; and that unless he does master it, he may bid farewell to all visions of future prospect and success. The apprentice is the foundation of the great mechanical edifice, and surely if the foundation of a structure be not firm, the structure itself crumbles and falls to the earth. Then young friends, persevere, be studious and attentive; study well all the branches of your business, both practical and theoretical—and you will not fail, when your time shall come to take an active part in life, to be of use, not only in your own particular business, but in society.

THOUGHTS FOR YOUNG MEN.—Costly apparatus and splendid cabinets have no magical power to make scholars. In all circumstances, as made under God, the master of his own fortune, so he it the former of his own mind. The Creator has so constituted the human intellect, that it can grow only by its own action, and by its own action of most certainly and necessarily grows. Every man must, therefore, in an important sense, educate himself. His books and teachers are but helps; the work is his. A man is not educated until he has the ability to summon, in case of emergency, all his mental power in vigorous exercise to effect his proposed object. It is not the man who has seen the most, or has read most, who can do this; such a one is in danger of being borne down, like a beast of burden, by an over-loaded mass of other men's thoughts. Nor is it the man that can boast merely of native vigor and capacity. The greatest of all the warriors that went to the siege of Troy, had not the pre-eminence because nature had given him strength and he carried the largest bow, but because self discipline taught him how to bend it.

Remarkable Oratorical Feat.

The papers on the Pacific coast are commenting upon an extraordinary exhibition of oratory and endurance that has lately been made in the Vancouver Island Legislature. The feat was performed by Mr. Leonard McClure of talking seventeen hours without pausing or sitting down.—The Examiner says of this effort:

"It may easily be supposed that Mr. McClure's speech could not have been a masterpiece of oratory, nor is it likely that his inducement was greater than that which moved Edward Burke when, at the trial of Warren Hastings, after pouring out for fourteen hours a torrent of impassioned eloquence, the majestic mind collapsed under the forces of physical fatigue, and he fell fainting in the arms of Sheridan. But we know of no instance of stubborn tenacity equal to that of Mr. McClure's and the cause was one which should make him famous in the annals of the British colonies.

"A year ago a large quantity of land in the above Victoria was seized by the government for arrears of taxes, and was by it held on the understanding, expressed and published, that the owners could have and repossess their lots by paying the taxes due within a twelvemonth after their seizure. But it became known a few days before the expiration of the allotted term that a plot was on foot, to be matched by the government and backed by a venal majority in the House of Assembly, to pass a bill authorizing the executive to repudiate its contracts with the land owners, refusing to accept payment of arrears, and seizing upon and retaining permanently the disputed lots. Two men in the House opposed the measure. Their names were Amos de Colmes and Leonard McClure. They knew that they had nothing to hope from their compeers or from the government, and they prepared themselves accordingly. The House had made up its mind, with these two exceptions, to rush through this obnoxious bill on the day before the twelvemonth expired.

"There was but one way to prevent this, and it was adopted resolutely. On the House being opened, Mr. McClure rose to his feet, the time being noon, and kept the floor until five o'clock next morning. For seventeen hours he continued to speak, while every effort was made by the purchased majority to put him down and tire him out. With a merciless unanimity they refused to allow him to lean against the table, to put a foot upon a chair for a moment to relieve himself from the wearisomeness of his position by resting his hand upon anything, or to speak, in short, in any other than a rigidly exact and unsupported attitude. During the whole of the time they relieved each other at intervals, going out and procuring refreshments as they needed, and always leaving a quorum in the House. When McClure sank exhausted in his seat, as the light of another morning was stealing into the windows of the Assembly House, De, Comos rose and for the remaining seven hours of the twenty-four talked against time. On rising, amid the groans and hisses of the disgusted and exhausted majority, he exclaimed with more force than refinement, that it was useless for honorable members to evince their malice in that manner, for he had got up with the determination to talk, if necessary, until the angel Gabriel sounded the last trumpet."

Heroic powers of endurance were not quite so severely tested, but the end was achieved, and when the clock struck twelve the worn and wearied champions of honesty looked round with unspeakable exultation upon the blank faces of a bought and beaten Assembly."

The Position of the Education Question.

The education question is in a strange state at present. One ministerial paper says the interests of the Protestant minority, which were betrayed here, will be secured by the arrangements made in England by Mr. Galt. Another says that all the terms are arranged, and that Mr. Galt had the drawing of them up. Another (the Mirror) says that nothing of the kind has taken place, and that Mr. Cartier's pledge to protect Protestant interests will be redeemed without aid from Mr. Galt,—not in the way indicated, but in some other way not explained; and, furthermore, that he will at the same time attend to the interests of the Roman Catholic minority of Upper Canada, thus rendering Mr. McGee's volunteer protectorship over these interests quite superfluous.

The Upper Canada organs of the Government say that no interference in England with their school laws will be tolerated,—a fact which renders the True Witness dubious as to Mr. Cartier's ability to protect the Romanists of Western Canada. Besides Mr. Cartier pledged himself to permit no change in the terms of Confederation.

The fact is, we believe, that little weight can be attached to the promises either of Mr. Cartier or Mr. Galt on this subject, as both of them may at any time be checkmated or dismissed by the priest power, which in this country stands behind all politics and all political leaders. And even though pledges were obtained from the hierarchy itself, they would, as Dr. Ryerson has testified, be quite unreliable. Our opinion is, that Protestants here have dallied with political Delilahs of the Galt stamp till those they have trusted are ready to exclaim, "The Philistines be upon thee!" and to send us to grind in whatever prison house the hierarchy may appoint. There is only one danger in all this, namely, that as in Samson's case, the house may come down about the ears of all concerned.—Montreal Witness.

Rumored Fenian Expedition.

The New York Tribune of Saturday says it is understood that Stephens has left America—his friends suppose, with the intention of beginning the revolution in Ireland he has so often promised would take place before the end of the year. The Tribune says it is difficult to see what hope Mr. Stephens can have of success. We learn from the Chicago Republican that orders have been received by all the Fenian officers in the west who owe allegiance to Stephens, directing them to leave for New York without delay and be prepared to cross the ocean. It is said that a detachment of these men will take passage in Cunard steamers and when out in wide ocean seize upon the vessels. It is also expected to ship what will be called boxes of machinery on board these steamers, which, when the ship is captured and cut at sea will prove to be fire-arms, cannon, &c. It is almost to be hoped that these ruffians will make an attempt of this kind and add piracy to their other crimes. They will then most assuredly obtain their deserts in the shape of a halter.

Le Canada, of Ottawa, says a despatch has been received, announcing the assent by Her Majesty to the Bill of last session, for delaying the Legislative Council elections, which should have come off this fall.

MUNICIPAL.

Some time ago we gave a reprint of the principal portions of the new law, as affecting our municipal institutions, and as the time is near when some of the provisions of the law will have to be carried out in the election of Reeves, we would again call the attention of our readers to those portions:—

A meeting of the electors shall take place for the nomination of candidates for the offices of Reeves and Deputy Reeves, Councillors and Police Trustees in Townships, Incorporated Villages and Police Villages at noon, on the last Monday but one in December, annually, at such place therein as shall be fixed by By-law.

The Clerk must give six days notice of such meeting, and shall be chairman during proceedings.

If only the requisite number of candidates be proposed and seconded, after one hour the Clerk shall declare such candidates duly elected; if more than the necessary number be proposed, and a poll be demanded by a candidate or elector, the meeting shall be adjourned till the first Monday in January, when a poll shall be opened at 9 o'clock in the morning and kept open till five, p. m., and no longer. There will, therefore, be but one day of polling, so that all who desire to exercise that right must make an effort to do it on the first Monday in January.

The Clerk or Chairman must post up, on the day following the nomination, in the Clerk's office, the names of candidates, and also provide certified voter's lists for each Returning Officer in the municipality, and provide them poll books.

The qualification of Candidates, in Townships, is $400 freehold, or $800 leasehold; in incorporated villages, freehold $600, or leasehold $1200; in Towns, freehold $800, or leasehold $1600.

No person can vote who had not paid his taxes before the 16th day of December next preceding the election.

From the law it would appear that voters must have paid their taxes before voting, but the candidate's not having done so will be no obstacle in the way of his election.

In Towns and Cities every elector may vote in each ward.

In Townships and Villages divided into electoral divisions, no elector shall vote in more divisions than one.

The qualification of a voter for municipal purposes is in Towns, the actual value of $400 in real property whether freehold or leasehold or partly both; in villages, $300; in Townships, $100.

For Parliamentary elections: in Towns, $400; in Villages, $300; in Townships, $200.

The Delegation to England.

Messrs. McDonald, Cartier, McDougall, Howland, Galt and McGee are to form the delegation to England to watch one another. What a pitiable spectacle they present to the world; Galt going to watch McGee and he in turn going to watch Galt. They cannot trust educational matters in the hands of the other four. Mr. Cartier cannot be believed by Mr. Galt and Mr. Galt cannot be trusted by Mr. McGee. How will they work together? Might it not be truly remarked to them, "See that ye fall not out by the way."

If the Imperial Parliament does not put a check-mate on them, such a combination of incongruities must prove a failure.

It is announced that a document is to be published as soon as the delegates leave, setting forth the course to be pursued by them in London. The Globe justly remarks:—"The cool impudence of this is its most striking characteristic. That is to say, these delegates having concocted a scheme whereby the terms of the Quebec resolutions and the decision of the Canadian Parliament are to be set at naught—they will graciously permit the people to learn the nature of this scheme to deprive them of their rights by-and-bye when the delegates are fairly on their way to carry out their plot. So long as they are within reach of popular indignation and popular remonstrance, Ministers are careful to conceal the plot. But once out of hearing, they will allow the scheme to be made public—allow the country to know the precise way in which the outrage is to be effected—in the hope, perhaps, that public indignation will have subsided before they return. If they have any such hope, they will find themselves grievously mistaken."

MEXICO.

Matters look very dark in this benighted place. Maximilian has, it is said, resigned his charge into the hands of a French General, named Baizaine, and is on his way to Europe. All his expectations unrealized and frustrated. The country still unsettled and without much hope of quiet. There are prospects of an election for president, and all the tumult consequent upon such a state, in a country where everything is completely unhinged. The American eye is directed towards the country with an idea to annexation, no doubt, and it may be that this will be attempted by force. There may be a struggle with the United States also, before they give themselves over to their rule.—They are very unsettled at present indeed.

Another Waterloo Hero Gone to His Rest.

It becomes our painful duty to record the decease of one of our most respected citizens, Andrew James Fraser, Esq., better known as Captain Fraser. Mr. Fraser was born in Roxboroughshire, Scotland, in the year 1796 and consequently at the time of his decease was in the 71st year of his age. At the age of 15 years he entered the British army and served in the 42nd Highlanders, as Lieutenant, in which Regiment both his father and grand-father had served. He was present with his regiment at all the great battles during the Peninsular war, which crowned the Duke of Wellington's campaign with success. He bore a distinguished share in the several battles of Salamanca, Orthese, at Burgos, at Vittoria, Nive Nivelle, Pyrenees, Toulouse, Quarire Bras and Waterloo, and his regiment in defending the villages of Santa Monline, and Quaire Bras, lost their Colonel—Macard, and was reduced to less than one-tenth of its original number. Mr. Frazer received medals for Vittoria and Waterloo. He was with the allies during the occupation of Paris, after which he retired on half-pay. Afterwards he served in South America, but on leaving the service this time he came to Canada, and on his passage got wrecked off Cape Race. He afterwards settled in Vernlam, whence he removed to this town, where he has resided for upwards of 20 years.

During our Canadian troubles he served in the Canadian Sedentary Militia, in which he was Captain. For many years he has acted as magistrate, in which office he was amiable and obliging, often endeavoring to get disagreements settled without costs to the parties. Mr. Frazer was in his usual health on Saturday, but took ill of English cholera on Sunday evening, by which disease he was carried off on Tuesday, expiring about 2 o'clock, p. m. He was highly respected by every class of our citizens. His remains will be interred today at 2.30, p. m.

He leaves a disconsolate wife to mourn her loss to whom he had been married upwards of forty years.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the St Andrew's Society, held at the American Hotel, on Wednesday evening last, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

W. A. Scott, Esq., President.
D. Sutherland, Esq., 1st Vice-President.
Alex. Graham, Esq., 2nd Vice-President.
James Jack, Esq., 3rd Vice-President.
Alex. Smith, Esq., Treasurer.
Revds. J. M. Roger and J. Gilmour, Chaplains.
Drs. Harvey and McNabb, Physicians.
Chas. Cameron, Secretary.

COMMITTEE FOR TOWN.—James Hall, Jas. Campbell, Robt. Romaine, M. Miller, John Thomson, R. D. Ewing, John Moffatt, John Carnegie, jr., John Erskine, L. McGreggor, John Wilvie, R. Taylor, Esq'rs.

COMMITTEE FOR COUNTY.—George Tully, Monaghan; R. Laing, do.; Thos. Telford, Ennismore; M. Sanderson, Smith; T. Tully, do.; Robt. Brodie, Douro; Jas. Miller, Otonabee; Wm. Laing, do.; W. E. Rexburgh, Asphodel; H. M. Fowlds, do.; W. Woods, Harvey; Alex. Esplin, Dummer; John Ludgate, Ashburnham.

A vote of thanks was tendered to James Hall, Esq., Past-president, and D. McDonald, Esq., Treasurer, for the manner in which they had discharged the duties of their offices.

The meeting then adjourned to meet on Monday evening next, to take into consideration the propriety of celebrating St. Andrew's Day in a proper manner.

French Canadian Missionary Society.

A public meeting will be held, on behalf of the above society, at the Canada Presbyterian Church, on Friday, 16th November, 1866, at 7.30, p. m., when the objects and plans of the society will be fully explained, and several addresses delivered. A Collection will be taken up in aid of the funds of said society. All interested in the Evangelisation of the French Canadians, are earnestly invited to attend.

Personal.

We learn, with much pleasure, that Mr. W. M. Roger, son of the Rev. J. M. Roger of this Town, has received and accepted a call to the church at Perth, and will be inducted on the 25th instant. We further learn that this is one of the best congregations outside of the large cities. Mr Roger is a young man, full of promise, and likely to be useful in the ministry to which he is devoting himself. He carries with him the best wishes and prayers of an extensive acquaintance for his future success.

Fenian Trials.

On Saturday last, Wm. Hayden was placed in the dock and tried for being with the Fenians at Fort Erie. The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged.—The prisoner seemed perfectly regardless of the consequences of his position.

On Monday, William Duggan was tried and acquitted. The prisoner, who is about 40 years of age, has a wife who was in Court during the trial with a young baby in her arms. She no doubt felt the position in which her husband was placed, and rejoiced on his being discharged.

Labrador.

It is said that owing to the failure of certain Fisheries in Labrador many of the inhabitants who depended on that branch of industry for a living have come to want, and are in a starving condition. The prospects, it is said, are too fearful to contemplate. Many families have only one or two barrels of flour for their winter supply, which is considered not enough to last till winter.—Exertions are being made to obtain supplies for the sufferers. Government has granted the steamer Napoleon for the transportation of such supplies to the place.

By a letter from a gentleman at Fenelon Falls, we learn that Mrs. Howie, of the Township of Summerville committed suicide on Wednesday morning last, by shooting herself. It is believed that she was laboring under a fit of insanity at the time, as she has had to be confined on that account heretofore.

The Committee of the Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the donation of $19.75 from the gentlemen of the Grand Jury on the occasion of their visiting the Home, on Wednesday, the eighth of November, 1866.

We are requested to state that the Rev. Wm. Williams, new connexion minister of Caramville, will lecture on Temperance this evening in the Good Templars' Hall, Scott's Block. Chair to be taken at half past seven.

ASSIZES.

THURSDAY.

The case of the Queen vs. Thomas Hill, John [illegible] Robert Hall, the father and two [illegible] called, and the prisoner placed in the dock. Neither of the two other sons was present, being in appreciable, but the younger one, Robert Hill, does not bear the impress of a vicious tendency, or disposition. The charges were, that they did beat, cut and wound one Samuel Clysdale, with intent to wound, to maim, and to do grievous bodily harm to him. Mr. Weller prosecuted and S. Smith and J. Duggan defended. From the evidence given it appeared that John Hill and a son of Mr. Clysdale's had been at variance the day of the assault and had had some disagreement, and that afterwards about dark of same day, the two Hills had gone to Clysdale's house, and by some means had entered Mr. Clysdale who is an old man, to get out to see what it was. On his finding who were there he offered to shake hands with John Hill, when immediately Hill struck him with a scythe on the shoulder, but the stroke glided down his arm. John Hill then made a dash at George Clysdale, and in wrestling to get the scythe George Clysdale received some severe cuts on his hand. During this time Robert Hill inflicted seven cuts of a scythe on the head of old Mr. Clysdale, three of which left indentations in the skull, also some cuts on the left arm when have left it powerless, the old man having to carry it in a sling, although this took place on the 28th of June last.

Samuel Clysdale, examined.—Knows the prisoners, they live in 8th concession and on lot 20, Asphodel. He (Clysdale) lives on lot 19 in the same concession. Saw prisoner on 28th June last, about 10 o'clock; heard a voice to yard barn-yard; was in act of going to bed at time; wife of witness was in bed; witness was partly undressed; went out to see what it was. Saw two men at gate, without coats; recognised John Hill and Robert Hill, and asked them what was up? Received an angry reply. Witness reached to shake hands with John Hill; told him to go home and he would make all right in the morning. Witness feared nothing at this time. Immediately, however, he got a stroke of the scythe; by dodging, it came on his shoulder. John Hill then plunged at George Clysdale, son of witness, who had come out by this time, and Robert Hill made a dash at witness; struck him with a scythe also; stunned him, and cut him on head and arm in several places. A cut on the elbow left his arm useless. George Clysdale almost lost his life from the blows and cuts given by John Hill.

To Judge—Saw the scythes; both had scythes, but one got his away with him.—Believe they had logs on to protect their hands.

To S. Smith—There was no spite between the families on part of witness. Never had a quarrel with them. Lent them anything they asked, and had always lived as good neighbours.

Cross examined—Answered as above.—Gate was not far from house. The whole took place inside of a few minutes. George had nothing in his hand, to best of his knowledge. Daughter of witness was present, he believed, part of time. Did not hear her say to George Clysdale not to kill Johnny Hill, but to let him up. Suppose George defended himself. Saw Robert strike George while he was down, and while John Hill was striking him also. Heard Robert Hill say he could whip George Clysdale or any of the family. Saw the old man, Thos. Hill, that night. He fired a shot after the fight. The contents of gun fell round the people at the door.

To Mr. Weller—Hills were in limits of the gate. Heard the old man's voice, and then heard shot.

Geo. Clysdale, examined.—His evidence corroborated the evidence of his father in every particular. Witness showed his hands where they had been cut in holding the scythe to save himself. The scythe was also shown, and had a lug on one end to protect the hands of holder, and showed signs of a fierce contest by being bent up. Witness put John Hill down in self-defence; did not strike. Saw Hill strike Samuel Clysdale. Took one scythe from the Hills; the one produced in court is it.

Sarah Ann Clysdale, daughter of first witness, examined. Evidence same as two former.

John Morrow, Jr., sworn. To Mr. Weller; Recollected the night of the disturbance at Clysdale's. Saw prisoners about 9 o'clock that evening. Believed the quarrel was about ten o'clock. Spoke to them as they proceeded towards Norwood. John Hill had two scythes at time; asked them where they were going; unders ood them to be looking for George Clysdale, to beat him.

To S. Smith.—They were about a half a mile from their own house; the boys on foot; the old man on horse-back. Did not see George Clysdale that night.

John Buck, examined. Recollected the night of disturbance at Clysdales. Saw John and Robert Hill on road near dusk; near Mr. Armstrong's. John was making a noize; asked what was the matter: John said he would kill Clysdales. Calling one of them some hard names. Hill was sober at the time, at least he appeared to be.

To Mr. Duggan.—Could not say positively that he was sober.

John McMillan, sworn. Recollected the night of disturbance. Saw all the prisoners that evening. Saw them about ten o'clock. Heard a noise at Clysdale's; was at Hill's house at the time, sitting on a log, when noise was heard. Old Mr. Hill took off his coat, and called for a gun. Did not remember what he said, except that he thought it was a fight. Did not remember hearing Hill say who he thought were fighting.—Prisoner Thomas Hill, called for gun twice: on getting it ran towards Clysdale's. Witness followed part of way, but fearing to get into a "scrape," stopped. Heard a shot. Waited to Hill's came up after the fight; asked them what was up, understood there was a fight; heard the old man say he had let "pelt" at the villians—meaning a shot.

To Mr. Smith—This was about 10 o'clock. Met him about half way between his own house and Clysdales. The sons were with him and the wife was behind following. Did not see John Hill after the fight, but had seen him before it. Did not know that he was cut.

William Nichol, sworn. Remember the night of the fight. Saw the Hills before it, about dark; they were talking about old stories. Both John and Robert were present. Witness was at Mr. Hill's that night. On hearing the noise, the old man took off his coat and called for the gun. Witness told him not to go. John McMillan went part of the way but turned. Witness and McMillan sat down by the way-side, but fearing that if seen that they might be considered listening and get shot, they got up. Heard old man tell McMillan he had let "pelt" at the villains. Saw John Hill, did not see the old man. Heard him. This was about half way to Clysdale's.

James Hennessy, sworn.—Corroborated former witnesses.

Dr. Ford, of Norwood, sworn. Recollected attending to the Clysdale's.—They came for him about ten o'clock.—Found old Mr. Clysdale contused on left side of the head. Might have been done with a scythe, but thinks it was done with a stone. There was also incised wounds on left forearm and scratches. Has recovered from wounds of head, but will never get over the cuts in the arm. The cut was 3¼ inches long by 1 inch deep. Had seven cuts in head—laying it open to the skull; three of these left indentions in the skull.

To Mr Duggan.—The wounds, if properly cared for, would not cause death.

Robert Armstrong, examined. Saw Hills and George Clysdale at his "bee." Saw them in the evening; they left about dark. Saw Robert Hill about 9 o'clock, when he asked if George Clysdale was at his (Armstrong's) place; did not tell what he wanted. Did not say he was looking for Clysdale.

Mrs. Hill being called for defence would not be allowed to give evidence for her sons, for fear she might say something about her husband, for whom she could not be a witness.

Here Mr. Duggan remarked, that as far as Thomas Hill was concerned there was no case against him, and asked his Lordship to dismiss him or to give directions to that effect. Mr. Weller, for the crown, addressed the jury. Mr. Duggan objected. Objection overruled. Mr. Weller, however, only summed up the evidence, leaving it to the jury to give a decision.

Mr. Duggan addressed the jury on behalf of prisoners, asking them after due consideration to acquit Thomas Hill and to bring in a verdict of common assault against John and Robert.

The judge charged in favour of acquitting the old man, but thought the other case was more aggravated. He summed up the evidence and then left the matter to the jury. They acquitted the old man, who shortly after appeared in Court; and found the two younger Hills guilty.

Strickland vs. Nicholls and Hall.—This was a case in which Messrs. Strickland had agreed to take out saw logs of a certain quality and size for Messrs. Nicholls & Hall at one dollar a standard.

The plaintiffs set forth that they took out 1,300 standards, or 1,800 logs, according to their own culler's report, and that Messrs. Nicholls & Hall had paid considerable on them, $1,114.74.

Messrs. Nicholls & Hall set forth that when they sent a culler, he found only 1,746 logs—some having got out of the boom, and that these mounted only to 1,092 standards of good logs, but that there were some small logs and culls for which they were willing to allow half price, and on this showing, claimed having paid all but about $4.

The Jury gave a verdict for plaintiff for 1,300, standard. The money paid on logs was admitted, bal. to be paid. Smith for plaintiff; Dennistoun for defendant.

Griffith vs. Hall.—This was an action for malicious arrest.

Judge declined to hear it, because there was a demurrer on record.

Richardson vs. Canada West Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company.—Fairbairn & Patterson for plaintiff; Smith & H. Cameron for defendants. This was a case in which Wm. Wood, the real plaintiff, sought to recover the amount of a policy which had been transferred to him on purchasing some property which afterwards was burnt. The property was in the Township of Harvey. Richardson being the or ginal owner, and in whose name the action had to be brought. This case was tried before and went against the Company. The Company then set up the plea that it was fired by the plaintiff and asked for a verdict on this account. James Wood (brother to Wm. Wood) and his wife testified to William being at their place that evening at 7 o'clock, and again on his way home from Buckhorn, at half past 8 to 9 o'clock. Another witness testified to having seen him near Buckhorn on his way home about 8 o'clock, and several witnesses testified that he was at home at 9.30. The fire was seen about this time, and parties who were stopping at his place for the night were out looking to see what it was when he came home from his brothers. The night was dark. Mr. Wood and several others started for the fire; when they got the length the dwelling was too far gone and the barn was in flames. Some, as is usual at fires, commenced pulling the end out of the barn to save the rest of the building. Some advised throwing clay or manure on the flames, and of course with many men there were many minds. Mr. Wood sent for pails but when they came they were useless. Mr. Wood, to some of the witnesses, appeared to act very coolly, as they wondered why he did not pull the end out of the barn, &c., and in consequence blamed him for the deed. Others thought that from the first he appeared cool, too much so for the occasion, and some of the witnesses evidently had some old spite. None of them testified to his having been near the place, not even on the lot, not with in a quarter of a mile of it; but he was sworn to have been at his brother's place at 7, at Buckhorn near 8, and at his brothers at 8.30, shortly after at home at 9. But because he did not do every thing that every one advised the verdict was given against him. This case occupied over a day of the court.

Thompson vs. Bennett.—This was a case in which defendant, Bennett, had rented a property from one Joseph Thompson, who held a deed, in trust, of the property for the infant child of one Vanston, who had been married to a daughter of John Thompson, but who separated for some cause, Vanston giving a deed in trust for the benefit of his own child. John Thompson, for neglect of duty in regard to the property, had been sued for the rents not collected, and judgement obtained against him: he then applied to Bennet for the rent. Bennett set forth that he had a lease from Joseph Thompson. At the same time, Vanstone's solicitor notified Bennet not to pay rent to any one but him, and thus, pestered on every side, he knew not what to do, but said he would pay the rent to the lawful claimant when determined.—At this period John Thompson sues for the rent for five years. Bennet shows a lease from Joseph Thompson, at $36 for first year, $40 for second year, and $50 yearly until the child should come to age. The jury gave a verdict for plaintiff for $50 a year for the five years.

Knapp vs. Graham et al.—This is a case in which the pit sought to recover damages for numbering him with the Jolly Dogs, as a party who would not pay their just accounts, while they had spent the money which they had obtained at certain nigger concerts, which they held in Lindsay, Omemee and in Peterborough, celebrating for them, but because they did not prove he was an initiated member. Knapp got $40 damages.

Dunford vs. Wilson.—This was an action of trespass, for cutting logs on Dunford's property in the Township of Dummer. Weller for plaintiff, George Dunsford for defendant. Verdict for defendant.

The Court broke up at 5 o'clock on Saturday, leaving about one half of the cases unheard.

Grammar and Unio. School Board.

There was a meeting of the Board on Tuesday evening. Present—the chairman, Col. Haultain and Messrs. Gilmour, Conter, Stevenson, Lundy, Cameron, Dumble, Helm and Dr. Poole. Absent—Mr. Clinton and Dr. McCrea.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A letter was read from Mr. Griffin, teacher, tendering his resignation and wishing to be released at the end of the year, for the purpose of attending college. His resignation was accepted and the Secretary directed to advertise for a teacher to take his place.

A petition from all the teachers was received, asking for monthly payments instead of quarterly ones, as heretofore. After some discussion it was agreed to lay the matter over to next meeting of the Board, in order to give time for consideration, and to see what extra expenditure it would entail.

The Report of the visiting committee for past month was read and received. Also one from the committee on property, which was also received.

Some discussion arose over the petition of the teachers and also over the reports, which was not of such importance as to report it.

The Board adjourned to next regular night of meeting.

TOWN COUNCIL.

November 12th, 1866.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—The Mayor and Messrs. Burnham, Ormond, Stevenson, Doherty, Millar, Cox and Chamberlain.

A Communication from J. Riely informing the Council that the Corporation of the City of Hamilton has an excellent fire engine and a hook and ladder carriage for sale, cheap.

Petitions were read from S. J. Carver asking for a reduction of his income tax; from Mrs. Haultain, praying that the taxes on the Protestant Home be remitted; from Mrs. Primo and Mrs. Holmes, asking for a remission of taxes, these were referred to the court of Revision.

Mr. Ormond informed the Council that Mr. Sheridan was present and he wished to bring before the Council the state of the Otonabee bridge. On motion both Mr. Sheridan and Mr. Clark were heard on the matter of the bridge.

Mr. Burnham introduced a By-law for authorizing the Mayor to subscribe 10 shares of $10 each in the Bridge Company at Wallace's Point, which was read a third time.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, the Council adjourned for 2 weeks.

A New Religious Paper is Cobourg.—We have been favored with a number of the Observer, a paper commencing its career in Cobourg, under the auspices, we believe, of the Bible Christian denomination. It is a nice little sheet, and contains a fair share of reading matter, both religious and secular. It is neatly printed, at the Star office, and begins life with strong hopes and fair promises of success. We wish it may succeed. The people of our sister town and vicinity, cannot lack for reading matter and news: there are now five papers published there.

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner.

Sir,—Since writing the letter that appeared in your issue of last week, relative to the importance of Savings Banks, and the existence of one in connection wit the Branch of the Ontario Bank in this town, I have been informed by the manager of the Toronto Bank, that he has, during the past two years, carried on by special deposits, a system practically the same as that of the Savings Bank, so that small deposits may be made and withdrawn at the pleasure of the depositor, and interest at 4 per cent allowed, as in the Savings Bank alluded to.

As to the advantages offered respectively by the two systems, I leave depositors themselves to ascertain. My object has been to raise my voice against an overdone credit system, and to draw attention to institutions of acknowledged advantage to the great majority of every community.

Yours,
FRED. W. HAULTAIN.

Peterboro, 13th Nov., 1866.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Sir,—It is our painful duty to communicate the sad intelligence of one of the most appalling occurrences that has ever disturbed the rural monotony in this locality. On Wednesday last the family of Mr. Howie, of Somerville, was thrown into the deepest as well as the most unexpected grief, by Mrs. Howie committing suicide. The details are as follows:—Early in the morning Mr. Howie and his two sons went to attend to some out door duties. Three younger members of the family were in bed. Meanwhile Mrs. Howie, who appeared as well as usual, was preparing breakfast. In a few minutes the father and sons were summoned into the house by the report of a gun; when one of the latter who was chopping wood at the door, arrived his mother was breathing her last, having shot herself with a gun loaded with buck shot that hung on the wall. The contents of the gun entered the abdomen. She expired almost instantaneously without a groan or sigh.

The occurrence caused the greatest consternation among the sympathising neighbors and acquaintances in whose estimation both Mr. and Mrs. Howie stood very high—the latter being revered, by everybody who knew her, as an humble and blameless christian, indeed, she was pre-eminent for piety and kind deeds—a Dorcas—among her neighbors. Though she had recovered from a paroxysm of insanity five or six months ago, still, it is believed that she committed the fatal deed during a temporary alteration of intellect.

Lakefield English Church Bazaar.

The Ladies of Lakefield purpose holding a Bazaar in the course of the ensuing summer, with the object of paying a portion of the debt ($1000) incurred by the building of their new Church. They give publicity thus early of their intention as the Bazaar ground is, as they believe, at present unoccupied, and they entertain the hope of enlisting the sympathy and the co-operation of their neighbours in the good work they have in hand. They had intended having recourse to a similar appeal on the purses of their friends during the present year, but several other Church Bazaars having been advertised to take place in Peterboro, they thought it only seemly as well as prudent to give way to the County Town, to do what in them lay to assist at those demonstrations, and to defer their own appeal—an appeal they now confidently expect will not be made in vain.

Contributions will be thankfully received by any of the Ladies of the congregation.

COM.

The Sectarian School Question.

In a matter of such great importance, and where the worst use may be made of popular misconceptions, is it not desirable that the people of Canada should have information more definite than those unauthorized and conflicting statements? It would be well if the Ministry, by some official memorandum, public speech, or authorized statement, would make public fully the true state of the case. If these suspicions of undue interference with the school matters are unfounded, as we now feel confident they are they should be speedily dispelled, to the end that the public may repose the necessary confidence in the Administration. A timely announcement of the ministerial policy would perhaps save some people the expense and trouble of going to England as a private deputation to secure the conservation of our school system in which they feel so warm an interest; and it would besides allay an excitement which is being daily stimulated by the organs of the opposition.—Kingston News.

A Sad Tale.—Last Monday night, at a late hour, a sick boy named Kelley arrived at the G. T. Station here, by train from the east, having been dismissed from the Hospital at Kingston as incurable, and sent home without any one to care for him on the way. The watchman of the night was unable to get him in for the night at any place, the public houses being all closed; but kindly remained with him in the waiting room at the G. T. Station till daylight, when medical aid was procured. It was, however, too late to be of any service; he died about an hour after. As deceased was on his way to Peterborough when death overtook him, a message was despatched to that town, announcing his death and making inquiries as to his relatives. The reply was to the effect that his mother was in jail, and had no funds on hand, on receipt of which the body was interred at the expense of the Benevolent Society. The conduct of the authorities of the Kingston Hospital in this matter is inexplicable. To send away a sick boy, apparently about fourteen years old, who was at the time suffering from disease so far advanced as to be pronounced incurable—to send him on a journey like that—was inhuman and unnatural, and those who did it are deserving of the severest censure.—Port Hope Guide.

A long article in the Courier de St Hyacinthe, describes the remarkable liberality and self-denial of Widow Blais, of the parish of St. Pierre Rivière du Sud, who erected a convent for the nuns of the "Precious Blood," at St. Hyacinthe.—She had before given most of her property to a religious institution, but having four thousand dollars left, she devoted it to the object above-mentioned, and only sought a small chamber in the convent in which to finish her days. She died, however, at her home on the 9th ult., and there was a great funeral service on the 27th, over her heart, which was sent to the convent of St. Hyacinthe.

The Cattle plague in Britain has come to an end after destroying upwards of two hundred thousand animals,—the aggregate value of which must have been, we suppose, considerably upwards of a million sterling. It is estimated that about five per cent of the cattle of England perished in this dreadful murrain. No cause or clue could be discovered for this disease, which was very unequal and irregular in its visitations to various parts of the country. Ireland suffered very little.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough. Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, and followed, and the little fellow lost his reason, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

"There is something peculiarly attractive in a horse. His intelligent eye and ear, his lofty carriage, his free and graceful motion, his vast strength, his obedient temper, and his inoffensive use, all endear him to us. We love to look at his fine proportions, and take in the inspiration of his energy and power, but it is only when the horse is properly cared for—when he is free from disease or unsoundness of any kind that he will exhibit these points of attraction, and without which he is of but little value. A package of "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," should be in possession of every man who owns a horse, to be used in case of emergency. Don't fail to get it.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

PROSPECTUS OF 'MONTREAL WITNESS' FOR 1867.

Daily Witness.....$3 per an.
Montreal Witness (Semi weekly)....$1 per an.
Weekly Witness.....$1 per an.
Canadian Messenger.....25c per cb.
All strictly in advance, and the papers stop unless subscription be renewed.

On the 31st December, 1866, the Montreal Witness will have completed its twenty-first year, a period sufficient to render its character and objects generally known.

The Witness is devoted to the best interests of the people of Canada, temporal and eternal. It fearlessly grapples with oppression, infidelity, Intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and public evils of every kind. It is connected with no party or denomination, and consequently has no support except from the public, on whom alone it relies. Its various editions are probably the cheapest papers on this Continent; and, though the circulation they have obtained is large, we think it might be, and hope it will be, much larger throughout the Provinces. To this end we rely on the kind aid of the friends of evangelical religion and wholesome literature everywhere, who, we hope, will help us in the future, as many of them have done in the past.

Canada is passing through a crisis in its history; the United States are still convulsed with the struggle for justice and equal rights; the map of Europe is undergoing great changes; Italy is claiming Rome, and Russia again menaces Turkey;—in a word, the times are full of interest, and the Witness gives special attention to the news of the day. It has also an extensive department for Commercial Intelligence and Prices Current, &c., &c., upon which great care is bestowed.

The Messenger is devoted exclusively to Temperance, Education, Agriculture, Science, Art, &c., and consequently goes free through the Post-office.

Any Minister, Post-master, or School-teacher remitting for eight subscribers to any edition, will be entitled to a gratis copy. For a mixed list, amounting to eight dollars, a copy of the Weekly or four copies of the Messenger will be sent gratis.

Subscriptions may commence at any time; and as the best season of the year for obtaining new subscribers is probably just after harvest, we hope we long to have many lists sent in.

All orders, advertisements, and communications to be addressed (post-paid) to

JOHN DOUGALL & SON, Montreal.

☞ To all newspapers publishing the above prospectus for a few times we will send the Daily Witness free for one year.

Marked papers containing the prospectus should be addressed to the Publishing Clerk, Witness Office, Montreal, C. E.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Poetry.

HALLOWE'EN PRIZE POEM.

BY TERRIS WALKER.

[The following poem took the prize at the Hallowe'en celebration in Montreal.]

Anither year has ta'en its flight,—
Ithin gone the gatn o' 't:—
Since last we met to haud the nicht
Within a festive ha':
An Ilka spot is bleak and bare
That late was robi'd in green,
For blightin' frost, an' snell cauld winds
Aye ensue wi' Hallowe'en.

We'll no repine, tho' summer's fled,
An' lood the tempests blaw;
For ither joys aye tak' the place,
O' them that wear awa'
A great assemblage I behold,
Tho' like o't seldom seen;
For Caledonia's sons are met
To haud their Hallowe'en.

An' on wi' rapid glance I scan
Ilk face within my ken,
Be it auld or young, I'm proud to say,—
These are my countrymen!
An' there ye are a stalwart band,
Aye resolute—serene,
Whether ye're makin' siller, or Ye're haudin' Hallowe'en.

An' see it is, the wide warl' o'er,
On fair or barren spot;
Frae Tropic tries to Arctic shore,
Ye'll fin' the canny Scot;
An' poets o' honor weel he fills,— Leal subject o' his Queen;
For loyalty an' honesty
Claim kin wi' Hallowe'en.

Oh! Scotia dear, my native land!
Where'er thy bairns may be,
Glo, joy or sorrow is their lot,
Their hearts aye warm to thee!
Land o' wild glens an' heather braes,
Whar' killed clans ha'e been;
Land o' romance an' droll auld freits
That mak' a Hallowe'en.

Where lassies lift the legend o'
Ilk castle stern an' grey;
Whar' warrior knichts lang laid at rest
Wou'd leddies fair and gay,
Whar' monie a dale an' lanely mair
Has been a battle scene;—
Ale are the aft-tauld stories o'
The land o' Hallowe'en.

An' Canada, we lo'e ye tha'
Traditions auld as these Ne'er tint wi' varied hues your scenes,
As autumn tints your trees.
Your plains are broad, your forests deep
An' happy hames they've gi'en
To monie a hardy pioneer,
Wha there hauds Hallowe'en.

Nae "Wizard of the North" has yet
Among your sons been found
To tread awhile your rugged paths—
Then leave them class'c ground;
Nae "Ploughman Bard" has o'er your lakes
Thrown Fancy's magic sheen,— Auld Superstition shakes her head
To view our Hallowe'en.

She boasts few records o' the past,—
Few deeds o' warlike fame;
But Canada's the land o' Hope,
She yet will win a name;
An' when her days o' grandeur come,
(Hy us they'll no be seen,)
We trust their bairns will no'er forget
To haud their Hallowe'en.

An' Canada, ye ken fu' weel,
Ye're but a thriving wean,
Haud by your mither's helpin' han'
Till ye can gang alane
O' annexation let them speak,
We'll pray—God save the Queen!
An' still aye "Rule the Roast" our motto
An' haud our Hallowe'en.

An' now anither link is forg'd
That binds us to our hame;
Th' Atlantic Cable's tethered fast,—
Despite the stormy main;
An' like day the news is flashed
Th' Auld and New warl's atween
It micht hae let us ken gin frien's
Are haudin' Hallowe'en.

"This Warl's a stage," Will Shakespeare says,
Play weel your pairts—ye can;
May noble deed aft win this praise,
'Twas by a Scottishman!
We may forget the bu'niest face,
Tho' it smiled on us yestreen
But we'll ne'er forget our native land
Nor dear Auld Hallowe'en

WHAT THEY EAT AT XENIA.—The "Eat Contributor" gives the following experience of endeavoring to get dinner at Xenia on the Little Miami Railroad:—

'Twenty minutes for dinner,' shouted the brakeman as we approached X-nia.

Arrived there I entered the dining-room and enquired of a waiter,

'What had you for dinner?'

'Twenty minutes,' was the hurried reply.

I told him I would try half a dozen minutes raw, on the half-shell, just to see how they went. Told him to make a minute of it on his books. He scratched his head trying to comprehend the order, but finally gave it up and waited on some one else.

I approached a man who stood near the door with a roll of money in his hand.

'What do you have for dinner?'

'Half a dollar,' says he.

I told him that I would take half a dollar well done. I asked him if he couldn't send me in addition, a boiled pocket-book stuffed with greenbacks, and some seven-thirties, garnished with postage stamps and ten cent script. Also, a Confederate bond, done brown, with lettuce alone (let us alone.) I would like to wash my dinner down with National Bank Notes, on 'draft.'

He said they were out of everything but the bank notes, and he then ordered a waiter to go to the bank and 'draw' some. —Ex.

A BROKEN NECK NOT NECESSARILY FATAL.—A young girl in Greenock, England, recently fell a distance of eighteen feet and thoroughly dislocated her neck.—A surgeon was called, who pulled gradually and strongly on her head until the parts suddenly came to their natural position, and after a minute or two, regular breathing was established. The child is now as well as ever. We understand that a similar case occurred in New York a few years ago, the operation being performed a few days after the accident occurred.

THE COLENSO CONTROVERSY IN NATAL.—From the Cape newspapers by the last mail we learn that Dean Green had returned to Natal from Cape Town. Two series of services continue to be held in the cathedral, and Bishop Colenso is said to be systematically developing his theological views in the sermons which he is regularly preaching. The Colonial Secretary has formally stated in the Legislative Council that the government had received no instructions from England to recognize Bishop Colenso. The Bishop of Cape Town is reported to be making every preparation to resist a lawsuit which has been brought against him, calling on him to show cause why the title-deeds of the cathedral should not be made over to Dr. Colenso.

'My friend,' said a doctor to his Irish patient, 'be composed; we must all die once.' 'An' it's that vexes me,' replied Pat. 'If it wor more than one' sure I'd be aisy enough.'

'Sam, why am members of parliament like de fishes?' 'I don't meddle wid de subjeet, Pomp.' 'Why don't ye see, nigger, because dey am so fond of de bate.

The lot of man is to labor. There cannot be any good gained, or any advantage kept, without a perpetual struggle and toil.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.
A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Dumas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents,

"Jes' so?"—"Exactly?"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "ow'ley" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters, if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" * * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.
REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" * * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me.
REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" * * * I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.
JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" * * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They set like a charm.
C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such testimonies, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some au pair from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!
Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment—it soon effected a permanent cure."
J. B. DOWNING.
Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."
J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Americus, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain on my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.
ED. SEELY."
Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and painters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads. This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do—it is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the carload, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, rendering the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

PET NAMES.

When daytime cares and toils are past,
And busy feet have ceased to roam,
And once again we meet at last
Around the dear old hearth at home;
We throw aside all forms and shame
For merry chats and fireside games,
And drop the 'Misters' and the 'Ma'ams'
For our familiar household names.

Here are no cold contemptuous eyes,
No social mask is needed here,
Where heart meets heart without disguise
And all are welcome all are dear:
One name, one home, one love tie sweet,
One faith below, one Heaven above us;
What mutual rapture thus to meet
With those we love, and those who love us!

'Adolphus,' with his whiskers fine,
Moustache, and other harmless folly
Now quite forgets to bounce and shine;
Add settles down to homely 'Dilly,'
Instead of grand 'Miss Charlotte,' lo!
Sweet 'Lotty' sits behind the hob,
And 'Flora' is transferred to 'Flo,'
And 'Robert' shortened into 'Bob.'

Oft in our inmost hearts is nurst
Some pet name, lawfully conferr'd,
That lisp'd by baby's lips at first
Has grown into a 'household word:'
A word that heard in after years—
Long years of loneliness and pain—
Calls up long buried joys and tears,
And bring the old home back again.

Lov'd names! we hold them very dear—
The tender violet of life's flowers—
So little to a stranger ear,
So very very dear to ours,
For are they not our very own,
To share our joys, or griefs, or blames,
Those few loved ones who still are known
By old familiar household names?

Miscellaneous.

THE FOUR HENRYS.

The following strange tale, translated from the French, contains the account of rather a singular rencontre of four individuals, who made themselves prominent in France during the middle end of the sixteenth century, and is as follows.

One stormy evening, as the rain fell in torrents, an old woman, who lived in a miserable hut in the forest of St. Germain, and who passed in the surrounding country for a kind of witch, heard a loud knocking at her door. She opened it, and a young man on horseback presented himself and craved hospitality.

By the dull light of a lamp which she held in her hand, she perceived him to be a young nobleman. He appeared to be quite young, and his dress denoted rank.—The old woman lighted a fire, and inquired of him whether he was hungry and desired food. The appetite of a youth of sixteen is like his heart at the same age, craving and not difficult to please, and he immediately accepted the offer. A morsel of cheese and a loaf of black bread from the cupboard was all that the old dame could produce.

I have nothing more, she said to the young nobleman; this is all that your grinding tithes and taxes leave a poor creature to offer a traveller; the peasants too, in this country, call me a witch and sorceress, and make that excuse to their conscience for stealing from me the little that my poor old field produces.

Ma foi! said the young man; if ever I become King of France, I will suppress the taxes and teach the people better.

God grant it! replied the old woman.

At these words the gentleman drew to the table to commence his repast; but at the same moment a fresh knock at the door arrested him.

The old woman opened it, and perceived another horseman drenched with rain who also begged for shelter. The same hospitality was instantly granted him, and on the stranger's entrance, she perceived that the man was young, and judged from his appearance, of noble descent.

What! is it you, Henry? cried one.

Yes, Henry, replied the other. Both were named Henry.

The old woman discovered from their conversation that they were members of a large hunting party, conducted by King Charles the IX, which had been dispersed by the storm.

Mother, said the second comer, have you nothing better to offer us?

Nothing, replied she.

Then, said he we will go shares.

The first Henry demurred, but glancing at the resolute eye and strong frame of the second Henry, said, in somewhat chagrined tone:—

Agreed; we shall share equally.

He dared not express his secret motive, but he feared, if not sharing equally, his companion would appropriate the whole.—They accordingly sat down on either side of the table, and one had already begun to cut the bread, when a third knock was heard at the door. The meeting was singular. It was again a youth, a nobleman and a Henry. The old woman looked at them with astonishment.

The first comer wished to hide the bread and cheese. The second replaced them on the table and laid his sword by their side. The third Henry smiled.

You do not wish, then, that I should share your supper? said he. Well! I can't wait; I have a strong stomach.

The supper, said the second, belongs to a who knows best how to defend it!

The third became red with anger, and said haughtily:—

Perhaps it belongs to him who knows best how to fight for it.

These words were scarcely uttered when the first Henry drew his poignard, the two others their swords. As they were just beginning the affray they were startled by a fourth knock at the cabin door, a fourth young man, a fourth nobleman, a fourth Henry, was introduced. At the sight of the drawn sword he produced his own, and attaching himself to the weakest party, he joined in the combat.

The old woman terified, hid herself, and the weapons struck everything within their reach. The lamp fell down and was extinguished, but they continued to fight in the darkness. The noise of the swords lasted some time, but gradually became less, and at length ceased altogether. The old woman ventured to issue from her hiding place and, rekindling the lamp, she perceived the four young men stretched on the ground, each having a slight wound. She examined them carefully, and found that fatigue, rather than loss of blood had over-come them.

They rose from the ground one after the other, and ashamed of what had transpired in the heat of their passion, they began laughing and exclaimed:—

Come, let us now sup together without any more fighting.

But when they came to look for their supper they found it on the ground, all trodden under foot and stained with blood. Meagre as it was they regretted it. In addition to this the cabin was destroyed, and the old witch, seated in a corner, fixed her pale, red eyes on the four young men.

Why dost thou stare on us thus? said the first Henry, who was troubled at her gaze.

I am reading the fates written on your forehead, replied she.

The second Henry commanded her to disclose them, and the two others laughingly acquiesced. The old woman replied:—

As you have all four met in this cabin so shall you all meet in a like destiny. As you have trampled under foot and stained with blood the bread offered you by hospitality, so will you trample under foot and stain with blood the power you might naturally share. As you have devastated and impoverished this cottage, so will you devastate and lay waste France. As you have all four been wounded in the darkness so will you all four perish by treason and a violent death.

The four young noblemen could not refrain from laughing at the old woman's prediction.

These four noblemen were the heroes of the Digne—two as its leaders, and two as its enemies.

Henry of Conde, poisoned by his wife at Saint Jean d'Angely.

Henry of Guise, assassinated at Blois by the Forty-five.

Henry of Valois, assassinated by Jacques Clement, at Saint Cloud.

Henry of Bourbon, assassinated at Paris by Ravaillac.

THE MODERN BABYLON.

[From the Richmond Examiner, October 20.]

If the city of New York were to be taken down to-day by an earthquake, and only Niblo's Theatre left standing, the survivors of the calamity would flock to see the "Black Crook" to-morrow night as if nothing had happened. The great metropolis may not deserve the title bestowed upon it, "The World of New York," but, at any rate, the demimonde inhabits there, and virtue is esteemed an entirely provincial quality. In point of fact, New York has broken loose from every precedent of the social system—and moves on in a sphere of her own, and to the music of quite original celestial harmonies. In this sense, the great city is unquestionably a "world."

Everything in New York is done "on a margin," and he (or she) is the most successful metropolitan who can "operate" most extensively on least capital. Thus the daily newspapers are conducted in the sphere of rumor upon the most surprisingly small margin of truth; the preachers traverse the broad realms of society and politics upon the meagrest imaginable plank of gospel; fair women sport the fullest toilette of fashion over scarcely a shift of virtue; and the only undoubted capitalist in the place is the devil, who seems to own stock in its every institution and to have a bill of sale of the community generally.

If worthy John Bunyan could come to life again, and survive the steerage of an emigrant ship and the perils of the "runners" who infest Castle Garden, he would assuredly, after having seen New York, tear out one chapter from the narrative of his great pilgrimage, and give us another picture of "Vanity Fair." Dante, were he living, would add a Wall St "corner" to the other exquisite tortures of malebolge; and Jonah, sent against such a place, would not seek to hide in a whale's belly, because he would see that his utmost prophecy would never be heeded.

That New York patronizes the arts is a fixed fact. Upon every corner you may see the hand-bill of a "grand gift concert;" Ristori fails, and Jefferson, but the "Black Crook" succeeds; Barnum's Museum opens every day at 5 a. m.; Harper's Magazine is sold by the hundred thousand; and Bierstadt's pictures have made his fortune.

That New York is a fountain of taste is beyond question. She has a great park without trees; and a Fifth avenue without pavement; a Mayor without authority; pretty women without grace, who wear splendid toilettes without paying for them; handsome men without honesty; and—a Bennett, and a Beecher, a Greeley—and a Seventh Regiment.

Paris, to be sure, has her Quartier Breda and her Rue Notre Dame du Lorettes, but she has also her Faubourg de St. Germain, and her Rue de Rivoli; London is able to offset St. Giles with St. James; and even Vienna does not open her court to questionable virtue, but in New York, nous avons changé tout cela they say; "Miss" Lucretia Borgia is an honored guest at all the hotels, and "Madame" Elebe's palace in Fifth Avenue is next door to Madame Brude's "institute for young ladies." If Madame Bebe felt like it, she could rent the best pew in Plymouth or Grace Church without exciting popular indignation, and Miss Lucretia could visit in "society" just as she has her box at the opera and ticket to the "Seventh's" ball.

In other words, society is totally, infamously, beyond conception, corrupt in New York, and if this corruption be, as they tell us it is, the legitimate offspring of sudden riches, may God continue to us our present poverty.

THE JEWS.

Rev. Charles Kingsly, in a lecture on science, thus speaks of the scientific spirit of "the old Jews:"—

First, the old Jews. I speak of them, be it remembered, exclusively from an historical and not a religious point of view.

These people, at a very remote epoch, emerged from a country highly civilized, but sunk in the superstitions of nature worship. They invaded and mingled with tribes whose superstitions were even more debased, silly and foul than those of the Egyptians from whom they escaped. Their own masses were for centuries given up to nature worship. Now among those Jews arose men—a very few—sages—prophets,—call them what you will, the men were inspired heroes and philosophers,—who assumed toward nature an attitude utterly different from the rest of their countrymen and the rest of the then world; who denounced superstition and the dread of nature as the parent of all manner of vice and misery; who for themselves said boldly that they discerned in the universe an order, a unity, a permanence of law, which give them courage instead of fear. They found delight and not dread in the thought that the universe obeyed a law which could not be broken; that all things continued to that day according to a certain ordinance. They took a view of nature totally new in that age; healthy, human, cheerful, loving, trustful, and yet reverent—identical with that which happily is beginning to prevail in our own day.

They defied those very volcanic and meteoric phenomena of their land, to which their countrymen were slaying their own children in the clefts of the rocks, and (like Theophrastus's superstitious man) pouring their drink-offerings on the smooth stones of the valley; and declared that for their part they would not fear though the earth was moved, and though the hills were carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters raged and swelled, and the mountains shook at the tempest.

The fact is indisputable. And you must pardon me if I express my belief that these men, if they had felt it their business to found a school of inductive physical science, would, owing to that temper of mind, have achieved a very signal success. I ground my opinion on the remarkable, but equally indisputable fact, that no nation has ever succeeded in perpetuating a school of inductive physical science, save those whose minds have been saturated with this same view of nature, when they have (as an historic fact) slowly but thoroughly learnt from the writings of these Jewish sages.

RUSSIA PREPARING FOR WAR.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times writes as follows:—

"While a great crisis is drawing on in the South, symptoms of as serious a nature are noticeable in the North and East. It is now pretty clear why Russia has suddenly countermanded the departure of her troops from Poland. Not only her press has assumed a menacing tone towards Austria on account of the avowed intention of the latter to Polonize the Ruthenian (or more correctly the Russiania) peasantry of Eastern Galicia, but the language employed by the Russian papers is furious, has been heard also in the council-hall of the Czar, and found a ready echo in the more moderate but no less significant utterances of his diplomatists both at Vienna and St. Petersburg. The effect of this undisguised hostility upon the minds of Austrian statesmen has been strong enough to cause them to apprehend something more than words, being contemplated by the Russian government.

"I believe I am correct in saying that the expediency of occupying Galicia with some considerable force has been already discussed by the ministers of Francis Joseph.

"Berlin politicians on their part, closely watching the seething cauldron of Oriental affairs, and observing a new phenomenon, the visible eagerness of the Czar to make the Russian grievances a cause of quarrel, cannot help speculating upon his ultimate intentions. Is it not possible, they ask, that the Czar dreading a European attack in case of his interfering with Turkey, should be preparing to forestall the blow? Does he, perhaps, think of attacking Austria, who would be one of his worst antagonists in such a melee, and disabling her single handed before the more comprehensive conflict begins? Is he only wanting to strike until the apprehensions undoubtedly awakened in his breast have been confirmed by unequivocal signs of coming trouble? Or does he, in reality, not mean to fight, but only wish to prevent the formation of a ligne he fears by showing himself up and doing? Such are the considerations current in political circles in this capital. People, you see, are apt to ascribe a good deal of pluck and initiative to the Russian Government, and their conjectures are naturally strengthened by the fact that Austria, were she now taken by surprise, alone, and so soon after her recent defeat, might find it no easy matter to hold her ground. Yet it is undeniable that the deep designs attributed to Russia, if they really exist, would not be without some legitimate cause."

I do not want any of that kind of respect for the clergyman that will check a man from swearing in his presence: "Ah, I beg pardon; I see there is a minister present. Never beg my pardon for swearing. If you don't care about offending God, you need not trouble yourself about offending me. Oh, this miserable, mean kind of respect that is felt for the mere formalities and decencies of religion, when Jesus Christ is turned out of doors!—E. H. Chapin.

A four year old went to church one Sunday, and when he got home his grandmother asked him what the minister said.—"Don't know," said he, "he didn't speak to me." A good many older people might answer in the same way.

A STORY FOR CHILDREN.

Several years ago there were two little boys in the eastern part of Connecticut, by the names of Samuel and Tomas, but commonly called Sammy and Tommy. The former was about eight, and the latter six years old, when their father purchased some land about two miles from his house, taking a straight course through a large piece of woods; but to go around on the road it would be much further.

Having men to work on the new land, the distance was to great for them to come home to dine; so he had the boys' mother one morning to get her dinner early that day, put it in a tin kettle with the dishes, and he would wait for it, and have them boys go with him and learn the way through the woods, so that they could thereafter carry out the dinner to those men. The dinner being prepared they took it and started on, noticing various objects by the way, until they came to the woods where there was a very large rock, under which the goats that lived in the woods sheltered themselves in stormy weather. When they came in sight of the rock the boys exclaimed, "O, father, we never saw such a rock before!" and the father said, "Well my boys, do you think you will know that rock when you see it again?"

"Yes, sir," said the boys; and the father said, "This rock we call the 'goat rock,' and this wood the goat-rock wood; now when you return, if you come by this rock you know that you are right, and this will be half way home."

So they went on, noticing other objects by the way, till they arrived were the men were at work. They sat down and ate their dinner, put the dishes in the tin kettle, which the boys took, and started alone for home, watching their way carefully. They came safely to the rock; and, remembering what their father said, 'This will be half-way home,' they apprehended no danger in travelling the other half way; so they stopped and played around the rock for some time, and then started for home, but took a wrong direction; and, after travelling quite a distance, to their great surprise they found themselves at the goat rock. Then after much sober thought and consultation, they started again for home, but took another wrong direction, and travelled till the afternoon was nearly spent, when to their astonishment they were at the goat rock, and a heavy thunder-cloud was rising, which terrified the boys exceedingly, they being afraid of thunder when away from their mother.

Tommy said, "Let us go this way, Sammy."

"No," said the latter, "for if we start again the third time, we may never find the way back, even to the goat rock. What shall we do?"

Tommy was speechless; and after some little reflection, Sammy said, "Now, Tommy, we know that father prays to God; he asks God to do much for him; let us ask God to show us out of the woods."

"So let's," said Tommy.

They knelt right down together, and Sammy did the talking, about in these words: "O Lord, we have got lost in these woods, and can't find the way out; and there is no man here to tell us the right way; now father prays to you every day; he asks you to get many things for him; and we are his boys; won't you be so good as to show us the way out of the wood?"

They rose from their knees and went directly out on the clearing, in sight of home.

Tommy was very glad; and when on the point of reaching the house, Sammy said, "Now, Tommy, the Lord has showed us the right way and we ought to thank him for it." "So we had," said Tommy! and Sammy the best he could, did thank the Lord for being so good to them. Then at twilight they returned to their home safe and well, but very tired. — Christian Teacher.

THE GLORY OF A GOOD LAUGH.—After all, what a capital, kindly, honest, jolly, glorious thing a good laugh is? What a tonic! What an exerciser of evil spirits! What a digester! What a febrifuge! Better than a walk before breakfast or a nap before dinner. How it shuts the mouth of malice and opens the brow of kindness.—Whether it discovers the gums of age or infancy, the grinders of folly or the perils of beauty; whether it racks the sides or deforms the countenance of vulgarity, or dimples the visage or moistens the eye of refinement—in all its phases, and all faces, contorting, relaxing, overwhelming, convulsing, throwing the human countenance into something approximate to Billy Button's transformation, under every circumstance and everywhere, a laugh is a glorious thing. Like a "thing of beauty," it is a joy forever. There is no remorse in it. It leaves no sting—except in the sides, and that goes off. Even a single unparticipated laugh is a great affair to witness. But it is seldom single. It is more infectious than the scarlet fever. You cannot gravely contemplate a laugh. If there is one laughter and one witness, there are forthwith two laughters and so on. What confusion is propagated like sound! What a thing it is when it becames epidemic.

DON'T STAND STILL.—If you do, you will be run over. Motion, action, progress—these are the words which do fill the vaults of heaven with their stirring demands and make humanity's heart pulsate with a stronger bound. Advance, or stand aside; do not block up the way and hinder the career of others; there is too much to do now to allow of inaction anywhere or in any one. There is something for all to do; the world is becoming more and more known; wider in magnitude; closer in interest; more loving and eventful than of old. Not in deeds of daring, nor in the ensanguined field, not in chains and terrors, not in blood, and tears, and gloom, but in the leaping, vivifying, exhilarating impulses of a better birth of the soul. Reader, are you doing your part in this work?

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

(From the Ottawa Citizen.)

Writing on the School question, and the rumors respecting the mission of Messrs. Galt and McGee, the Kingston News says: "In a matter of such great importance, and where the worst we may be made of popular misconceptions, is it not desirable that the people of Canada should have information more definite than those unauthorized and conflicting statements? It would be well if the Ministry, by some official memorandum, public speech, or authorized statement, would make public fully the true state of the case. If these suspicions of undue interference with the school matter are unfounded, as we now feel confident they are they should be speedily dissipated, to the end that the public may repose the necessary confidence in the Administration. A timely announcement of the Ministerial policy would perhaps save some people the expense and trouble of going to England as a private deputation to secure the conservation of our school system, in which they feel so warm an interest; and it would bootless allay an excitement which is being daily stimulated by the organs of the Opposition." As if in response to the appeal made by the News, the following was telegraphed as a general press despatch from Kingston: "It is understood here that a declaration will be made public after the departure of the Ministerial delegation, announcing the course to be pursued by them in London, stating fully the proposed plan of appeal from the Local to the Central Legislature." From the fact that the Minister of Militia was in Kingston just previous to the despatch of the above telegrams it looks very much like as if the telegraphist had been officially inspired, and indeed it is fair to presume that the News was used as a kind of stalking-horse to prepare the public for the announcement made over the telegraph line. However, whether or not the telegram contained fictitious information, or the News had any inkling of its publication, it appears that the public have just cause to surmise that some scheme is on foot to change the arrangements agreed upon respecting the school matters of Upper Canada. We have nothing to say about the way in which Ministers intend to publish their "document" but one thing is certain, that the people will be apt to say that they feared to face the popular indignation which will be raised in Upper Canada. As to the dream or itself or the plan of Ministers, we of course prefer to wait before venturing the expressions of an opinion upon its merits. We can, however, foresee, that any plan which Ministers may lay upon to place the Central Parliament the power of legislation in Upper Canada school matters will receive the uncompromising hostility of the great majority in this Province. And it is quite natural that this should be expected to be the feeling of the people. One of the strongest recommendations possessed by the scheme of Confederation as agreed upon at the Quebec Conference, is that feature which leaves educational matters to each Local Legislature. But for this provision we very much doubt whether the Coalition Ministry would have been formed; at any rate but for it we feel certain that Mr. Brown and those who usually acted with him, would never have consented to drop the political principles which he and they had contended for years to co-operate with the Conservative party.

Whatever opinion may be entertained of Mr. Brown, whether we consider him as an influential statesman, or a man of extreme sectional views and prejudices it is quite certain that to him is due a very large degree of credit for abandoning the urgent and, perhaps, intemperate advocacy of sectional questions, and identifying himself with a party to which he had long been bitterly opposed. So much has been conceded to him over and over again, both in Parliament and outside. We presume that there is hardly two opinions in the country as to the credit due Mr. Brown for the liberal spirit he manifested at the time of the political crisis which led to the formation of the present Ministry. We know that the satisfaction appeared to be very general at the time, and our contemporaries, with very few exceptions, saw in the act of Coalition an agreement which would completely put an end to the sectional differences which had racked the Province for a generation. Lower Canada denunciation, as it has been termed, lay at the root of the sectional differences. It was hoped, and believed, and both hope and belief were reasonable, that a Federation of the Provinces would put an end to this so-called domination by giving to each Local Legislature certain powers of Government, but more particularly in respect to matters relating to Education. So prominent was this considered that it was deemed politic not to reserve any rights in the premises to the general Government.—There could be no mistake as to the feeling of the House at the time of the introduction of Mr. Bell's bill last Session. It was quite clear that the House was not prepared to take up the question of Upper Canada School measure. Whether it would have been wiser to settle the matter for ever as it now the question. It is sufficient to know that the people's representatives looked upon the matter as a closed question. It is generally supposed that dissatisfaction among those who rejected Mr. Bell's bill, were Hons. Messrs. Howland and McDougall. Now, however, if current rumours are to be relied upon, these Ministers have consented to an arrangement for the introduction of a clause into the Federal Constitution which will empower the general Parliament to legislate upon school matters. Of course it is not to be presumed that these eminent statesmen would lend themselves to a scheme which must be unpopular without deliberately counting the costs. They must have foreseen that by departing from the original understanding with Mr. Brown, with Parliament and out in the country, they would take upon themselves a very heavy responsibility; they must have known that any attempt to invest the general Parliament with power to legislate upon school matters would necessarily re-open those sectional differences which were supposed to be for ever banished. Whether they have thus taken a forecast of the consequences or not, we have no doubt whatever but that any attempt to give the Central Parliament power to legislate on school questions, will have a tendency to mar the harmony which was expected to follow Confederation.—We still hope that no such attempt will be made.

The St. Catherines Journal says:—"Quite an event occurred at Clinton on Friday night, which may well be styled an epoch in the history of the Great Western Railroad, to wit: The first appearance of the blue line of cars destined to run without change from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. The cerulean vehicle was transported through Canada from Detroit on a flat, the third rail in course of completion for this purpose not being quite ready. On the sides of the car are painted all the principal stopping places on the route, in conspicuous white letters. A keeper from the West accompanies the car to its destination, Worcester, Mass.

"Beast Butler attempted to address a political meeting in New York last week, but was prevented a hearing by the infuriated crowd, which hooted and groaned at him, and was partly utterly anxious to know what had become of the "spoons." In his rage the "Beast" grunched his teeth and growled at the people in the following delicate style:—

"Why, you poor fools, I have faced your superiors in Baltimore, and New Orleans; I have hung your betters, and if you do not behave yourselves, I shall get the chance to do the same with you; I have seen a great many more than you, with arms in their hands, and yet not flinched. Do you suppose I shall flinch from onion-stinking breath? A man who can stand gunpowder can stand garlic. Do you think that you are equal to the negro?—Oh, no; the negro is as immeasurably your superior as heaven is above hell, where you will go to. I do not certainly respect you, and you may be quite sure I do not fear you, Men of Five Points! Bullies of the barnby house! thieves of the lobby! and burglar of the Tombs! I simply declare here, as the voice of this nation that you are not fit for the exercise of the elective franchise, and in no better way than this could you demonstrate the fact."

A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.—A party of Ex American gentlemen, having with them 14 good rifles and 10 hounds, arrived here by the five o'clock train last evening, intending to proceed to Ehrose to kill deer for shipment to the New York markets. A correspondent gives us these facts, and asks, "Is it just that these gentlemen should be allowed this liberty? If they came simply for pleasure no objection could be taken to their killing as much of our game as they thought proper; but when they intend wholesale slaughter for speculative purposes I think something should be done to prevent them." Our correspondent is right, but in the absence of any law applying to such a matter, we do not think they can be prevented doing what they intend.—Ottawa Citizen.

THE FENIAN LAUNDEN.—Rev. D. F. Lounsden, the unfortunate clergyman, who inadvertently got into bad company at Fort Erie, about the 2nd of June last, passed down from Toronto yesterday by the Great Western Railway, bound for the nearest crossing. The reverend gentleman briefly alighted at this station, and supplied his spiritual yearning by hastily precipitating a "whiskey straight" through his clerical choker. Previous to his departure from Toronto, Rev. Mr. Lounsden was presented with a purse of $35 by Canadian gentlemen, to facilitate his journey homeward. It is to be hoped that the pious ministrations will be devoted to more promising fields in the future.—Hamilton Times.

The prospects of a new bank about to be started under the name of "The Waterloo County Bank," has been issued. The head office will be in Galt, C. W., and the proposed capital will be $2 000,000, in 80 000 shares of $25 each. A charter is to be applied for at the next session, and the bank is to go into operation as soon as $100,000 shall have been subscribed, and $400,000 paid in. The prospectus, amongst other things, states that interest will be allowed on current accounts.—Several of the leading manufacturers and wealthy gentlemen of Galt and vicinity are prime movers in the matter, and it is probable it will be brought to a successful issue.—Ex.

THEY FEAL!—Despite the anticipations and confident statements of learned local seasons and amateur star-gazers that Sir John Dorsel and other eminent astronomers were all wrong in fixing the date of the meteoric shower for the 14th inst., the meteors have fallen and the predictions of the latter are proved to have been correct in our telegraphic despatch from New York it will be seen that the Herald has a telegram from Greenwich Observatory, England, detailing a shower of meteors seen on the morning of the 14th, which are described to be of great beauty and brilliancy. Five thousand were counted in one hour and nearly twelve thousand fell in all.

THE FENIAN PRISONERS AT MONTREAL.—The Chief Justices of the Queen's Bench and of the Superior Courts in Lower Canada had transmitted to them yesterday from Ottawa certified copies of an order of the Executive Council setting forth that the trial of the Fenian prisoners now confined at Montreal, would take place at Bedford, in the District of Missisquoi, whither they will be removed at once.—The Judges will themselves decide upon the day of trial.

A map has just been published by the Italian Government showing the degree of public instruction in each province by colors. The teaching of the people is more and more imperfect as you descend to the south; the part the most advanced is Turin where, on a population of 1,000, there are only 489 persons unable to read and write; in Lower Calabria the proportion is the highest, being 927; in Sicily and Sardinia it exceeds 900, and at Florence is 757.

There are now building in England or under orders to be built, twenty-six non-armor plated vessel of war. The estimated expenditure on those vessels from April 1 last to March 31 next, is £2 0 0,032.—From the return moved for by Lord Clifden to iron-plated ships afloat, and four building. The floating batteries are the Erebus, Terror, Thunderbolt, and Thunder.

It is said that the Government of England and France have offered to that of Chili their mediatorial services for settling the difficulty with Spain; the belligerent parties, however, retaining entire liberty to accept or not the propositions made by the mediators. Chili, in her turn, has offered to mediate in the war, on the River Plate. The people in the Argentine Republic are getting tired of the war, and petitions for the conclusion of peace were receiving numerous signatures in Buenos Ayres.

Several parties living in the vicinity of Fort Erie, who were witnesses for the prosecution of the Fenian prisoners, at Toronto, recently received threatening letters from the Buffalo Fenians.

Mr. Thos. P. Jones, Jr., of New York State, has been appointed U. S. Consular agent at Port Hope.

On the 16th instant, an accident occurred on the Grand Trunk at Breslau. The express train ran off the track, and an express messenger named C. D Wicks was killed. Seven passengers were wounded, and a brakesman seriously hurt. Six cars rolled over the embankment. The cause of the accident was a broken rail.

MUNICIPAL CHANGES.

In last week's issue we brought to the recollection of our readers a portion of the new Municipal Act, especially that referring to the election of Reeves and Deputy Reeves. The time is not far distant, when the people will be called upon to select their Reeves and Councillors for the ensuing year. We have our doubts of the advantages to be reaped from the new law by the changes in this respect, and we confess our unwillingness to be continually dabbling in changes unless where an evil of some consequence or an injustice is strongly felt, and a known remedy applied. The method of appointing Reeves and Deputy Reeves under the old law worked very well, and our County Councils were generally composed of good men; indeed we think it would be difficult to find better men for the positions they occupied.

We do not mean to say, however, that under the new state of things good men can not or will not be elected; on the contrary, we have confidence that the good sense of the people will prevail, and that the future Councils of this County will bear no unfavorable comparison with those of the past But there is danger in the introduction of new things that the people go to far in changing, and in doing so select too many new men, and perhaps men who never troubled themselves about the matter before. Such a course is not always wise, while a change of Councillors is sometimes imperatively demanded, to do so for the mere love of it, is very often, if not always, injurious. The best men should be selected and when possible the old men: they understand the work to be done. They have learned the way of doing it and have become acquainted with the laws and forms required in the transaction of business, and from long acquaintance with details can more easily detect errors than men who did not pay much attention to the matter. It is, therefore, a matter for serious consideration how far change will work for the advantage of the people as a whole. No corner should be so selfish as to expect all legislation to be for the particular advantage of that particular spot.

In the selection of Reeves and Deputy Reeves, the choice should be more because of fitness or ability to discharge the duties of the office than mere local, personal, or selfish considerations. The welfare of the whole county or township—justice to every portion of the township, should be the guiding star, rather than any desire to put in a man who might promise to favor some particular spot. The men who promise much very often perform little, and we feel assured that he who promises too much from one corner of the township to the injury or neglect of the rest of the house party, may not only find himself unable to fulfil his promises but the people may find the same man already to resist on the side of injustice, if over self aggrandizement should lead to it The man only who promises to act in justice and equity to every inhabitant, deserves to be elected. But the man who has been tried, proved and found worthy, let no love of change induce the people to reject. Political or religious prejudice should also be discarded, and all national prejudices, for these things blind the eyes of the wise and pervert the judgement of the unwary. A single eye to the fitness and integrity of the man should be the only aim of every elector, and guided by these there need be no fear for our municipal institutions in the future.

In our report of the Assizes we omitted the case of Scratch vs. Jackson, an action brought to recover dower. The Demandant was formerly a Mrs. Jackson, but her husband dying she married a Mr. Scratch, and he also is dead. The property for which she claims dower was once the property of her first husband. He at one time exchanged it, with his father we believe, on very advantageous terms, for another farm. The present owner, Mr. Jackson, against whom the action was brought, and who obtained from his father, has improved the farm very much, making it very valuable as compared with the state in which he received it, and now, his sister-in-law comes on and obtains her dower, and damages for detention amounting to $188

Crawford vs. Bell. Ejectment on a mortgage. Verdict by consent, 1s.

Horan vs. Leahy. An action against the Collector of Dours for selling goods of plaintiff for taxes not properly assessed against his goods. Referred to W. H. Weller.

On the 16th inst., all the buildings of the Grand Trunk Railway at Point Edwards, near Sarnia, were destroyed by fire. Loss, about $200,000.

THE ABUSE OF CONFIDENCE.

Again and again we have pointed out the abuse of power, and the reckless indifference of the present leaders of the Ministry. Every newspaper teems with complaints of the unfitness of those in whose hands are the destinies of British America, especially of the unfitness of those Canadian delegates who have abused the trust confided to them, and regardless of the present or the future appear determined to leave their mark on our future—even though that be the mark of the "beast," and as equally determined to render themselves notorious, even though forever after the execration of Canadians should rest upon them.

When the Hon. George Brown, at the urgent request of his friends, and of the now despised Ministers, entered into a coalition it was with the understanding that all things would remain as they were then, until Confederation should be settled. And Mr. Brown believing that their promises were in good faith, consented to go in, in order to get rid of the unhappy sectional difficulties that had arisen. But no sooner has he entered than the campaign commences to obtain, if possible, a house that would enable them to break faith with him in order to gratify their ambition and lust for power which was then passing out of their hands. They soon threw off all restraint until he was compelled to resign his seat in the cabinet. And now, contrary to the almost unanimous wish of Upper Canadians, they appoint themselves delegates to England to complete that which they could not introduce without his aid, and they who secured their seats through his influence, go to England, but not a word about Mr. Brown going.

In another column is a communication to the London Evening Advertiser, which we recommend to the attention of Reform party, especially the suggestion to invite Mr. Brown to go to England. We fully agree with the writer that he is no office-seeker. His unbending decision of character and high purpose are well known. Upper Canada can trust him, and the people will then have an advocate on whom they can rely.

MADOC GOLD MINES.

Several of our townsmen have caught the gold fever, and have left for the gold regions, in the neighborhood of Madoc, for the purpose of seeing for themselves. From reports, there remains little doubt, but that gold in some quantities has been discovered. Mr. H. Rogers has shewn us some specimens that he said he picked up himself, and which he considers rich in the precious metal.—The matter will soon be tested, however, and both the quality and quantity of the ore settled. Already there are numerous prospectors at work, both American and others.—Several thousands have visited the place and excitement is high just now; but a little time will quiet the matter. The owners of the land, if prospecting continues in the neighborhood, will, in all probability, make as much gold as the diggers.

The following items have been sent to us by a gentleman who has been there, and we in turn leave them before our readers:

The discovery of this precious metal and the unerring indications of its existence in large quantities in the vicinity of Madoc, have opened an extensive field for the enterprise of our people Our own community has been affected by the epidemic, and a company organized, under the auspices of Messrs. Palmer, Crean, and Gregory, of this Town, and Mr. Smith, of the United States, for the purpose of commencing operations at an early day. Mr. Gregory, who has just returned from this new El Dorado, has brought with him a specimen of gold, for which he paid $5, and has left it for exhibition at the Book Store of Messrs. Graham & Stratton. In quality, experienced miners and competent judges, have declared the samples already produced, to be more valuable than similar ores produced in California, and in appearance the ore is more striking, being of a peculiarly yellowish and glittering hue. Mr. D. R. Pedell, a relative of our townsman, Mr. P. Huffman, who has had considerable experience in mining in the California gold regions, states that in a double handful of dust, which he had taken in an excavation, he realized about half an ounce of pure metal, which he estimated to be worth about $9. Another gentleman offered the sum of $2,000 for the privilege of working with a horse. Messrs. Palmer & Co. have purchased a tract of 400 acres, about nine miles from Madoc, and will commence operations next week.

The general features and formation of the country and the character of the soil give abundant evidence of mineral deposits.—These gentlemen will cheerfully give whatever information they possess on the subject if required.

Literary Club.

The following subject will be discussed this evening, viz.:—"Would it be advantageous to the country if the Government gave the Crown Lands to settlers free,"—Leaders, Messrs. Haggart and J. A. Hall. Several Members of the Club will also give readings and recitations. Public night,—doors open at half-past seven. The boys that distinguished themselves on previous evenings by interrupting the speakers and readers and annoyed the visitors, will not be admitted on any consideration. The Club expect at least ordinary courtesy from persons after admitting them free to their meetings.

On Wednesday next, 28th instant, the Members of the Club will give an entertainment consisting of readings and recitations from different authors, and vocal and instrumental music, in the Victoria Hall. The proceeds to be devoted to the library fund.

Master at Chancery.

From a notice in to-day's issue, we find that T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., has resigned the Mastership at Peterboro, and we understand is succeeded by W. H. Weller, Esq. of Cobourg, who will hereafter fulfil the duties of both offices. Mr. Fairbairn, we are informed, resigns in order to resume his practice as Solicitor in the Court, and having spent a large part of his pupilage in the Chancery office of the Messrs. Blake, Toronto, as their managing student, has enjoyed rare facilities for becoming acquainted with the details of the Court of Chancery, and will, therefore, be able to resume his practice with the confidence of commanding a liberal share of the business for this part of the Court.

Extensive Sale.

We would invite the attention of our readers to the Extensive Sale of Household Furniture of the late Capt. Frazer. It will take place on Friday, commencing at ten o'clock, a. m. See advertisement; also, large bills.

St. Andrew's Church, Peterboro'.

On Tuesday evening the Rev. Mr. McDonnell was inducted pastor of St. Andrew's Church here. The Church was on the occasion well filled in every available spot, and the services were instructive and appropriate. Mr. McDonnell is quite a young man, and the Church is very unanimous in the choice.

Got His Reward.

We learn that Ten Johnston, one of the worthies to whom we referred during last winter, as something in the way of pickpockets and horse thieves, has come to grief. He is also the party, or one of them, who took Mr. Finley's horses. He has been tried at Brantford for horse stealing, &c., and convicted and sentenced to 15 years in the Provincial Penitentiary. He escaped justice for a season, but, at length, has received his reward.

John and Robert Hall, who were found guilty at the last assizes here of cutting and maiming Samuel Clyshlie, of Asphodel, have been safely lodged in the Provincial Penitentiary. Isbworth, also, who was convicted of setting fire to the dwelling of Mrs. Gregor McGregor, Ashburnham, accompanied them. He, however, was forced to acknowledge his former confinement when confronted with the keeper, notwithstanding his openly calling God to witness to the contrary while in Court.

Our contemporary, the Review, took the trouble of reporting F. H Knapp's trial at the late Assizes, and inadvertently or otherwise has put words in the mouth of some of the witnesses. He makes one of them, at least swear that which he did not. Having been engaged otherwise during the past week, we have been compelled to let it go with this passing notice. We will refer to this trial next week.

Godey's Lady's Book.

This Fashion Book, for December, has been received. The contents are:—

"The Christmas Doll," a beautiful engraving.

A handsome Steel plate Title page, consisting of five tableaux. The centre tableau in this plate truthfully pictures the scene in many a nursery chamber on Christmas morning.

Colored Fashion-plate, containing six figures. Morning dress, Evening dress. Dinner-dress, Dress for a Wedding Reception, etc.

"Temptation." A picture for the juveniles.

In the wood cut Fashions, containing the latest Paris dates, will be found a "Morning dress;" "Winter Suits for Children;" "The Titania Indoor Jacket," front and back view; two "Fashionable Jackets;" "Pension Sack;" "Zouave Jacket;" "Black Cloth Sack;" "Street Wrap for a Little Boy;" "Opera Bonnet," "Cap," etc.

The Work Department contains the following articles of work for the ladies:—Winter Boot in Knitting; Cigar case Embroidered upon Kid; Bead Trimming; Boy's Gaiter; Daisy Pattern for a Crochet Counterpane; Open knitting for Opera Hoods; Novel Pattern in Embroidery for a Pocket-Book, etc., etc.; Knitted Muffatee; Braided Slipper; Alphabet for Bead or Worsted work; Embroidery and Braiding Patterns.

Eight engravings of Hats and Furs, contributed by J. R. Terry, 409 Broadway, New York.

The Literary Department of this month is made up of such writers as Virginia Townsend, Marion Harland, Mrs. Rowe, S. Annie Frost, and other old favorites.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—In your issue of the 8th instant I observe a letter over the signature of Col. Boultain, calling attention to the Savings Bank established here by the Ontario Bank. From another letter from the Colonel which appeared on the 15th inst., I infer that a remonstrance had been put in to a Bank Manager, who affirms that he has offered for two years past to the public all the advantages of a Savings Bank. The statement I am afraid has not been well considered or preadventure the Banker needs sight. Let us examine into this matter: Before me is a Bank book issued by the Savings Bank, the first page is printed and sets forth the conditions on which deposits are received From these I find, first—that all sums above four dollars bear interest at the rate of four per cent per annum. Second—that a depositor can at any time make an addition to his balance, and all sums bear interest from the day they are deposited. Third—any depositor can draw all or any portion of his deposit at any time without notice. Fourth—there is no stipulation that the money shall remain for any given time, consequently the depositor gets interest from the day he puts his money in until the day he takes it out without any deduction whatever. Fifth—All accrued interest on the 31st of Dec. in each year is passed to credit of each depositor, and becomes part of the interest bearing capital. These I find are the conditions on which Savings Banks receive deposits. I now turn to the Deposit Receipt System, and find that to draw interest your money must remain three months, and at the end of that time, fifteen days interest is deducted. Any candid man who will compare the two must see that to a depositor the Savings Bank system offers the greatest advantages.

Yours, &c.,

THE BOY KELLEY.—With reference to the case of the boy Kelley, who died at the station here recently while on his way from Kingston to Peterboro', we deem it but justice to give place to the representations of the authorities of the Hospital at Kingston. It will be remembered that we censured them for allowing the boy to leave the institution and start on such a long journey while yet dangerously ill. But it would appear that he insisted on leaving for home, notwithstanding the opposition of the doctor and the other authorities of the hospital, and the intention not being a public one, but one of religious charity, they had not the power to forcibly detain him. This being the case, the affair assumes a very different phase, and the parties interested are relieved of an imputation that was naturally enough cast upon them by the people here: The affair, upon its face, bore a very unfavorable appearance, as told at first: but now the other side of the story is before us, we take great pleasure in setting the matter right.—Port Hope Guide.

THE GOLD EXCITEMENT.—There is scarcely anything of importance to report this week from the gold diggings. Richardson's mine is still closed, and will probably not be reopened for a week or two. Meanwhile, however, "prospecting" has commenced in other localities and a large number of persons experienced in gold mining are at work in different parts of the back country.—Their explorations are by no means confined to Madoc, but Elzevir, Marmora, Hungerford and Tudor are included in the supposed gold region. That gold has been found in other places besides the Richardson farm, Madoc, is we believe beyond question. A very good specimen was shown us yesterday that came from Hungerford, and we have no reason to doubt that gold has been found in other places in Madoc.—Belleville Intelligencer.

THE MISSION TO ENGLAND.

(From a correspondent of the London Advertiser.)

SIR,—The eyes of the people of Canada and of the Maritime Provinces are now turned towards England, where the Imperial sanction must be given to Confederation to ensure its accomplishment. Thither members of the Cabinet from both sections of the Province are now hastening. Attracted, I address, therefore by their deep interest in the school question, it will be observed that the Superintendents of Education for both sections of the Province have also taken their departure. But while so many public men of British America are to be present in London in order to exert influence on the British Cabinet and Parliament in favor of Confederation, and to resist the machinations of those who are labouring to defeat it, I think I but re-echo the sentiments of the people of Canada West, when I say that their interests require the presence of the Hon. Geo Brown also in London. It strikes me as a most ungraceful act, on the part of the Cabinet, that they have not requested Mr. Brown to go. As the prime mover in bringing about Confederation it would have been but an act of courtesy had he been so requested. It seems to me, however, that the Liberal members of the Cabinet, who seem so eager to go themselves, and who have so ably filled their places through the cold courtesy taken by Mr. Brown in going into the Coalition to accomplish constitutional changes, ought to have demanded that this respect should have been made to Mr. Brown. This is certain, that the people of Western Canada will not feel satisfied unless Mr. Brown does go. There are curious rumours afloat about all sorts of promise changes in the guarantees to be given the Catholics of Upper Canada on the school question. I hold that the interests of Upper Canada demand that Mr. Brown should be there. If the jealousy of his late colleagues, and the neglect of those who so feebly represent Reform interests in the Cabinet, have prevented Mr. Brown from being attached to the delegation, I think it would now be a most judicious step for the Reform party, speaking en masse, to request Mr. Brown to go to England. A miserable jealousy in the coalition Cabinet prevented Mr. Brown from being named as one of the delegation to Washington last winter. People will recollect his firm attitude in defence of Canadian commercial interests then.

No British Canadian can be sent to England more powerful in Imperial political circles than Mr. Brown. His absence will be noted. If he were sent by the Reform party it would be a just rebuke to the Coalition. I am, yours truly,

H. J. HUBERTUS.

A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.

In the storm on Saturday or Sunday nights last, considerable damage was done the shipping interests at this port. The new piers being unfinished and only reaching up to the water's edge, several vessels in the darkness and the storm, failed to make the mouth of the harbor, but struck the, to them, invisible pier, with more or less disastrous results to themselves.—The Captain of Brighton, having cleared from Cobourg for Oswego, with lumber, was compelled by stress of weather to make for Port Hope, but failed to make the harbor, striking one of the piers, and was driven ashore a short distance west of the new harbor where she remained till the next day, when the storm continuing she went to pieces. She was a very old vessel and uninsured. The Helen, of Kingston

THE Subscriber respectfully informs the Commercial public of Canada and the British Provinces that he has at length succeeded, after yea s of experiment and research, in making a METAL PEN entirely impervious to rust from the acids contained in inks (especially as when used with Arnold's writing fluid), which for elasticity and smoothness of action over the poorest paper, stands unequalled — Being Electro-Carbonized, they will outlast six or eight ordinary Pens, and are guaranteed not to cut through the thinnest foreign letter paper. The manufacturer feels confident that where the Electro-Carbonized Pens have been tried they will supersede all other makes, and respectfully solicits a trial of them.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C W, Dec 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy is for the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

Fellow Men! right soon I the 31 mark known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who resided in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I brought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I ough for a bottle more I am happy to inform the public that she is now perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and a friend of mine who was the sufferer has been induced to use Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

HIGHLANDES' LETTER POSTING.

Queer scenes are to be seen at the Post-office at Wick, especially on Saturday evenings, when hundreds of letters are posted by the Highland fishermen. When the penny-postage was first established, our then worthy postmaster, Mr. Crai , had many a hard night's work among the Highlanders, who illustrated their prigging character by endeavoring to beat down the postage to a half-penny, alleging that the letter was a little one, and that the Highland post-master never charged more than a half-penny. From the out stations beyond the daily delivery they would come, and while one would ask if there was a letter for him, he would answer to the interrogatory as to his name, "Och, ye'll see it on the back of the letter," and on the name being at last communicated, and the information given that there was no letter for him, Donald often put the poser, "Do you think she will be the morn?" Donald has learned by experience, however; but at present it generally requires four Highlanders to complete the modus operandi of posting a letter. One brings it to the office, wrapped up in a piece of paper, a second precedes him and buys a stamp; handing the stamp to a third, he, after various licks and manipulations, gets her Majesty's head affixed to the letter; and the fourth after looking into the slit with considerable suspicion, cautiously lets it drop, and he whose four finish the performance by peeping down the slit to see that all is well with their missive. This may be seen almost daily, and especially on Saturday evenings.

The Ex-King of Naples.

A communication from Rome published in the official journal of Florence lately, announced that Francis II. intended shortly to quit the Pontifical States and embark at Civita Vecchia on board a vessel placed at his orders by the Spanish Government. He is also said to have already pronounced the dissolution of that somewhat fantastical ministry which he had allowed to remain in attendance on him at the Palazzo Farnese; and the motive of these extreme measures is said to be the violent chagrin which he felt at the defeat of Austria, and the recognition by that Power of the kingdom of Italy. The Debats notices these rumors and adds:—Some persons go even so far as to speak of the abdication of this prince in favor of Victor Emmanuel; but it is unnecessary to make any remark on the improbability of such a step. As to the departure of the ex-king, everything on the contrary seems to render it likely. The falling due of the convention of September, makes it more and more difficult for Francis II., to remain at Rome; and, on the other hand, the surrender of Venetia by Austria naturally deals the final blow to the hopes of restoration which he may have entertained. The treaty of peace just signed by Austria has dissipated many illusions.

RAILWAYS AND THE HOLY LAND.

The directors of the Smyrna Aidin railway have had surveys made for great extensions of their system. Smyrna will continue to be the chief station, and a new line, if executed, will pass to the north round the head of the gulf. It will then take an easterly course in the direction of Sardis and Philadelphia, but stops short of those once renowned cities, upon the ruined portals of which, in common with those of the other "seven churches in Asia," "Ichabod" may be written. The railway, on the other hand, strikes southward in the direction of Ephesus, will be reached by a branch line. The projected main-trunk takes an easterly course from Aidin, to which it has already been opened. In its route it will touch at, or pass by, Antioch, in Pisidia, Laodicea, Colossæ, and Hierapolis. Pergamos and Thyatira are to the north of the northern extension. The company is at present in an impecunious condition, and the extensive works are postponed for an indefinite time. The revenue is expected to be derived from the carriage of cotton, wool, and other produce of the country, and from passenger traffic.

FATTENING STOCK.—Stock, says the Rural World, will fatten better in the dark than in the light,—better in the fall (on account of the longer nights) than in the summer. With less food more weight can be secured in the dark than in the light. Experiments have sufficiently demonstrated this. The pig-pen should be dark; we have often seen it made so with the most effect in favor of the fattening of stock. It is known that light toughens the tissue. For a work-horse, the sun is excellent; for the working man the same; but not for the accumulation of fat. Yet how few people take advantage of these things.

THE PRINTERS OF ITALY.—A typographical festival is to take place at Milan, in honor of the memory of Panfilo Castaldi, who invented moveable type. The intention of Castaldi will be immortalized by a monument, the work of a Milanese sculptor, Giuseppe Corti. An Italian paper says: "We have reason to believe that the printers of all the Italian cities will be represented at this festival, which is to do homage to one of the glories of Italy.

THE POTATO ROT.—A Utica correspondent of the Albany Cultivator says that, while nearly all the old sorts of potatoes, and most of the imported, in that district are badly diseased—the New Harrison, Early Goodrich and Gleason have passed the ordeal almost unscathed. Out of about 16,000 seedings, originated and tested by Mr. Goodrich, for a term of years he succeeded in raising three or four kinds that seldom show the least trace of disease.

DON'T DO IT.—A horticultural committee at Warsaw, Ill., recommended the destruction of the following birds:—Cedar bird, Baltimore Oriole, blue jay, brown trush, robin, red bird, red-headed woodpecker, and sapsucker. They don't destroy insects enough to compensate for the fruit they consume. We differ with that committee. It is known that the young of some of these birds eat more than their weight of insects per day.

APPLE BORERS.—All who have young trees should look out at this time, for the borer, which nestles in the bark just above the ground. It does not like the pointed application of a sharp instrument, which should be carefully used in destroying them. Do not delay the operation.

The mills are now busy making molasses from the Connecticut sorghum crop. It is of an excellent quality and sells for $1.50 per gallon.

A house negroes are constantly being arrested for outrages of a most bloody character.

SEWING MACHINES!

CRAHAM & STRATTON
Have been appointed Agents for the County of Peterborough, for the sale of

C. IRWIN & CO'S
Sewing Machines.

These Machines have taken first prizes at the Provincial Exhibitions at Kingston, Hamilton and London; and also a first prize and diploma at the Provincial Exhibition at Montreal, 1865.

C. I. & Co. have got the reputation for making the

Best Shuttle Sewing Machines

in Canada; as they have been for the last 12 years in the Sewing Machine business, and connected with the best class manufacturers in the United States; they claim to be thoroughly acquainted with the manufacture and adjusting, and the operating of the best Machines heretofore offered to the public.

These Machines are offered to Tailors, Dressmakers, Milliners, Manufacturers of light Leather work, and to those desirous of introducing into their families a Machine which will give perfect satisfaction upon light or heavy, coarse or fine work, using with equal ease cotton, silk, or linen thread, and having all the attachments required for hemming, felling, gathering, tucking, corduing, ruffling, braiding, binding, fulling, as well as for plain stitching.

☞ Every Machine is warranted for one year if used with proper care.

AQUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents,

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "owler" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or in any way oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" • • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life."
REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" • • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me."
REV. C. S. MILLWOOD New York City.

" • • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.
JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" • • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.
C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." She have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some au port from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."
J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."
J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Adams, Wells, Fargo's and Barnden's Express

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.
ED. SEELY."

Glastenbury, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and painters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the senate, and to the lady belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics it contains no mineral poisons to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing. It eradicates scurf and dandruff. It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy. It prevents hair turning gray and falling off. It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads. This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store in it does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All inconsistencies dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

VIA VITÆ.

Link ye to me my auld gudeman,
And dinna hurrying gang,
Ye're nae doot tired as weel as I;
But we'll win hame ere lang.
The swaws o' eild are on our pows,
And hard we find the grun';
But we are in the hithe, gudeman,
And caresna for the wun'.

'Tired morn, gudewife, when we set out,
Baith laughing brisk and gay;
Sometimes we ran sometimes we gaed,
Whiles deckled on the way.
Our limbs are no ase souple noo,
We e'en maun creep's we may;
We've loupit mosey a barn gudewife
And breistit mony a brae.

And strappin' lads I wat, gudeman,
And mony a sonsy quean,
We've left upon the road behind,
And never mair hae seen.
For some have wandered aff the way,
And gane they kenna where;
And some have stachered into holes,
Or ta'en to bogs to lair.

Like mony mair were we, gudewife,
We didna hain our strength;
But ca'd the road frae side to side,
Nor counted on its length.
Fell tired grew I gin afternoon
Wi' you lang dreary howe,
And thankfu' was I when I faud
The sma'est wee bit knowe,

Troth, lang has been the road, gudeman,
Sair saddled have we been;
But we've had sunny glints, I wat—
Viewed mony a gowden scene.
And tho' we've had our share o' weel,
And lowdered deep in glaur,
We're seen as foul feet as our aith—
And scores a haunfle waur.

Aweel, my ain gudewife, this read,
Had it no been for you—
Whase hopin' word aye heesed my heart—
I ne'er had warsled thro'.
But now we're near the journey's end,
The night begins to fa',
The starns are gatherin' i' the lift—
We'se eithly stoit awa'.

Link close to me, my ain gudeman;
I whiles might tak' the woe,
And fash ye wi' my tapitum tigs—
Aut only for a wee.
Now that's a' ower, and we'll jog on
The gither a' the same,
And lang afore the dawn o' day
We'll baith get rest at hame.

Miscellaneous.

THE POISONED POWDER.

There are various traditions as to the origin of the Golden Lily upon the shield of France. Among these is the following incident, said to have occurred in the latter part of the eleventh century, during the reign of Philip Augustus.

The Prince was only fifteen when he ascended the throne; but the strong hand with which he seized the reins of Government, awing the turbulent nobles, and protecting the common people against their aggressors, soon convinced them that he was not to be despised for his youth.

Though by this course he greatly endeared himself to the mass of his subjects, his life was more than once threatened, and even attempted; but these plots invariably originated among the haughty nobles, when restive under the restraints imposed upon them by the King's strong arm, and his just and kindly heart.

In the summer of the eleventh year of his reign, weary of the cares of state, Philip retired, with his court, to his royal residence at Chaumont, which was a favorite resort to him.

Among his train was Geoffrey, Count de Neville, the natural son of Louis VII, the King's half brother. He was a mild and inoffensive man, apparently well contented with the title and estate conferred by the late King upon his mother, and which he had inherited upon her death. but, unfortunately, he had married a haughty, ambitious woman, who was but ill-inclined to forego her claims to royalty.

At the death of Louis she openly asserted that there had been a secret marriage between him and the late Countess de Neville, and upon the head of her son should rest the crown of France, he being the eldest born, and urged her husband to assert his claims. But this the Count refused to do, being ill-fitted by nature to act a part requiring more than the usual energy and ability, besides entertaining too strong an affection for the young King, who had treated him with unusual kindness, to seek to deprive him of his rightful inheritance.

If Philip heard of the pretensions which the Countess set forth, he manifested no outward token of displeasure or distrust.—On the contrary, he gave his brother many evidences of regard, appointing him to honorary offices near his person, although he took care that they conferred but little power.

This was a new source of grievance to the haughty Countess, who never released the idea of becoming a Queen, and had fondly imagined that, on account of Philip's youth, his brother would obtain such a strong ascendancy over his mind as would make him king in reality, if not in name.

This disappointment was felt with increased bitterness when she became the mother of a son in whom she centred all her ambitious hopes, and all the love she was capable of feeling for any one.

Unlike our modern fine ladies, the dames of high degree of that remote period were early risers; and the Countess de Neville often took rides on horseback before the dew was off the grass, unattended except by her groom, who kept a respectable distance, just near enough to be within call, should his lady require assistance.

One morning she paused in front of a little cottage, situated in a perfect wilderness of bloom. As an involuntary ejaculation of surprise and admiration escaped her lips, a pretty, intelligent looking girl raised her bright eyes from the rosebush she was pruning.

'I have some handsomer within, arranged in boquets,' she said, smiling, 'if madame would like to examine them.'

Throwing the reins of her horse to her attendant, the Countess alighted, much to the surprise of the scritor, who had never known her haughty mistress to be guilty of so much condescension before.

As the Countess entered the little, low, room, the pretty flower girl displayed her beautiful collection of boquets with pardonable pride.

'All or any of them are at your service with the exception of this,' she said, pointing to one composed of golden lilies and white Roses, and relieved by a few leaves of green; 'it is for the King.'

'And so King Philip loves the flowers, pretty maiden?'

'Yes, madame; I have orders to bring them to the palace daily. The golden lily is his favorite flower, and there are only those in bloom to day.'

'I will take this,' said the Countess, selecting one of the boquets, and taking from her purse a gold piece of more than double the value. 'But first bring me a cool draught of water from the spring, yonder.'

With a light step the young girl took a pitcher and passed to the spring, which was but a short distance from the door. As she glided by the window, on returning, she glanced in and saw, much to her surprise, her visitor bending over the stand of flowers, and apparently sprinkling something from her hand upon these that she had laid aside for the King. When she took it away, her eye caught a gleam of small golden glash, such as the ladies of that period used for their cosmetics and perfumers. But when she entered the room, she found her in the same position in which she had left her.

She could not forbear an exclamation of surprise, as she observed how deadly pale was her countenance.

'Tis but the odor of the flowers,' said the Countess, as, drawing her robes around her, she turned towards the door.

'Take my advice, my good girl; place the stand nearer the window, and be not much over them; their perfume is quite too strong for so small a room.'

There was something about these words carelessly spoken though they were, that deepened the undefined suspicions in the young girl's heart; and, following her suggestion, she placed the stand of flowers directly in front of the window. Then, by a close examination of the boquet destined for the king, she detected the presence of a fine white powder, so impalpable to the eye upon the lilies, whose peculiar shape, by exposing the leaves to the full rays of the sun, as well as their vivid coloring, threw it into strong relief; and as she bent over them the faint but penetrating ordor that arose, made her so giddy that she would have fallen, had it not been for the tall and shapely youth who had just entered, and whose livery showed him to be in the service of the king.

It was her lover, Francois, King Philip's body servant, and who, passing by the house, called to have a chat with his betrothed.

'How now, Marie?' he said, looking into her face. 'What has frightened the rose from her cheek, and given you such a strange look?'

The honest hearted fellow was sincerely attached to his royal master, and he listened gravely to Marie's account of the strange conduct of her visitor, and the suspicious to which it gave rise.

'It has a bad look,' he said thoughtfully; 'though I believe there is nothing in it. By good luck, I have orders to attend His Majesty in his private apartments an hour hence. I will put him on guard; then sure no harm can come of it.'

Somewhat to the surprise of Francois the king manifested no disquietude at this disclosure, though the grave look and attentive manner with which he listened, showed that he considered it of no light import. He bade him charge Marie to tell no one what she had discovered, but to come to the palace with her flowers an hour earlier than was her wont, by no means forgetting her golden lilies.

King Philip sat in his audience hall, surrounded by his retinue. A number of the royal family stood near him—among them the Count de Neville, his wife, and the little son, a sweet boy of three, whose winning and sprightly ways made him a favorite with the king.

'And please your Majesty, Marie, the flower girl is waiting without,' said one of the guard.

'Admit her,' said the king.

Marie had never seen King Philip in his robes of state, and the royal pomp that surrounded him impressed her with a feeling of awe as she entered. But this was quickly dissipated by the King's gracious manner as he bade her approach.

'I see you have not forgotten my favorite flower,' he said, taking the basket from her hand.

'Just admire these queenly lilies, fair Countess, and inhale the fragrance of the roses.'

'But why do you start and turn pale, he added, to, with an involuntary shudder she drew back from the flowers he would have placed in her hand.

'I—I crave your Majesty's pardon,' she stammered; 'but the odor of the rose affects me thus.'

The king's eyes followed the Countess, as she retreated to the window, at the farther end of the hall, under the pretext of obtaining air. He then fixed them searchingly on the face of her husband, whose mind seemed to be entirely occupied by the laughing boy he held in his arms.

Attracted by the bright color of the lilies, the child stretched out its hand for them. A sudden thought struck the king as he observed this.

'See how eagerly Louis is regarding them!' he said, turning to the Count. 'Let him have them.'

With a fond smile the father took the flowers and held them before the boy, who, catching them with both his dimpled hands, raised them with a gleeful shout to his lips.

Instantly a deadly pallor overspread his face, and, with a faint gasp, he fell dead in his father's arms.

The Countess had kept a furtive watch on the king's movements from her retreat, and, forgetting everything in her terror, sprang forward to arrest her husband's arm.

'Monster!' she exclaimed, glaring upon him like a tigress robbed of her young, 'you have destroyed your child!'

'And you,' said Philip, pointing significantly to the flowers, still clasped in the child's rigid fingers, 'you would have murdered your king!'

'Is that the woman that called at your cottage this morning,' he inquired, turning to Marie.

'The same, your Majesty.'

As soon as the Count comprehended the full meaning of these words, he cast a look of horror and detestation upon his wife, then, taking his dead boy, he laid him on the pile of cushions at the king's feet.

'I can lay before you no stronger proof sire,' he faltered, 'that I was ignorant of this plot against your life.'

As Philip looked upon the still, sweet features of the child, and then upon his father, his eyes softened.

'You are right. God knows I would fain have spared your loyalty such a severe test.'

'I wish you all to bear witness,' he said, addressing those around him, 'that I fully exonerate Count de Neville from all complicity with his wife in this attempt upon the life of your king.'

'As to you,' he added, turning to the guilty woman, 'I give you twenty days to leave the kingdom. If, after that time, you are found in my domains, you shall suffer the penalty of your crime.'

King Philip did not forget the debt of gratitude he owed to Marie and his faithful attendant. He was present at the marriage, which occurred a few days after, bestowing a dowery on the bride, and other marks of favor; and ever afterwards, in commemoration of his Providential deliverance, he bore upon his shield the 'Golden Lily.'

The Noble Earl and the Honest Farmer.

A farmer once called on the late Earl Fitzwilliam to represent that his crop of wheat had been seriously injured in a field adjoining a certain wood, where his lordship's hounds had, during the winter, frequently met to hunt. He stated that the young wheat had been so cut up and destroyed that in some parts he could not hope for any produce. "Well, my friend," said his lordship, "I am aware that we have done considerable injury; and if you can produce an estimate of the loss you have sustained I will repay you." The farmer replied that, anticipating his lordship's consideration and kindness, he had requested a friend to assist him in estimating the damage, and they thought, as the crop seemed quite destroyed, fifty pounds would not more than repay him. The Earl immediately gave him the money. As the Harvest, however, approached, the wheat grew and in some parts of the field which were most trampled the corn was strongest and most luxuriant. The farmer went again to his lordship, and, being introduced, said, "I am come, my lord, respecting the field of wheat adjoining such a wood." His lordship immediately recollected the circumstance. "Well, my friend, did I not allow you sufficient to remunerate you for your loss?" Yes, my lord, I find that I have sustained no loss at all, for where the horses had most cut up the land the crop is the most promising; and I have, therefore, brought the fifty pounds back again."—"Ah!" exclaimed the venerable earl, "this is what I like; this is as it should be between man and man." He then entered into conversation with the farmer, asking him some questions about his family—how many children he had, &c. His lordship then went into another room, and, returning, presented the farmer with a cheque for one hundred pounds, saying. "Take care of this, and when your eldest son is of age present it to him, and tell him the occasion that produced it." We know not which to admire the more, the benevolence or the wisdom displayed by this illustrious man; for, while doing a noble act of generosity, he was handing down a lesson of integrity to another generation.

RELIGIOUS STATISTICS.—In Ireland, the Roman Catholics constitute four-fifths of the population; in British America two-fifths; in the United States, one-tenth; in Russia, in Europe, one-ninth; in Prussia and other German States, one-third in Holland, one-third. In Great Britain (exclusive of Ireland), they are one and a half millions out of twenty-three millions; in France, thirty-five out of thirty-seven; in Austria, twenty-seven out of thirty-five; in Switzerland, one out of two and a half; in Italy, twenty-one out of twenty-two. Of the thirty millions of Mexico, Central America, and South America, nearly all are Roman Catholics. The same is true of Portugal with its four millions, Spain with its sixteen and a half millions, and Belgium with its four and a half millions. In Norway, Sweden, and denmark, there are but six thousand Roman Catholics among a population of eight millions. The entire Catholic population of the globe is about one-hundred and eighty-five millions; the entire Protestant population, about ninety-five millions.

CUTE BUSINESS.—It is announced in England that an extensive business is carried on there in hunting up portraits for Americans, in order to make galleries of ancestors. An American agent recently in London explained that his business was to collect ancestors, and that he had been quite successful, having picked up many good portraits, and that "with proper alteration to costume and age, and some little heraldic additions, he had matched suitable husbands and wives for two or three generations, and had exported several very well assorted families, when, being provided with full credentials, were most filially adopted, and that he was continuing in highly remunerative researches."

"Will you take the life of Sherman, ma'am, said a Boston bookseller to Mrs. Partington, as she eyed the contents of his shelves." "Land o' Goshen, no!" replied the old lady; "Why should I? The General never molested me."

Antiquity of the Apple.

Mrs. Hayte Bernald, author of "Old Common Fruit," a descriptive account of the fruits ordinarily cultivated or commonly in England, brings a careful study of antiquarian lore to the discussion of her subject. The following is a pleasant story about apples:—

"As the tree grows wild throughout almost the whole of Britain, and as the name, apple (in Celtic Abbal) is considered by the best authorities to be derived from the pure Celtic ball signifying a round body, it is more probable that it is indigenous to this country than that it was introduced, as some have thought by the Romans.—From time immemorial it has been the badge of the Highland clan Lamont, and in the earliest times a branch of apple was the mark of distinction on the Welsh bards who most excelled in ministrelsy.

In Saxon times we find William of Malesbury distinguishing that it was under a wild apple-tree that King Edgar once, in the year 973, lay down to sleep, which would seem to imply the existence of a domesticated kind also, and after the conquest traces of its culture soon appear, for a bull of Pope Alexander, bearing the date 1173, confirms to the monastery of Winchcombe, in Gloucestershire, their claims on the town of Twining, with all its lands and orchards. In the course of time varieties were probably introduced from Normandy and other parts of the Continent though little information on the subject is to be gathered from early writers on fruit cultivation; but the oldest existing variety on record in England is that which Philips apostrophizes as a tenure in the country of Norfolk dated A. D. 1200, having been held by the yearly payments of two hundred Pear meines and four hogsheads of Pear meine cyder. The derivation of this name, according to Hogg, is similar to that of Charlemagne (sometimes written Charlemaine), meaning, therefore 'Pyrus magna,' or the great pear apple, the shape bearing some resemblance to that of a pear. By the time of Henry III., Worcester had become famous for its fruit trees, and cider orchards in Herefordshire date from the days of Henry VIII; when also as Fuller informs us, one Leonard Maschal brought 'pippins' from over sea, and planted them at Plumstane in Sussex; while so important had their culture become, that in the thirty-seventh year of the same king the barking of apple trees was declared to be felony.

"The fair Pear-maine, Tempered, like comeliest nymph, with white and red,"

"It was not, however, till the time of Charles I. that orcharding, as it was called, became general throughout this country, and the 17th century may be looked on as the Golden Age of apples. Evelyn published an appendix to his Sylva, under the title of "Pomona," which did much to bring the subject under public attention; and by the exertions of the first Lord Scudamore, Herefordshire in particular became as it had been expressed, "one entire orchard."—This gentleman, being in the company of the Duke of Buckingham when he was assassinated by Felton, received such a shock from witnessing this catastrophe, that he retired into private life and devoted all his energies to the culture of fruit. That kind to which he gave most attention was a variety believed to have originated during the seventeenth century, and which was at first called the "Scudamore Crab," but afterwards the "Redstreak." It was Evelyn's favorite also; and, indeed, so much was said and written about it during that century that a modern author, leaving out of view evidently the fatal gift of Paris and all that grew therefrom, ventures the bold remark concerning it that "perhaps there is no apple which at any period created such a sensation." Philips, of Splendid Shilling celebrity, who wrote an entire poem in Virgilian measure upon Cyder, which had also the honor of being translated into Italian, in this very apotheosis of apples thus exalts the idol of the day:—

"Let every tree in every garden own
The Redstreak as supreme, whose pulpous fruit
With gold irradiated and vermillion shines,
Tempting, not fatal, as the birth of that Primeval interdicted plant that won Fond Eve in Ladies haste to taste and die.
This, of more bounteous influence, inspires
Poetic raptures, and the lowly muse
Climbs to loftier strains: even I perceive
Her sacred virtue. Lest the numbers flow
Easy, whilst cheered with her nectarious juice:
Hers and my country's praises I exalt."

"Alas for the power of fashion even in the matter of apples! The Redstreak is now held but in slight esteem.

MUSIC AT HOME.—Every woman who has an appetite for music or for singing, should bless God for the gift and cultivate it with diligence—not that she may dazzle strangers, or win applause from a crowd, but that she may bring gladness to her own fireside. The influence of music in strengthening the affections is far from being perceived by many of its admirers; a sweet melody binds all hearts together, as it were with a golden chord; it makes that pulses beat in unison, and the heart thrill with sympathy. But the music of the fireside must be simple and unpretending; it does not require brilliancy of execution, but tenderness of feeling—a merry tune for the young—a more subdued strain for the aged, but none of the noisy clap-trap which is so popular in public. It is a mistake to suppose that to enjoy music requires great cultivation. The degree of enjoyment will, of course, vary with our power of appreciation, but like all other great influences, it is able to attach even the ignorant. And this is what the sports taught when they made Orpheus and his brethren the civilizers of the earth.

EXCUSES.—What frivolous excuses are heard from men from whom better things might be expected for not attending church on the Lord's day, not laboring in the Sabbath-school, not taking a religious paper, not reading the Scriptures, and for the neglect of sundry other duties calculated to elevate a man in the scale of moral and christian excellence.

Disgraceful Scenes in a Church.

The Bridgewater (England) Mercury recounts the particulars of a disgraceful scene which occurred one Sunday in October in Northmoor Green Church. Mr. Hunt commenced the morning service some time after eleven o'clock, and proceeded for some time in the ordinary way, when it was suddenly interrupted by a great commotion being observed near the door, immediately followed by a loud burst of laughter and a stamping of feet, the evident intention being to create as much noise as possible. The cause of this tumult was the entry into the Church of two women and four men, attired in what they designated their 'restaurats.' These consisted for the most part of several pieces of paper, either pinned or sewn together, in the form of a cloak, and intended to represent a cape (similar to that worn by Mr. Hunt in his 'high celebrations').—The paper was of various colors, and consisted of strips of paper-hangings. On the back in the gayest colors, were pieces of paper arranged in the form of a large cross. Pieces of large placards, printed on different colored paper, pages of illustrated periodicals, &c., fastened together, helped to complete the costume. One man wore a high 'cardinals hat,' made of yellow paper; another had strips of colored paper attached to his cap, in imitation of a peacock, and were in front an immense placard, "Scottish Life Insurance,' while behind was another large placard, 'Sanger's Celebrated Hippodrome.'

The two women are named Ellen Sweet and Ann Bird, and the four men were Holt, Tothill, John How, Edward Kitch and Parsons. Immediately after the entrance of these persons there was a large accession to the congregation of the people who had followed in 'the procession.' There was a complete interruption to the service, and Mr. Hunt called a constable to seat himself beside the pulpit. On leaving the pulpit, Mr. Hunt proceeded to the vestry, where he attired himself in his Popish habiliments, and again came forth, preceded by his server, who bowed low in front of the altar table each time he passed it. The boy, having lit the candles Mr. Hunt knelt down, when there immediately ensued a loud noise caused by scuffling and stamping of feet, and coughing with some laughter. Incense was next burnt, and directly this was commenced the uproar became very great. Some put on their hats. The bulk of the members of the congregation, no longer content with stamping their feet began to hiss and hoot and got excited.—Cries were also raised of 'Put it away!' 'Go to Rome!' In concluding the service, and before partaking of the 'consecrated elements,' Mr. Hunt lifted the vessel with both hands over his head, upon which some hissing took place. Himself and his server were the only communicants. Most of the congregation, after leaving the church, remained outside, and waited for some time before Mr. Hunt appeared, when he was saluted with cries of 'Go to Rome!' 'How many stamps have'ee had sent to 'ee?' &c. Mr. Hunt was escorted from the spot by three constables.

MORE GOLD FOUND.

The Press need no longer hesitate about announcing an important discovery of Gold in the County of Hastings, for there is no uncertainty as to the fact. So many reported discoveries of this kind turn out to be canards, or at least of little importance either to the Province at large or the locality more particularly interested, that it is prudent not to be over-credulous. But the visit and report of Mr. Vennor, of Sir William Longan's Staff, proves that exceedingly rich deposits of Gold have been found in this instance, and if the seams or crevices in which they have been found turn out to be extensive, the discovery will have a most important influence upon the public prosperity. The Township of Madoc is the immediate theatre of discovery, and it would appear that the precious metal was first found by parties who were searching for copper. It is well known that this district is rich in minerals, both Iron and Copper ore being obtainable; no traces of Gold, however, were found until recently. The prospectors first came upon it in a crevice between two rocky hills. One authority describes the "pocket" or crevice to be seven feet wide and seventeen feet deep. It is filled with soft black earth and coarse sand, in which the Gold is found.—Of the richness of these deposits, the statement of Mr. Vennor is as follows and may be relied upon as correct:—

"We found that the metal was chiefly enclosed in soft black coaly earth, mixed largely with a coarse sand or fine gravel—at the same time, more or less was found intermingled with a ferruginous earth, also filling the same crevice with the former.—Samples of the earth have been procured, which yielded nearly one ounce of fine gold, to one pint by measure of the earthy gravel; and again, twice the quantity of earth has only yielded half the above quantity of metal."

In point of richness the above brings Australia and California to mind, but it is to be feared that the vein will not prove extensive, or that the degree of richness will be greatly less than the above. The opinion of the Geologists seems to be that the crevice found will prove simply an accidental "pocket" no traces of Gold having been found by them in the surrounding rocks. Several of the local journals, however, think otherwise. The editor of the Bellville Chronicle states that he has seen specimens from three different places, which averaged from eight to ten penny-weights to the ounce of dirt; there were taken from a sort of dark brown earthy stone, which closely resembles burnt or rotten quartz. From the circumstances that the Gold is found in this kind of stone, the theory of the Geologists that the Gold has been washed in by "infiltation," is disputed.

Whether the "Mines" (if we call them such) prove extensive or not, it is certain that they are causing considerable excitement in North Hastings and the adjoining districts. The village of Madoc has been quithronged of late with visits from speculators, miners and others, among whom the inevitable yankee is not the least conspicuous. It is reported that a farmer by the name of Richardson, who lives five miles North of Madoc, and on whose farm Gold has been discovered, has sold 22 acres of land to a Boston Company for $40,000 in American gold. This report can be relied upon as correct, and further sales and purchases of land in the vicinity are understood to have taken place. It is too late this Fall to make a thorough test of this and other claims, but in the Spring there is every reason to believe the work be gone into energetically. Should the present expectations entertained in Madoc be then realized, there will no doubt be a great rush for the "diggings," and the country suffer an attack of Gold "fever" such as we have not previously experienced.

The probability is, however, that extravagant expectations will remain unrealized. Gold in seldom found in such quantities as will pay to procure it, except by the aid of machinery. This is the position of affairs now on the Chemahore and its tributaries, and it is doubtful if the Madoc discoveries will prove more valuable than the former. There ought to be no undue speculation or excitement. A short time will prove the extent and value of the Gold-bearing earth or quartz, and until then the less money risked the better.—Trade Review.

MR. McGEE AND HIS SAYINGS.

A gentleman in Montreal writes to the Globe that he attended a Concert at which the Hon. T. D. McGee was a speaker, and that Mr. McGee in his speech said things most unworthy of a minister of the Crown. The following are the words of the letter in so far as the charge against Mr. McGeee is concerned:—

"Speaking of the State trials at present going on, he said that some of his countrymen were found guilty and sentenced to death; that there was not one present felt the pressure of that sentence more than he did; that actually his blood ran cold in his veins on hearing that the blood of his countrymen was to be poured out on a Canadian scaffold. He also stated that he had documents upon documents in his possession to prove that there were among us men who deserved to be in company with those men already doomed, but he kept it secret, and stood between them and the justice of the law; and wound up by saying he should not have spoken thus."

These are strong expressions to be used by a Canadian Minister, and take what view we may, unless the matter can be cleared and a different meaning drawn from those words than they now convey, Mr. McGee places himself in a very strange position indeed. Can it be possible that Mr. McGee is a Fenian sympathiser, that secretly but really he was aiding and abetting those cut-throats that have been convicted of an attempt to subvert the government of the country of which he is a sworn Minister, and that while he is pretending to discountenance all such cowardly and murderous designs as the Fenians had in view, he is attending meetings and in some state or other fanning flames of disloyalty. He, one would think, suffered enough through the follies of his youth.—Even the strongest feelings for his countrymen, accompanied by ever so strong a desire to save them from an ignominous death, should not get the better of his judgment so as to induce him to say one word that could be construed into sympathy for them, and if he uttered these words attributed to him, he should be called upon at once to resign his place, not only as a member of the Crown, but as a member of Parliament. Some journals insinuate that his tongue was under certain influences of which he, in company with some other Ministers, has been accused and convicted by public opinion. This, however, is a very poor excuse for a gentleman in his position, and what a humiliating position it is for a Minister of the Crown to be incapable of selecting words of soberness and loyalty. Mr. McGee has telegraphed to the Globe, saying that the very opposite of his remarks had been reported. This, however, is not at all likely; indeed it is more likely that he does not know what he did say. It is much to be regretted that Mr. McGee should so mar his usefulness and destroy himself by any word or deed that could be construed into sympathy with Fenians, as that is tantamount to being one with them.

LOWER CANADA.

The Protestant Teacher's Association of Lower Canada are about to send a petition to the Queen asking certain privileges in connexion with the Educational system of Lower Canada. Privileges, they say, similar to those enjoyed by their brethren in Upper Canada. And among those things that the Imperial Parliament will insert some clause in the Confederation scheme that will guarantee them all they require. They have sent Mrt Galt to look after their interests in England, and Bishop Heran is gone to look after the matter for the Roman Catholics. What a humiliating position our Ministers have placed themselves in, by promising guarantees, and changes that were contrary to the compact agreed upon at the Quebec conference, and which are opposed to progress and liberal principles, Lower Canada bound the chain of a Separate School system on us by sending men to represent her who voted for everything a certain party asked for, and surely they will be as safe after Confederation as they have been before it. We trust that nothing will be admitted into the terms of Confederation that will prevent each local government of, dealing with every question that shall affect their locality for which it is to legislate; and it is to be regretted that the Association should attempt to introduce anything that will, if admitted, mar the harmony of the Confederate Assembly.

GOLD! GOLD!!

During part of last week the excitement here, concerning the great gold discovery, ran high. Several had been down to see for themselves and felt convinced that gold had been discovered and that it existed in paying quantities. Part of the earth in which it was said to exist was also brought and exhibited here. Some pretended to be certain that fortunes could easily be made, and they were preparing to go and make one if possible. From all we can gather from newspaper reports and other sources, gold has been discovered in some quantity, or a great deception is being practised. None of those reports inform us very exactly of the richness of the mines from actual observation. All our information is second-hand even to the narrator, for every now and again it is said, appears to be the foundation of their reports.

Another fact worth knowing is, that geologists doubt the existence of gold in large quantities at Madoc, and one, the correspondent of the Globe informs us, went so far as to say that no gold could exist in such a formation. This may or may not be true. One thing is certain—that extensive operations cannot be carried on during the winter. The only thing that can be done is to secure claims and make preparations for work as early in spring as the opening of the season will permit. In the meantime it is wisdom to wait patiently the developements that may take place. If gold be found in paying quantities it will give an impetus to the trade of that part of the county in which it shall be discovered, no doubt; and it may extend itself even unto us, for our own county contains many indications of precious metals. Sheriff Hall showed us a piece of quartz brought from the Town-ship of Burleigh, that to a novice, at least, appears to contain something very like gold; and Mr. Probert, Reeve of Galway, informs us that abundance of such earth as was brought from Madoc could be dug up in the rear of this county. We do not say these are sure indications of the existence of gold in our county, yet who knows but that the indications are as good as those in Hastings. If prospecting be carried on to any extent around Madoc it will extend to our county very soon and if gold be not the result, perhaps something as remunerative may be, for gold mines are not always the most remunerative. Let our readers, however, be not led away too far with the reports of "Old Miners" or their expectations.' We have known some "Old Miners" who were always at the "Heap" these several years, but somehow have not got their hand in yet—still "sanguine," yet never realising. He that maketh haste to be rich falleth into divers temptations.

FENIANS IN IRELAND.

Late Telegrams bring the intelligence of some serious outbreak in the distracted country. Stephens' promises that a blow would be struck in Ireland before 1867 may be realised. But as all telegraphic news comes through the American hands before reaching us, we cannot yet tell what the rumour may turn out to be. The following are the latest telegrams up to our going to press:—

LONDON, Nov. 27, noon.—The Fenians trouble in Ireland have assumed considerable proportions, and there is no doubt that a serious outbreak has occurred.

Two Regiments of the national troops were urgently ordered to Ireland yesterday, and transports were being prepared all last night at Portsmouth.

A large detachment of marines were also sent over to Queenstown on the war steamer Plymouth.

A gunboat at Chatham has been ordered to sail for Queenstown immediately.

Much alarm is felt at Cork and throughout Ireland generally.

The London Times, this morning, believes that the chief organizer, Stephen's, will soon arrive on the scene, if he has not arrived already.

The Globe editorially thinks that a more serious trouble with the United States is really at the bottom of the Fenian outbreak.

Execution of James Mack.

James Mack, who was found guilty of the murder of Corporal Alfred Smith, of Field Battery Royal Artillery, was executed, in Montreal, on the 23rd instant. The crime was one of the most brutal and revolting imaginable. It was witnessed by Edward Joyce, who was cleaning acontrements in the same room, and was perpetrated between 5 and 6 o'clock, on the evening of the 2nd of July last. It appears that Mack and the deceased were in the same room, and that Mack put some question to Smith about what shoeing-smith was on duty, when the deceased arose and went to the window to speak to the smith, and while at the window Mack approached him from behind and drew a razor across his throat. The unfortunate man expired about five minutes afterwards. Mack was about 25 years of age, and had not been entirely without religious training, as he is said to have attended religious services with his father sometimes. Mack was a Roman Catholic, although his father was a Protestant—the son adopted the religious views of his mother. Father Villeneuve attended him during his last hours. A great crowd of the worst characters of the city witnessed the execution.

SYNOD OF ONTARIO.—In the Anglican Synod on Thursday last, a very spirited discussion took place on a motion of Mr. Patton, against "ritualistic" movements in England and Canada. It continued during the whole of Thursday and the greater part of Friday. Several of the clergy and bishop appearing to favor the new movement, while not a few opposed them. Mr. Patton's motion was amended so as to read, "That the Synod of this diocese desires emphatically to disclaim any sympathy with all extreme and unauthorised ritualism in England and Canada." Strange to say that at Kingston, as at Toronto lately, the people appear to oppose the great body of the ministers in their endeavors to introduce those forms and dresses complained of. The report in both the Globe and Leader of Monday and Tuesday is well worth reading.

A rumour was afloat in Montreal on Friday that Mr. McGee had resigned his position in the Cabinet because of his not being chosen to go to England as one of the delegation, as some would say. According to another report, because he had been snubbed for his rash words at Toronto, lately. The report, however, turns out not true.

A REAL "MINE" OF WEALTH.

While many are wasting their time and means in wild speculation or burying themselves about those things that are, to say the most of them, uncertain, too often they forget or neglect spheres of trade and commerce, that would open up unbounded mines of wealth, and instead of an uncertain, would yield a certain profit. The richest countries in the world are not those that produce the most gold or precious metals, as the history of the world most clearly attests. Mexico and Peru are far behind in civilization, security of person and property, and genuine wealth, those countries that were blessed with a fruitful soil and means of extensive commerce. In taking possession of the New World, the Spaniards and Portugese occupied the rich portions of the continent, where gold and silver abounded, while the French and English settled on the portions that were best fitted for agriculture, manufacturing, and commerce: and what is the result? While Mexico is almost in the pagan darkness and idolatory that they found it, and Peru very little better; the United States and British North America have kept pace with the civilization and progress of the old world, almost rivaling the foremost of the nations in learning, inventions and commerce; and now the United States claim rank with the most advanced nations of the earth, while the British North American provinces are assuming, by confederation, at least a second place among the nations.—Those countries, therefore, that produce most gold, are not the richest, on the contrary, they are the poorest, the people discontented, and in them there is the least security of person and property.—The British empire is the wealthiest in the world, and that not because of her gold mines, but because of her wealth accumulated through her manufactures and her extensive commerce. Her coal and her iron are sources of greater wealth to her, than would be the mines of Mexico or Peru.—Even those colonists of Spain and Portugal that settled in places suited to agriculture and commerce, are now in advance of those that coveted the gold-bearing mountains.

In British North America we possess all the sources of wealth and greatness that the parent empire does. We have iron and coal in abundance; we have an unrivalled water machinery for manufacturing and commercial purposes; and we possess a fertile soil that yields all the necessaries of life, capable of supplying a teeming population; our extensive timber fields are unequalled by any country in the world; our fisheries and the produce of our farms are mines of wealth surpassing the gold mines of California or British Columbia, and if we should add to these, manufacturing and a foreign trade, we would soon stand side by side with the great nations of the earth. All that is required to this end is to direct our trade and capital in a some what different direction from the present channels. Since the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty with the United States the attention of our statesmen and merchants has been directed to other fields of enterprize. They have been looking to the West Indies and Brazil, and there unbounded fields for trade open up to there view. All those immense tracts of country require our production, and we would be benefited by receiving the products of those countries. Heretofore the trade of those places, as far as we are concerned, has been carried on through the United States, American traders reaping the profits, of course.

But late investigations go to show that all that is wanted to bring the profits to Canadian merchants is a little Canadian enterprise in that direction. Brazil, in particular, presents an extensive field for such enterprise, an extensive trade, a large population, and in reasonable proximity to us—halfway, so to speak, to all the trade of the Pacific and Indian oceans; it is a most advantageous country to open up a trade with. In size it is as large as three-fourths of Europe, larger than China and Hindostan together, larger than the United States by 134,152 sqr. miles, and only 266,000 square miles less than British America. It contains 10,045,000 of a population and has an annual trade of over $126,000,000. It possesses a coast line of nearly 3,000 miles, and an internal steam navigation of nearly 2,430 miles on the Amazon alone. Its productions are also various and valuable. They include all tropical vegetables and fruit, many kinds of furniture and dye woods, medicinal drugs, gold, diamonds, &c., &c. The principal

EXPORTS

Are rum, cotton, sugar, hair, manilla, cocoa, coffee, hides, diamonds, tobacco, india rubber, rosewood, tea, &c., &c., and in 1863–4 this trade amounted to $64,735,350.

THE IMPORTS

Of 1863–4 were oil, fish, spirituous liquors, boots and shoes, meats, coals, hats, hides, drugs, flour, hardware, iron, earthen and glassware, machinery, butter, manufactures of cotton, woolen, linen, silks, &c., bullion, gold and silver ware, paper, powder, clothes, salt, wine, &c., amounting to $61,522,937, and of this the small sum of $791,090 appears to have been from the British North American colonies; while with the United States it was over $17,000,000.

To shew that the difficulties of opening up such a trade are not so insurmountable as many would be ready to imagine, we can give an example of what has been done in that way. Our enterprising townsman, D. Sutherland, Esq., shipped to Rio Janeiro this season some Canadian flour, and from a letter which he received in relation thereto, we find that the flour was considered equal to what is known as the best Philadelphia brand, and was worth 23 milreis per bbl., or about $12 65. The cost of the flour here was $6.50, freight to Montreal, 40c., thence to Rio Janeiro, $1.40, commission for selling, insurance, duty, &c., about $1.07; total cost at Rio Janeiro, $9.37, showing a net profit of $3.28, certainly a nice little sum it would be on an extensive transaction.

In the same letter, Mr. Sutherland is advised to commence a direct trade at once, and strong inducement (certain hopes of success) are held out to him.

In reference to this proposed trade, a letter appeared in the Anglo-Brazilian Times, a paper published in Rio Janeiro, which we give in another column and which deserves a perusal, as it shows that a beginning has been made, and a successful one, nor need there be any doubtful speculations about it. In regard to the flour trade, our commissioners remark, that the greatest care should be taken to send none but the best quality.—The consumers are the wealthy classes of the population, and while they are fastidious in their tastes, they are always ready to pay high prices for a really superior article, and none but flour prepared with great care and from selected dry or kiln dried wheat, such as will stand the moist heat of the tropics without deterioration should be shipped.—The Government of Brazil are very anxious to induce immigration to that country, and to this end are in communication with Mr. Sutherland. Liberal grants of land are offered to settlers—as much as 160 acres to each one at a cost of from 44 to 96 cents, according to location, &c. Time will be given to pay it, if required. In reference to this emigration scheme the Brazilian Times, in an address to the clergy of Ireland, says:

"Many applications have been made to me by landed proprietors in this country for the introduction of Irish farm-laborers to work upon their estates, I take the present means of asking the benevolent clergy of Ireland, and others interested in promoting the welfare of that class of labourers, to inform me whether families and single men of sober and steady habits will avail themselves of an opportunity to come to this country upon their passages being advanced to them, the cost, which may be about £13, to be deducted by instalments from the wages they will receive after arrival, which wages would be about £3 a month, with keep, for able-bodied men, others receiving a proportionate amount according to their ability.

The passage occupies about 30 days in the screw steam ra from Liverpool, by which vessels they probably would be brought.

The climate of Brazil is a healthy one for men not addicted to the abuse of ardent spirits and it is much more agreeable than that of the United States, the heat of summer never reaching the extremes so frequent there, and the winters, in like manner, having in this portion of the Empire much resemblance to an Irish summer, though somewhat warmer to the north and cooler in the south and interior, where frosts occasionally occur.

Land is very cheap either to rent, lease or buy, and if after gaining experience and saving money the emigrants desire to settle upon land of their own they will find it cheaper to effect, and their industry more productive of reward, than in the United States, while at the same time they can effect it without the necessity of withdrawing to any great distance inland to procure it, government land being still abundant within 200 and even fifty miles of the sea.

The State Religion of this country is Roman Catholic but all others are fully tolerated. If a sufficient number be settled in any locality it is the usual course of the Brazilian government to provide for them at its cost a clergyman of their communion and country.

The laws protecting person and property are equitable, and the government is stable and strong. Two years' residence entitles the emigrant to become naturalized and have a vote. When naturalized he continues exempt from conscription for the army, but is liable to do service within the bounds of the municipality (county) wherein he resides.

In Brazil the Irish emigrant will find kindness shown to him on every side, just as in his native land, and will experience nothing of the unconcealed contempt which the native American is apt to show "raw" Irishmen, until five years' residence has entitled them to vote.

Correction.

In our remarks on the Municipal Act we passed over in some way the 427th section which is as follows:—"This act shall take effect on the first day of January next, (A. D. 1867,) save and except so much thereof as relates to the nominating of candidates for municipal offices, and the passing of By-laws for dividing a municipality or any wards thereof, into electoral divisions, and appointing Returning officers therefor, which shall come into effect on the first day of November next. And also so much thereof as relates to the qualification of electors and candidates, which shall not take effect till the 1st of September, 1867."

St. Andrew's Dinner.

We are requested to state, by the Secretary of the St. Andrew's Society, that their usual annual dinner will be held this year in the Huffman House, on the 30th instant, St. Andrew's Day. We trust that every son of Scotia who can spare the time will make it his business to be present, and invite his friends.

Literary Club.

The Members are requested to meet punctually this evening, at eight o'clock, as business of importance will be brought before the meeting. The Directors are particularly requested to be present.

County Council.

There will be a special meeting of the County Council on Monday. The dilapidated state of the bridges over the Otonabee leading to Towu and other important business render a meeting necessary.

We are requested to intimate to Teachers and others who intend coming before the Board for examination, at the approaching meeting in December, that the examination of candidates for first and second class certificates will continue two days.

STEAMBOAT COLLISION ON ST. CLAIR.—On the evening of the 23rd inst., the steamer Milwaukee ran into the propeller Lac La Belle cutting her almost in two, and crushing her timbers like so much paper. The propeller reeled slightly, speedily filled and sank in about five minutes. Two lives were lost—the engineer and the waiter. The vessel was valued at $120,000, and was insured for $80,000.

BREECH-LOADERS.—Some quantity of Enfield Rifles altered to breech-loaders have arrived and will be destributed soon according to reports. The whole force of the country will, no doubt, be armed with those improved weapons very soon. The next time the Fenians come they will catch it.

A dastardly attempt was made on Saturday night to throw the down train off the track, near Prescott. A tie was laid across the track but fortunately was discovered in time to prevent any catastrophe.

CANDIA.—There has been a renewal of fighting in Candia. It is said that the Turks have been badly beaten, no less than 8,000 having been killed and 2,000 taken prisoners.

It is reported that the Empress Eugenie and her son will spend Christmas at Rome.

THE "LAST APPEAL."—The Fenians have been making "last appeals" for some time past. Another was issued in New York on Thursday, addressed to "men of Irish birth and all lovers of republican institutions everywhere." The burden of this "appeal" is, of course, the necessity of more money being supplied in order that war be carried on in Ireland, and it is promised again that hostilities will be commenced before the close of the year. The appellants declare that the success or failure of the struggle will depend in a great measure on the contributions made by the Irish in America, and they state that a committee which has been appointed, will shortly call upon all those from whom assistance is expected. Thus the dupes are to be made to bleed once more—on this occasion for the benefit of Stephens and the leaders of his faction who are in the ring along with him. If they endeavor to keep faith with their misguided followers, which few sensible people expect them to do, they will have an opportunity probably of making another "last appeal" with a rope around their necks.—Leader.

LOSS AT WATERLOO

Total of the British, Dutch and Prussian loss from the commencement of hostilities, June 15, 1815, to the close, June 26, 1815:—British, 11,716; Dutch, 4,136; Prussian, 33,120; total, 48,972.

The loss of the British and Hanoverrans in killed and wounded was acknowledged to be more than 12,000 men, but the official accounts seldom confine the actual loss, which, in the present instance, cannot be estimated at a smaller number than 20,000. The Prussians did not arrive till the affair was nearly decided, but the opposition they experienced, though short, was obstinate, and many were killed in the pursuit.

The last great effort of Bonaparte, notwithstanding the perseverance with which he had renewed his attacks on the British position, and the vast number of his best cavalry and infantry who fell in the struggle, he had still in reserve 15,000 men of his own guard, who, remaining on the ridge of La Belle Alliance, or behind it, had scarcely drawn a trigger during the action. But, about seven o'clock at night their Emperor determined to devote this proved and faithful reserve at his last stake, to one of those desperate games in which he had been frequently successful. His previous conduct had despirited the utmost resolution, wisdom, and intrepidity.

At the present moment he left the most distant point of observation which he had for some time occupied on the heights in the rear, and descending from the hill, placed himself in the rear of the line, fronting Mount St. John, and within about a quarter of a mile of the British line. Here he caused his guards to defile before him, and acquainted them that the English cavalry and infantry were entirely destroyed, and to carry their position they had only to sustain with bravery a heavy fire of their artillery. He concluded by pointing to the causeway and exclaiming, "This, gentlemen, is the road to Brussels." They answered him with a shout of enthusiasm, and the cry of "The Emperor for ever!" was distinctly heard as far as the British lines.

The allies imagined that Napoleon was about to attack them in person, and far from being intimidated, rejoiced that they would have an opportunity of shewing him of what the soldiers of Wellington were capable. The emperor, however, remained secure under the rising bank and his brave and devoted troops under the command of Ney, and ascended the eminence They marched on with a firm and steady step, and in dead silence. The fate of the battle—the fate of Europe—depended upon them. The fire of the allies abated, and with indescribable feelings of anxiety awe and admiration they contemplated the approach of the chosen troops of France, the battalions who were the terror of Europe and who had never yet been vanquished. But the pause was only momentary. Every cannon seemed to open at once on the foe, and swept whole ranks away; as the front ranks fell others, in an instant rushed forward to fill up the chasms, and with stern and unbroken front, the imperial guard continued to advance. Some Brunswickers first attempted to oppose them, but after an ineffectual resistance they were defeated with immense slaughter. The French penetrated within their lines. It seemed impossible for the duke to rally a sufficient force to arrest their progress. They carried everything before them, and once more, in this strange and eventful battle, the victory was Napoleon's. In a hollow of the ground immediately in front of the French and protected from the fire of their artillery lay a regiment of the British guards. The Duke of Wellington was close behind them. He had placed himself on a ridge, and declared that he would not move from it. This was sufficient to render a troops invincible. They would now, as Soult had justly declared, rather have suffered themselves to be cut in pieces than have exposed their beloved commander to peril. The redoubted imperial guards still advanced, they approached within a hundred yards, when the duke suddenly exclaimed, "Up Guards and at them." The unexpected apparition of this fine body of men startled the French battalions and they suddenly paused, but immediately recovering themselves, they advanced more rapidly. At a given signal, their artillery filed off to the right and left; they approached within twenty yards of their opponents, and were in the act of dashing upon them with the bayonet when a volley was poured upon them by the British, which staggered them and literally knocked them back with its shock. A second volley threw them into greater confusion, and ere they had time to deploy or to manœuvre, the British cheered and rushed upon them. They waited not to receive the attack, but suddenly turning fled in disorder. Napoleon saw the whole from the hollow in which he was concealed. He wished to rally the fugitives and lead them on to one effort more; but Bertrand and Drouet threw themselves before him, and representing how much the safety of France and the army depended on his life, besought him to forbear. Napoleon suffered himself to be persuaded and seeing that all was lost, hurried from that part of the field.—COM.

British N. America and Brazil.

To the Editor of the Anglo-Brazilian Times.

Sir, I would beg to draw the attention of the merchants of this city to a new source of trade which I believe is soon to be opened with Brazil in general, and with this commercial emporium—our city—in particular

You are no doubt aware that the British North American provinces are now united under one government with the city of Ottawa as their Capital. In consequence of this union they become the third country of commercial importance upon this continent.

For the last ten or twelve years the British American Provinces had a commercial treaty with the United States, which treaty expired on the 17th of last March. Under this arrangement referred to the colonists herefore have received through the United States mostly all their necessary wants, required from tropical climates, on such favorable terms that they did not think of looking elsewhere for their Coffee, Sugar, Rum, Rice, Tobacco, Spices, Drug and Dye Stuffs, etc., etc. This state of matters is now however entirely changed, owing partly to the abrogation of the referred to treaty, and in particular to the enormous war taxes the American government has found it necessary to levy upon almost every article of commerce. The consequence of this is—that the colonists have found it for their advantage to open up a direct trade with the countries producing the commodities I have mentioned and I am glad to notice that their attention has been drawn towards this country among others, for such supplies.

The British Provinces of North America possess within themselves many products which we could take in exchange for ours. For example we require their Codfish, Flour, Pine lumber, Kerosene oil, Hams, Butter, Cheese and various other articles, a demand for which the opening of a direct trade would undoubtedly create.

The writer of this has just received a consignment of Canadian flour from Peterboro in Upper Canada the same being forwarded merely as an experiment in order to test the quality of the article in our market. The flour has been duly inspected, and is rated in grade equal to the best brands that come from Philadelphia and will yield the shipper a handsome profit.

It is to be hoped that before another year passes we shall have our produce finding its way up the St. Lawrence supplying the requirements of the vast regions of inhabited territory which that mighty river drains. Fortunately the united provinces are already provided with an efficient mercantile marine of their own on purpose to undertake this new source of commerce.

Yours, etc.,

MERCATOR.

12,000 Fenian "Avengers" Ready.

The New York Evening Express, of the 16th inst., says:—The most active preparations are now being made at the Roberts' head-quarters for a grand movement against Canada. During the last fortnight some of the military officers of the organization have held consultations as to the martial programme to be adopted when the Fenian forces move from their respective States across the frontier. The result of their deliberations is at present a profound secret, but Gens. O'Neil, Spear and Roberts frankly avow that the new movement means work against the British authorities in Canada. It is said that the discipline of the next army of invasion will be far superior and more effective than that of which the detachment at Limestone Ridge was the advance guard. Twelve thousand men have already been enrolled under the title of "Fenian Avengers," who have pledged themselves to be ready at any moment to prevent the execution of Lynch and the other prisoners. These have been divided into regiments and brigades, and when all the men deemed necessary shall have taken this pledge operations will commence.

EXODUS OF ITALIAN MONKS AND NUNS.—The following intelligence from the Tyrol is published in the Augsburg Gazette:—"The number of monks and nuns who, quitting anti-monastic Italy, are arriving here to take shelter under the shadow of the Concordat, is so enormous that the convents are literally overflowing, and, to make matters worse, we understand that these debris of the religious societies of Italy, blown hither by the storm of revolution, think of settling in our country. At Trent and its neighborhood six large houses are marked out as destined to receive the members of the various Italian orders. At Botzen the Jesuits from Padua have brought an extensive property, where they intend to found a college and an institution for their pupils. Lastly, a Freachman, Count de Breda, Grand Inspector of the Jesuits, has purchased for a sum of 140,050fr., at Dorubirn, in the Vorarlberg, a property which he has placed at the disposition of the Italian sons of Loyola."

The new Drill shed which was being constructed in Dundas, was blown down by the wind on Friday afternoon. There were twelve arches, seventy feet in height, all raised, and these not being properly stayed gave way, precipitating the whole to the ground, and breaking them into pieces. Four men were severly injured, but none it is believed fatally. The men were on the top at the time the building fell.

EARTHQUAKE.—On Sunday morning last the shock of an earthquake was felt in Quebec. The Gazette says:—In the Lower Town and at the extremity of St. John Suburbs, it is described as having produced a thudding sound, causing the windows to rattle; and in our printing office the effect was quite distinct, causing the building perceptibly to vibrate. It was some three or four years since the last visitation of the kind.

A JUVENILE MURDERER.—On Sunday afternoon, a boy about fourteen years old shot another boy about the same age, through the heart, for knocking off his hat, in Cincinnatti, Ohio.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical Sold by all Medicine Dealers, at 25 cts per box

INTERESTING TO VOLUNTEERS.—An important article in the outfit of a soldier is a good Medicine in a convenient form, and the 'Canadian Pain Destroyer' is just the article, it cures wounds bruises, and frost-bites, and is the best Medicine that can be used for diarrhoea, and summer complaints generally, and is a sure cure for rheumatism, and that class of complaints brought on by exposure or fatigue, price 25 cts per bottle, to be had of all Medicine Dealers,

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY
IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1865.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested this article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it, with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED BOOKER.

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

To all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

BY THE
GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

'MONTREAL WITNESS'
FOR 1867.

Daily Witness.....$3 per an.
Montreal Witness (Semi-weekly).....$2 per an.
Weekly Witness.....$1 per an.
Canadian Messenger.....25c per an.

All strictly in advance, and the papers stop unless subscriptions be renewed.

On the 31st December, 1866, the Montreal Witness will have completed its twenty-first year, a period sufficient to render its character and objects generally known.

The Witness is devoted to the best interests of the people of Canada, temporal and eternal. It fearlessly grapples with pauperism, infidelity, Intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and public evils of every kind. It is connected with no party or denomination, and consequently has no support except from the public, on whom alone it relies. Its various editions are probably the cheapest papers on this Continent; and, though the circulation they have obtained is large, we think it might be, and hope it will be, much larger throughout the Provinces. To this end we rely on the kind aid of the friends of evangelical religion and wholesome literature everywhere, who, we hope, will help us in the future, as many of them have done in the past.

Canada is passing through a crisis in its history; the United States are still convulsed with the struggle for justice and equal rights; the map of Europe is undergoing great changes; Italy is claiming Rome, and Russia again menaces Turkey;—in a word, the times are full of interest, and the Witness gives special attention to the news of the day. It has also an extensive department for Commercial Intelligence and Prices Current, &c., &c., upon which great care is bestowed.

The Messenger is devoted exclusively to Temperance, Education, Agriculture, Science, Art, &c., and consequently goes free through the Post-office.

Any Minister, Post-master, or School-teacher remitting for eight subscribers to any edition, will be entitled to a gratis copy. For a mixed list, amounting to eight dollars, a copy of the Weekly or four copies of the Messenger will be sent gratis.

Subscriptions may commence at any time; and as the best season of the year for obtaining new subscribers is probably just after harvest, we hope ere long to have many lists sent in.

All orders, advertisements, and communications to be addressed (post-paid) to

JOHN DOUGALL & SON, Montreal.

☞ To all newspapers publishing the above prospectus for a few times we will send the Daily Witness free for one year.

Marked papers containing the prospectus should be addressed to the Publishing Clerk, Witness Office, Montreal, C. E.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK
FOR 1867.

The Fashion Magazine of the World.

LITERATURE, Fine Arts, and Fashions. The most magnificent Steel engravings Double Fashion-Plates. Wood engravings on every subject that can interest ladies. Crochet knitting, Netting, Embroidery, Articles for the Toilet, for the Parlor, the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Every thing, in fact, to make a complete LADY'S BOOK.

THE LADIES' FAVORITE FOR 37 YEARS.

No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it.

GODEY'S RECEIPTS

For every department of a household. These alone are worth the price of the Book.

MODEL COTTAGES (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.

DRAWING LESSONS FOR THE YOUNG Another specialty with Godey.

ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year.—Other Magazines publish old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.

GARDENING FOR LADIES. Another peculiarity with Godey.

Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has them.

Ladies' Bonnets. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam," writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1867. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

TERMS OF

OTTAWA CANCER INFIRMARY,

Sparks street & Maria street, Ottawa, C.W.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Poetry.

OUR DUTY TO THE POOR.

Cold winter is coming,
The north wind is blowing
In pitiful strains o'er the moor;
While the storm powers are raging,
And many lives perishing,
Around the low huts of the poor.

Oh! think how they shiver
As hail, storms and rain
Is heard by the tender in ear;
And moaning and wailing,
And sighing and pain,
Is heard by the child-loving ear.

Then let us be kind,
And share with the lowly
Whatever we have to bestow;
And thankful with blest of
All Heavenly gifts us
For calling our hearts to know.

In country and city,
To treat them with pity,
And comfort to each one secure;
Yet doing it not spending,
But simply lending
To God—who is God of the poor.

'Tis a duty we know,
And a duty we owe,
Some part of their sorrows to cure;
Let us then stand united,
And more uninvited
To feed and to shelter the poor.

Let us fight for them nightly
The bright fire brightly,
Till spring shall return with the sun;
To drive off their sadness
And fill them with gladness
Till then let our duty be done.

Varieties.

KANSAS.

A clerical correspondent of the Toledo Blade sums up some of the "institutions" of Kansas as follows:

"But I must conclude by simply indicating a few topics upon which I have much to say. The grapes of Kansas—the woods are full. This will be one of the finest wine States in the Union. The fish of Kansas—the rivers abound in several choice kinds. One was caught in the Republican a few days ago that weighed one hundred and twenty pounds, ten pounds heavier than the wife of the writer. The prairie fires of Kansas—they are now raging in all directions, travelling at times faster than any race-horse, leaping rivers, overtaking deer, wolves, turkeys, and prairie chickens, and roasting them alive. The wolves of Kansas—one came a few days ago to within one hundred feet of our house and attempted to help himself to fresh beef. The prairie chickens of Kansas—they are a nuisance. They are plenty, but very shy and smart. They always manage to keep out of my reach except when I am going to or returning from church on Sabbath. Then they are painfully tame."

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON AND THE PAINTER.—The following amusing anecdote is now for the first time recorded of the great "F.M." and our countryman, Sir William Allan. Sir Wm. Allen, having finished "The Battle of Waterloo," called for the money, per appointment, at Apsley House. He was ushered into the study where the duke proceeded at once to the business in hand, the simple process of payment—a process, however, much more compound than the painter had anticipated. Taking up a roll of notes, the duke unrolled and began to put them down in his deliberate and emphatic manner, calling out the amount as he did so, "one hundred pounds," "two hundred pounds." This was slow work; and Allan was overpowered with the idea that the mightiest one in earth, whose minutes had outweighed cartloads of Koh-i-noors in value, should be thus occupied. He blurted out, in his Scotch confused manner, that he was really very sorry his grace should take all this trouble—a cheque would do. The duke went on, "five hundred pounds," "six hundred pounds." Allan, thinking he hadn't been heard, raised his voice louder and louder at each hundred, exclaiming a cheque would do, a cheque would do:—"Eleven hundred pounds"—"A cheque will do!" "Twelve hundred pounds"—"A cheque, your grace, really a cheque will do!" Grace—"No, a cheque won't do! do you suppose I am going to let my bankers know I have been such a——fool as to pay $1,200 for a picture? Why, they'd think me mad! Sir William Allan, I wish you good morning." Exit Allan, unconscious whether it was head or heels foremost, and conscious only that he had the money.

JOSH BILLINGS ON MOSQUITOES.—We are told that there want anything made in vain; this is sum so but I have thought the time spent in manufakturing muskeetoze must have been wasted if the muskeetoze want. How they were put together I never could tell; and there is one commershall peculiarity about the muskeeter trade, and that is the supply always exceeds the demand, and yet the produkshun is not diminished, I kant understand this no how. They are born of poor but industrious parinks, and are brought up with great care under the auspices of our first families. They have some impudence, and don't hesitate to stick their best friends with a bad bill. They have also consummit luxtrade. I have known a single muskeeter to fite a man and his wife all nite long and draw the first blood. It is very easy to kill muskeetoze when you kan. But in striking them you are very apt to hit the place where they recently was. They are cheerful little critters singing as they toil.

"I once," said a Yankee mountebank "met a man who made nerve and bone all healing salve. He was an enterprising kind of fellow, so he thought he would experiment a little with it. He first cut off the dog's tail, and applied some to the stump. A new tail grew on immediately. He then, applied some to the place of the tail which he cut off, and a new dog grew out. He did not know which dog was which."

Some ladies were talking about the size and style of clothing to be forwarded to a fair. One said:—"Now I think we ought to make a pretty lot of baby clothes, for you know there is no danger of their getting out of use."

GOOD ADVICE.—A young preacher having tried to preach a sermon from the text, "Remember Lot's wife," and made a failure, a venerable doctor remarked that he "had be ter, thereafter, let other people's wives alone."

A foreign newspaper, in giving an account of Toulouse, remarks. It is a large town containing upwards of sixty thousand inhabitants, built entirely of brick.

BENEVOLENCE.—A very benevolent old lady has taken the idea into her head of knitting a pair of hose for a fire-engine.

Puns are, like false money, only passed current with those who have no means of detection.

We may always joke when we please, if we are always careful to please when we joke.

Sewing Machines!

GRAHAM & STRATTON
Have been appointed Agents for the County of Peterborough, for the sale of
C. IRWIN & CO'S
Sewing Machines.

These Machines have taken first prizes at the Provincial Exhibitions at Kingston, Hamilton and London; and also a first prize and diploma at the Provincial Exhibition at Montreal, 1865.

C. I. & Co. have got the reputation for making the Best Shuttle Sewing Machines
in Canada; as they have been for the last 12 years in the Sewing Machine business, and connected with the first class manufacturers in the United States, they claim to be thoroughly acquainted with the manufacture and adjusting, and the operating of the best Machines heretofore offered to the public.

These Machines are offered to Tailors, Dressmakers, Milliners, Manufacturers of light Leather work, and to those desirous of introducing into their families a Machine which will give perfect satisfaction upon light or heavy, coarse or fine work, using with equal ease cotton, silk, or linen thread, and having all the attachments required for hemming, felling, gathering, tucking, cording, ruffling, braiding, binding, frilling, as well as for plain stitching.

Every Machine is warranted for one year if used with proper care.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for handkerchs, &c. It is manufactured from the rich deodorous Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Demas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so?"—"Exactly?"—Solon Shingle said; they weep there[?] every time." If he felt 'owley' in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or unusually oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins again and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" " I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.
REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" " I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me
REV. C. A. HILLWOUR, New York City.

" " I had lost all appetite—was so weak and emaciated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. " " The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.
JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" " The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.
C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."
J. L. DOWNING.
Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."
J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Adams, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.
ED. SEELY."
Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do.
It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor every twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Poetry.

RELIQUÆ.

A wild, wet night! The driving sleet
Blurs all the lamps along the quay;
The windows shake! the busy street
Is yet alive with hurrying feet.
The wind raves from the sea.

So let it rave! my lamp burns bright;
My long day's work is almost done;
I'll attain out each sound and sight—
Of all the nights in the year, to-night
I choose to be alone.

Alone, with doors and windows fast,
Before my open desk I stand.
Alas! can twelve long months be past,
My hidden, hidden wealth, since last
I held thee in my hand?

So there it lies! From year to year
I see the ribbon change; the page
Turn yellower; and the very tear
That blots the writing disappear
And fade away with age!

Mine eyes grow dim when they behold
The precious trifles hoarded there—
A ring of battered Indian gold;
A withered harebell, and a fold
Of sunny chestnut hair.

Not all the riches of the earth,
Not all the treasures of the sea,
Could by these house-gods from my hearth;
And yet the secret of their worth
Must live and die with me.

Miscellaneous.

THE SPOILED CHILD.

There never was a better woman than Mrs. Hillgrove, never one who strove to do her duty to her neighbor, to be charitable to the poor, and to forgive her enemies, more steadily and truly. A religious woman, too, observant of all outward forms of Christianity, and taking to heart its precepts, with the hope that at the last Heaven would be merciful to her and take her home to rest.

She had had trouble. What widow has not? But, perhaps, her greatest trouble came before widowhood, for Henry Hillgrove had not been too kind or too constant to his pretty wife. Whatever his peccadilloes may have been, however, she hid them from the world, and loved and mourned him truly; and the greatest joy of her life was the fact that little Harry, her only child, was so like his father. Like him he was indeed. He had the same curly golden hair, the same rich colour, and, alas! the same disposition—not one drop of his mother, meek and quiet spirit had he in his veins: his blood ran red and hot, and fast, as his father's had before him.

So, as the child grew, the animal life manifested itself more strongly every hour. Not a tree upon the pretty place his mother owned but he had been at the top of, before he was ten years old. Climbing and swimming, and throwing stones, and riding the pony, and meddling with everything which had sharp points or jagged edges, and seeking those spots where there was most danger of falling down or of being crushed by something, young Harry kept his mother in a state of such anxiety from morn until night, as a hen who has hatched a brood of ducks, and sees them taking to the pond, alone can appreciate. Yet with the fear mingled a sort of admiration of his daring and the ever recurring thought, 'Just like his father.'

The mothers of good and the mothers of bad boys have this to bear the world over, and discretion comes with years. But, perhaps, in the matter of disobedience and in petty thefts which Dinah, the maid-of-all-work alluded to as 'snooping,' Master Harry never had his equal. Vainly were preserves and pickles locked up and padlocked. Somehow the boy obtained his fill of sweets and sours as well. As for commands, they might as well have been uttered to the whirlwind for all he heeded them.

A sound whipping, some systematic punishment, even a determined reproof from his mother, might have checked him at first; but these things Mrs. Hillgrove never dreamt of. She had taught him it was wrong to steal or disobey parents. He knew the ten commandments by heart, and was quite as well aware of the wrong doing as Black Dinah. But the quite teachings which would have availed in many cases was useless in his. So Harry stole, and lied, and disobeyed orders, and pretty Mrs. Hillgrove said to herself, 'After all the orders were for his own good, and the things he had taken were mine and so his own; and as for falsehoods, children always tell those, I'm afraid,' and then with a faint hope of overcoming the evil, humored him more and more and more; and all in vain, for the child took by stealth what he might have had for the asking, and tried to hide the theft, and did as he chose, in defiance of all rules.

Yet, he was so handsome, so merry, so fond of lying with his curly head in his mother's lap, so full of bright fancies, and such a genius, that others besides Mrs. Hillgrove felt sure the boy would make a fine man after all, and set his faults aside as childish pranks soon to be forgotten.

All said and hoped this but Dinah. She umongst her pots and pans in the kitchen, muttered often and often.

'Spare de rod and spile do chile. Dat young un needs a trouncing—he'd get it too if he was mine.'

And poor black Dinah, ignorant as she was, for once knew better than her mistress, who, with all her high principles and true christianity, had soon chow gone astray in this one case, and letting the reins slip, spoiled her dearest upon earth by an excess of kindness.

She found this out during the first of his school years. She had educated him herself until his fourteenth birthday, and sent him from her with many sighs and tears.

The proof of his wrong doing came first in a long bill from a confectioner, run up without an idea of settlement, under a false name. And at last, in the theft of a gold watch from a fellow pupil.

The mother had at first indignantly repudiated there accusations, but they were brought home too painfully for even her mind to entertain a doubt of their truth.

She settled with the confectioner with streaming eyes, and that individual promised to say nothing about the matter. But the master of the school was less lenient, and Master Harry was dismissed with a stern reprimand.

'You have proved yourself a thief and a liar. Your example might ruin my other boys; and you seem too hardened to repent.'

And so Mrs. Hillgrove's idol returned to her in disgrace. Then the mother endeavored to begin a reformation. It was too late. Past the whipping age—past the time when the mother's grief or anger would have melted away to tears. Young Hopeful grew indignant, and declared that he 'couldn't stand this preaching, and that he would run away to sea, or hang himself.'

At that mamma grew frightened, and begged him not to be desperate, 'for of course, my love, some other boy led you into it. You never, never would have done so of your own accord.'

And Master Harry, who had never thought of this excuse before, caught at it, and with an elbow at his eye, to hide, not tears, but the want of them blubbered.

'Of course, ma. Tom Brown put me up to it. He's enough to ruin any boy, ma.'

'I know it,' said Mrs. Hillgrove, 'and to think of the injustice they're done my child. That Tom Brown has never heard a word about it, of course; and so noble of you not to expose him—just like your poor father.'

And Harry was petted, and coaxed, and made much of as a martyr to his own noble spirit and a victim of tyranny.

At his other schools, Harry (more prudent than of yore), avoided detection. But, at home Dinah's old annoyance of snooping had changed to the habit of pocketing small change, odd dollars, money in any change, from pennies up, when his bountiful supply of pocket-money ran short. It was Harry's whim to be king amongst the boys, and a nail change in plenty ensures that object. Harry could always hire a boat, treat a dozen fellows to tarts or cream, bribe everybody bribable to secrecy, and make school a glorious place; and with the applause of his million, it mattered little to the lad that his mother wept; that she pinched herself, and wore the same bonnet and shawl for years, while he glittered in jewelry, wore dainty kids and the finest garments, and petty theft.

Poor Mrs. Hillgrove began to know this, and her cheeks grew thin, and her hair gray wonderfully fast. The boy was taller than she was by this time, and yet the baby vices were only strengthened.

She had but one hope, however, and that was that college life would save him. She had some dreams of hard, serious study, of days passed with good and learned men, in worthy occupation. Nothing knew she of college pranks and dissipation; and so, putting forth every effort, she sent her boy to college.

In a year he was expelled; but not before he had learned one thing, and that was how to drink. He came home an accomplished tippler.

So, after this, poor Mrs. Hillgrove passed wretched evenings waiting for her son's returning step; and more wretched nights after she had led him to his chamber, and watched that he did not set the curtains on fire, or break his neck in taking off his boots. And glad she was when one day Master Harry, of his own accord, declared his intention of turning over a new leaf, and being steady. He had a chance of going into business, and meant to make his fortune.

'And we'll live in style, mother,' said Harry; 'and you shall have such jolly silk dresses and capes, like Squire Gordon's wife. The mercantile life for me. I'll be a merchant prince before I die!' and the youth and his mother laughed together, for she felt young again in her new founded hopes.

It really seemed, for a good while, as though Harry had turned over a new leaf. When he came up from the city on Saturday night he was always sober, and certainly made money—a surprising quantity for a clerk, had his mother but known it. Other people said so; other people hinted strange things; eyes were watching him; feet tracking him; lips whispering,

'He was never honest when a boy.'

At last the crisis came. One night the mother waited for her boy in vain. Many fears possessed her. The greatest that he might have been led to drink again. So tearful and anxious she sat, watching the dark garden until the Sabbath dawn had nearly come. Then in the gray cold light, something crouching, and shivering, and pallid, crept in at the gate; and she knew, ere he opened the door, that something horrible had happened. He came in, and crouched down by the stove in the dining-room, with his eyes starting from their sockets, and his hands trembling.

'Get me something to eat, mother,' he said; 'and give me what money you can spare, and my linen. I must be off before daylight. I'm not safe, perhaps, even now.'

'Safe from what, my son,' sobbed the mother.

But Harry only answered:

'You'll know soon enough. I'm in trouble. Get me off; it's all you can do.'

'Have you killed any one?' moaned the mother; and Harry answered,

'I wish I had!'

Cold and faint she packed up the little portmanteau, and unlocked the drawer of the cabinet where she kept such money as she drew monthly from the bank, and sat watching her boy eat ravenously the food she set before him.

Not a question did she ask, but I think she guessed the truth; for when she caught him in her arms at parting she sobbed.

And he said not a word, but slunk away along the country road, like any thief.

When the long Sabbath had passed, and Monday came there came two bull-necked, red-faced men, who sought for Harry, and who told his mother the truth.

He had robbed his employer, steadily and artfully; taking small sums at first, and large ones as he grew bolder, until the use he made of his money brought detection upon him.

Oh, the tale she heard of gambling dens, and evil associates, and wine bibbers. At last she folded her hands, as in prayer, and besought them not to tell more, for the love of Heaven!

She told them—for she could not lie—that he had been home. More she could not tell them. They left her on his scent, and three hours after the wretched mother was on her way to New York.

There, seeking out the employer whom her son had robbed, she fell at his feet, and asked him to name the sum he had lost, to let her pay if she could do so, and to keep the deed a secret.

The merchant pondered.

'The wretch should be made an example of,' he said. Then casting a glance at the grey head and wrinkled face, his heart smote him, for they recalled those of his own mother.

'It is for your sake,' he said. 'You look as though your heart was broken already.'

So Mrs. Hillgrove went home, sold her little house and land, paid over to the merchant the sum he had been despoiled of, and hid herself in a far-off village, where in her old age, she toiled for her daily bread for the first time in her life. What money she had left, and very, very little it was, she kept lest Harry should come to her and need it.

But he never came. She sought for him, and prayed for his return year in and year out. Of her little earnings she hoarded pence and shillings for him, and lived on the sparest food. And never was did penance for a fault within the convent cells more rigidly than she for that one fault—the spoiling of her child.

So the years rolled on. In the little village where she lived no one knew her, and being known to have a little money, and live so sparely, she came to be called a miser. Wondrous stories were told of bags of gold hidden in her little hut, and many a time the school-children hooted 'miser' and 'witch' after her along the streets. For she who had been so pretty once was beggard and wrinkled now, and wore gowns and bonnets out of fashion, and had learned a habit of talking to herself, which made her seem uncanny.

Sometimes at eighty, when her faculties into the past, people would hear her sitting by the wayside with her knitting, murmuring:

'It's his mother's fault, sir; she spoiled him. 'Spare the rod and spoil the child, is from Scripture. Not Harry, sir, but his mother is to blame,' and then boys would laugh more, and their elders shake their head and wonder if the poor old soul had not had trouble.

At last the story of hidden money brought the old woman's hut under he eyes of evil men and one night she awakened to hear a noise at her door.

At first she thought it was a dog scratching. Then that some supernatural agency produced the sound. At last she became convinced that some one was sawing away the lock.

An awful terror came over her. She lost all her power to move.

Lying still and watching the door, she saw it open soon, and a man crept in—a man with crape over his face and a pistol in his hand. He went to all the drawers and cupboards. He searched the chimney, and at last came to the bed, and looked down at her white face and staring eyes.

'Don't make a noise if you want to live, old woman,' he said; 'but fork over your money. We know it's hid here. Where is it?'

In reply she took from under her pillow a little ragged purse. The robber flung it in her face.

'That won't serve me,' he said with an oath, 'we want your hidden treasure—your bags of gold and silver. Where are they?'

'I have none,' she said. 'How should I come by them?'

The robber, enraged, clutched her by the throat, and put his pistol to her temples.

'I give you until I count ten to tell the truth old woman,' he said, 'After that I'll blow your brains out! One, two, three—.

He counted on steadily, and the old woman listened. When he had come to five, she said once more, 'I have no money in the house,'' and he cried, 'You lie!—Come, you have five more chances!'

Then giving up all hope, she folded her hands and prayed. 'Forgive him; perhaps his mother spoiled him, as I did Harry.'

She closed her eyes, then expecting to receive her death blow, but suddenly the fierce grasp relaxed, and she heard a groan and opening her eyes saw the man groveling on the floor—groveling and moaning, and tearing his black hair. The mask of crape was off, and she saw his face and knew it. It was her son's!

'Harry,' she said, and the man answered, 'Mother, mother, is it you?' and shrunk away.

But she crept towards him, she knelt beside him, and sobbed and sobbed as she might over a dying baby.

'He never knew it was I,' she moaned, 'never!' and the man answered, 'O, mother I thought you died years ago!'

Then in a little while she grew still, and sat with her hands on his head, and those hands felt cold, and her face was strangely rigid. They frightened her wretched son.

'Mother,' he cried, 'speak to me!' and she answered, 'God bless you! I'm going fast, and I shall tell them it was all my fault!' and the next moment fell forward in his arms stone dead.

The next morning the neighbors found her lying in her bed, her eyes closed and her arms folded on her bosom; and in the woods hard by, swinging from the branch of an oak, the body of a middle aged man, who had there hung himself. Some in the place identified him as a noted burglar, who had for years gone by the name of 'Black Hal,' but in his pocket was found an old memorandum book, on the fly-leaf of which was written the name of 'Harry Hillgrove.'

A Novel Candidate for Parliament.

A correspondent writing from Dublin says: "Mr. Fawcett, the member for Brighton, is a blind man, the first person laboring under such an affliction that ever was elected to the House of Commons.—But if one of the candidates now up for Wexford County should be elected, a greater novelty would be introduced into the House. Arthur Kavanagh, Esq., whose address to the electors has been published, is but the head and trunk of a man, and was born in that condition. He has but two small stumps where the arms should be, and the same as regards the lower limbs. If elected, he should be borne into the House in men's arms, or in a mash ne of some sort, and taken to and fro at each division! He is a highly educated man, and the possessor of a large property, and is, moreover, a famous sportsman. Strapped into a kind of bowl on his horse's back, he rides like a very fiend after the hounds. He is also a great yachtsman, and a couple of years ago he published a handsome volume, giving an account of his voyage to Albania in his vessel the Eva, so called after the wife of the Anglo-Norman chief Strongbow, the daughter of Dermot McMurrough, King of Leinster, from her Mr. Kavanagh is lineally descended. This King Dermot has an evil notoriety in Irish history, as it was he who first invited and brought over the English to that country. He sought their aid to enable him to resist the forces brought against him by Roderick O'Connor, King of Ireland, and the Prince of Breffay, whose wife either eloped with Dermot or fled to his protection from her husband. It was on this incident that Moore founded his song of 'The valley lay smiling before me,' in which occur the well-known lines,

"On our side is virtue and Erin,
On theirs is the Saxon and guilt."

Mr. Cavenagh has in his possession a valuable portion of the estates of his ancestors in Carlow and Wexford. He is not a blind man, but he has no popularity to speak of, and I doubt very much that he will obtain the seat in Parliament which he covets."

QUEEN VICTORIA'S CROWN.

The Imperial State Crown of Queen Bridge, in the year 1848, with jewels taken from old crowns, and others furnished by command of Her Majesty. It consists of diamond, pearls, rubies, sapphires, and emeralds set in silver and gold; it has a crimson velvet cap, with ermine border, and is lined with white silk. Its gross weight is 39 oz. 5 dwts. troy. The lower part of the band, above the ermine border, consists of a row of 129 pearls, between which, in front of the crown, is a sapphire, (partly drilled) purchased for the crown by King George the IV. At the back is a sapphire of smaller size, and six other sapphires, (three on each side,) between which are eight emeralds. Above and below the seven sapphires are fourteen diamonds, and around the eight emeralds 128 diamonds. Between the emeralds and sapphires are 15 trefoil ornaments, containing 160 diamonds. Above the band are eight sapphires surmounted by 8 diamonds, between which are 8 festoons, consisting of 148 diamonds. In front of the crown, and in the centre of a diamond Maltese cross, is the famous ruby, said to have been given to Edward the Black Prince, by Don Pedro, King of Castile, after the battle of Najera, A. D., 1367. It was worn in the helmet of Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt, A. D. 1415. It is pierced quite through, after the Eastern custom, the upper part of the piercing being filled up with a small ruby. Around this ruby, to form the cross, are 75 brilliant diamonds. Three other Maltese crosses, forming the two sides and back of the crown, have emerald centres, and containing respectively 124 and 130 brilliant diamonds. Between the 4 Maltese crosses are 4 ornaments in the form of a French fleur-de-lis, with 4 rubies in the centre, and surrounded by rose diamonds containing respectively 85, 86 and 57 rose diamonds. From the Maltese crosses issue 4 imperial arches composed of oak leaves and acorns, the leaves containing 728 rose, table and brilliant diamonds; 32 pearls, forming the acorns, set in caps containing 54 rose diamonds and 1 table diamond. The total number of diamonds in the arches and acorns, is 108 brilliants, 116 table, and 559 rose diamonds. From the upper part of the arches are suspended 4 large pendant pear-shaped pearls, with rose diamond caps, containing 12 rose diamonds, and stems containing 24 very small diamonds. Above the arch stands the mound, containing in the lower hemisphere 305 brilliants, and in the upper 244 brilliants; the zone and arch being composed of 33 rose diamonds. The cross on the summit has a rose-cut sapphire in the centre, surrounded by 4 large brilliants and 108 smaller brilliants. Summary of jewels comprised in the crown: 1 large ruby, irregularly polished; 1 large broad spread sapphire, 16 sapphires, 11 emeralds, 4 rubies, 1,363 brilliant diamonds, 1,273 rose diamonds, 147 table diamonds, 4 drop shaped pearls, 273 pearls.

Seeing a wretched looking lad on the plains near the Humboldt desert, nursing a starving baby, a traveller asked him what the matter was. "Well, now," responded the youth, "I guess I'm kinder streakt.—Ole dad's drunk; ole woman's got the hysterics, brother Jim be playing poker with two gamblers; sister Sall's down thar a courtin' of an entire stranger; this yere baby's got the diaree the wust sort; the team's clean gu' out; the wagon's broke down; its twenty miles to the next water—I don't care a d——n if I never see Californey."

Clergymen and others of the Evangelical Denominations in Illinois have been signing a call for a State Prayer Meeting, to assemble at Springville. The object is to pray for an out-pouring of the Holy Spirit.

Steel Squares, Spear & Jackson's and Sorby's Saws, Mink, Otter & Beaver Traps, Superior Broad Axes, Warranted Cross Cut Saws, Cattle Ties, Chalk Lines, Powder, Shot, Cartridges, Dawson's Planes, Sleigh Shoe Steel, Carriage Bolts, Machine Oils, Warranted Chopping Axes, Sawing Machine Saws, Glass from 7 by 9 to 50 by 60, Patent hammered and other Horse Nails, Superior Rasps, Bake Kettles and Pots for Lumbermen, superior White Lead, all sizes of Iron and Cast Steel, 500 dozen Knives and Forks, received.

COUNTY COUNCIL MATTERS.

In a short notice last week we informed our readers that a meeting of the County Council would take place this week. Accordingly the Council is now in session, and in another column will be found the Warden's address, which fully explains the cause of their coming together at this late period. One of the causes we find is the quashing of a certain By-law of the Council.

From what we can learn, this By-law was passed for the purpose of levying the cost of the re-survey of certain lands in the Township of Harvey, the Government having paid the cost of re-survey of the unsold lands. The objections to the By-law are: 1st. It is urged that the resurvey was never sought for by interested parties. Colonel Haultain, it appears was petitioned by some parties to ask the government to have the Township resurveyed. He laid the petition before the government, when immediately the government refused, saying that action should be first taken by the County Council "upon petition of the parties to be effected thereby;" and that the Municipal Council of the Township to be re-surveyed should first be petitioned, or by at least one half their number. This, it is set forth, was not petitioned for by proprietors at all, and there are no papers to show to the contrary, although Col. Haultain acted on some petition. This he has written to obtain, if possible. The 2nd objection is, that the County Council did not provide for the cost of the re-survey before the work was begun, the County Council, however, did pay the portion due by said county, but the plea is, the sum was not provided for before the work was begun. It is not set forth that the work was unnecessary. "The only plea being informality," and on this the By-law of the Council was quashed.

Another plea is:—That the Township Council should first petition the County Council before the latter body should act. It is not set forth that the work was unnecessary, on the contrary, it is acknowledged as being necessary, as the old survey had been destroyed by fires, &c. "Informality" is the only objection set forth here.

The councils of the United Townships of Smith and Harvey had, in the meantime, collected about $1,100 of the amount levied for the payment of the re-survey, and at present there is a suit pending against the municipality of Smith to make their treasurer pay over to the County the sum collected from Harvey. This case is not argued.

The Township of Burleigh was also re-surveyed and the matter was conducted much as the Harvey affair. That Municipality, however, has taken no action in the matter, nor has the Council done anything to levy the cost of re-survey. In the meantime any lands in arrears for taxes, against which any part of the cost of re-survey was charged, has been withdrawn from sale at present until the whole matter shall be properly arranged and settled.

Private parties have brought an action to quash the Burleigh By-law. We further learn that one reason of the illegality of the By-law for Harvey is, that in framing it, strict adherence to the words of the statute was not observed. For instance; the By-law authorizes the levying of a certain rate against the lands patented in the Township of Harvey. The court says it should have read against the "Proprietors," &c. What a nice distinction indeed? Yet such are the quibles on which the By-law has been quashed.

MUNICIPAL.

The day for nominating candidates for the offices of Mayors, Reeves, Deputy Reeves and Councillors for the ensuing year will be Monday, 24th instant. Already we hear of several gentlemen in the various Municipalities being in the field.

In Town rumors say, Mayor Scott and Mr. Chambers are expected to test their respective popularity again.

In Monaghan the present Reeve, J. W. Gilmour, will be opposed, we hear, by Geo. Young, Esq.

In Smith M. S. Dean and J. Walton, Esqs., will be candidates for Reeves, and George Fitzgerald and I. Garbutt, Esqs., for Deputy Reeves. This last, in reference to Deputy Reeves, is not yet certain.

In Ennismore Mr. McCarthy will also be a candidate to be re-elected as Reeve—we do not hear of any opposition to him.

In Otonabee the present Reeve, Mr. Ingram, and Mr. Wm. Laing are to be candidates for Reeves; and Jas. Millar and John Millar, Esqs., for Deputy Reeves; this, however, is doubtful we think. Besides the old councillors we hear of some new candidates.

In Asphodel, P. M. Grover and Timothy Coughlin are talked of for Reeves. R. Birdsall was spoken of as a probable candidate; rumor says he will not come forward.

In Dummer, Mr. Chent and Mr. Crow are in the field for Reeves; Mr. Kidd also may yet be.

In Galway, Mr. Probert and Mr. Harkness are spoken of as candidates.

In Minden, Mr. Peck will be a candidate; no opposition yet heard of here.

In Stanhope, Mr. Melville is likely to be chosen.

Harvey and Burleigh will likely return the old men.

In Ashburnham all is quiet yet. The old Reeve will be a candidate by the choice of the people, no doubt. We have not heard of any opposition yet.

Mr. Lucas will be a candidate for Reeve for Dysart.

In Belmont and Methuen, P. Pearce and a Mr. Wilde are talked of; Mr. Wilde is a perfect stranger to us. Mr. Pearce is likely to be chosen.

The nomination day may change the list a little, but this is as we hear just now.

CONVERSAZIONE.

The founders and promoters of the Peterboro' Literary Club may justly feel proud of the result of their labours in organizing such a valuable institution in the Town. The entertainment on Wednesday evening bore ample testimony to the value of such organizations, from the fact that not one of the readers ever appeared in that capacity until after the formation of the club. The programme was rendered with exceeding good taste, and a great deal of ability was displayed by each person in his part. Mr. Mayor Scott, Vice-President, in the absence of Mr. Sheriff Hall, President, commenced the evening's proceedings by delivering a short but appropriate address, shewing the object of the club, the progress made by the members and impressing on the public their duty in fostering and encouraging such an institution; he gave the firemen of the Town the credit of organization, but after knocking at the door, himself and others not firemen, were admitted, when a conference for the purpose of confederation was held, which if not of as an extensive a nature as the one at Quebec a few years ago, nevertheless resulted in important advantages to those concerned. The readings were interspersed with vocal and instrumental music by Amateures of the Town. Mr. Heathfield presided at the Piano with his usual brilliancy; the instrumental part of the entertainment was particularly refreshing. The attendance, considering the state of the weather, was very good.

We understand the Directors of the Club have arranged to give five Reunions during the winter, one in each month; the tickets for the course to be fifty cents. A number of Amatures, Ladies and Gentlemen, have volunteered their services to perform, so we may look forward to an unusual "flow of soul" this winter. The Club intend hiring a Piano for the purpose and keep it in the Firemen's Hall. We have no doubt every person will purchase a ticket and attend the Reunions, and assist the Club in their endeavors to cater to the pleasure, enjoyment and edification of the public. We wish the Club every success in their new undertaking and recommend renewed activity on the part of our citizens.

Cowardly.

We learn that on Friday night last some cowardly villians entered the printing office of the Cobourg Sentinel, and, taking the forms that were ready for printing the next issue of that paper, dashed them into pie, injuring the type and other material very much. Such an act of vandalism deserves the severest punishment of the law, and it is hoped that the vile wretches will be found out and punished. The cause alleged by a contemporary is an article on Fenianism which appeared in that paper, which article was rampant with Fenianism. The Editor, however, disclaims all connection with the production, stating that it was inserted in his absence. What has a Fenian article to do with house-breaking and destruction of property? If the Editor of the Sentinel is suspected of being a Fenian take him up and try him according to law, but let not our province be disgraced by such an outrage against law and order as has taken place in our sister Town.

Temperance Lecture and Tea Meeting.

We have been requested to announce that Unity Lodge, No. 370, British American Order of Good Templars, will give a Tea and Social Entertainment in their lodge room, on Friday (to morrow) evening. The Rev. J. A. Gundy will deliver a lecture on the occasion. Mr. Gundy is very favorably spoken of as a lecturer; all, therefore, who can, should try and hear him. There will be both vocal and instrumental music during the evening. Tea will be served at 7 o'clock. A very pleasant evening may be anticipated. Let there be a full house. For particulars see circulars.

Bible Society.

The quarterly committee meeting of the Peterborough Branch Bible Society will be held in the Secretary's office, on Monday, 10th December, 1866, at 3 o'clock, p. m.—The members of the committee are earnestly requested to attend, as matters of importance will be brought before the meeting.

Literary Club.

This evening there will be a public debate. Subject—"Are the mental capacities of the sexes equal." Leaders—Messrs. J. A. Hall and Gilbert. There will also be readings by different members of the Club. Doors open at the usual hour, 7½ p. m.

RAIN, RAIN, MUD.—During Monday night and Tuesday we had a continuous fall of rain. The consequence is that mud was the order of the day, and plenty of it. Yesterday was dry above and mud below.

POSTMASTER IN PORT HOPE.—They are having quite a lively time in Port Hope in their efforts to get a Postmaster in the room of Mr. Smart, deceased. R. W. Smart, son of the late Postmaster, is acting Postmaster, pro. tem. John Smart, of the Bank of Upper Canada, W. Garnett, Esq., and W. H. Hagermen, Esq., are spoken of. Until the Postmaster General returns, they may rest quite easy about it. In the meantime, we learn that petitions are being got up in favor of the acting Postmaster.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY.

December 30th, the anniversary of Scotia's patron Saint, was duly honored by a number of "brither Scots," by their usual annual dinner and patriotic speeches. The "spread" was got up by "mine host" of the Huffman House, and did credit to the catering skill of the proprietor. About 50 sat down to the good things provided. The President occupied the chair, and on his left were the Rev. Mr. Beck and A. H. Campbell, Esq.; on his right, the Mayor Dr. Burnham, and R. Dennistoun, Esq. Capt. Sutherland occupied the Vice-chair.

After the Rev. Mr. Beck had returned thanks, the demolition of the "wee bit dainties" was commenced with richt guid will, and well was this part of the programme carried out.

The President having called the assembly to order, Chas. Cameron, Esq., gave a verbal Report of the state of the Society. The report showed that the Society had money on hand amounting to about $40. This was in the Bank of Toronto, at interest.—Mr. Cameron also remarked that although the Society had not been very active during the last year, yet they had been able to grant assistance to all who applied for aid, with one exception, and this individual was considered unworthy of assistance. He was glad also to intimate that very few Scotchmen required aid. The Society, however, he remarked, was not limited in its operation to needy Scotchmen. They were ready and willing to grant to the needy of other nations, of these few, if any, had applied, if they had, the Society would not have to send the needy empty away.—He concluded by saying that the late Treasurer, D. McDonald, Jr., had handed over the books to his successor, Mr. A. Smith, and he now had the money in his keeping, and he knew it would be safe. He (Mr. C.) hoped that the sum would be increased by many dollars, by every one coming forward and giving his subscription. It was surely worth a dollar to be called a Scotchman. He also read a letter from Col. Haultain, stating that illness prevented his being present, which otherwise he would most gladly have been.

The President on rising said, that they had met on St. Andrew's day, and to Scotchmen it was a privileged day. On it they met to bring to remembrance their dear old homes and to recount the noble deeds of the noble sons of Scotia. In doing so they meant no insult to other nations but just claimed to speak their own praises on this day. He had a toast to propose which he knew would be received enthusiastically by every one present. It needed no speech to introduce it; he had merely to announce it.

"The Queen." It was received with all the honors.

"The Prince and Princess of Wales" was next given.

"The Army and Navy" followed.

Mr. Dennistoun returned thanks for the Army. In doing so he felt much honored, and no Briton could have any difficulty in doing so, as every one could speak of the noble and daring deeds of the British army. He (Mr. Dennistoun) had held a commission in the sedentary militia, but on their deeds he would be silent, nor need he recount the deeds of the army in the past. It was enough to say that we felt secure in the army coming to our country in the present time of threats, and he knew we would not be deceived in [illegible] (Applause.)

Captain Sutherland, on being called on to respond for the navy, remarked that he thought some other gentlemen would have been called on who would do the navy more justice than he could. It was enough, however, to say that the navy was still the strength of the Empire. Brother Jonathan, it was true, had towed a huge iron-clad to England, and almost, according to reports, frightened John Bull. Yet at her best she could only make six miles an hour, while England's iron clads could make fourteen knots and stand any sea. The great work of laying the cable was a proof that England was still mistress of the sea. (Applause.) It was something for Scotchmen to know that the Captain of the Great Eastern was a Scotchman, (Applause) and this added another great One to the long list of eminent Scotchmen.

"The Governor General" was next given and received with a good will.

Song—"For He is a Jolly Good Fellow." Also an Irish song by Mr. G. Leonard.

"The Day and a' wha honor it," was the next given.

Song—"Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled," —by Mr. Millar.

A. H. Campbell being loudly called for, on rising, said: He did not know how he could speak to it, as it was a subject that contained so much, and almost brought up every noble deed of Scotia. Scotchmen had few holidays: New Year's day was to them a gala day, but St. Andrew's especially was a day dear to them. It brought to the recollection of those on foreign soil

"The land of brown heath and shaggy wood,"

This day brought to their recollection the noble deeds, in camp and field, of the heroes of Scotland, and the endearment of home, so as almost to make them regret that they ever left it. No country, perhaps, for its population, had sent forth so many cadets for name and fame as Scotland, into foreign lands, and many of them had realized their utmost hopes. This day reminded them that some one might need a helping hand, and he hoped that if any one should be in need that he would soon feel that he was among brithers who were willing to give a little to aid him. Scotchmen formed an influential band in Canada, and as every Scotchman was loyal by nature, he knew they would be ready to defend their Queen, their homes, their hearts, and thus be worthy of being ranked among those noble sons who honor the day.

Mr. Telford then read his annual address which we give in another column.

"Our Sister Societies," was next given.

Rev. Mr. Beck responded, remarking that no man could deny them the honor of the day, and he could join heartily in the sentiment that Scotland had sent more men to the fields of honor, literature and commerce than any people of the same population.—He thanked them, as the descendant of an Englishman, for the remembrance of St. George's Society.

"Canada, our home," was next given, and replied to by Mr. Dennistoun. He (Mr. Dennistoun) gladly responded, for although from the Land O' Cakes, he had made Canada his adopted home. He was proud of being a Scotchman, but this might be said being proud of small mercies. He was proud of being born under the flag that braved a thousand years. It was an honor to be a Scott as well as to be a Briton, but it was also an honor to be a Canadian. Canadians had done their duty, and by Confederation were preparing to do their duty better. He was proud, therefore, not of being an Englishman only, not of being a Scotchman only, but of being a Canadian.

"The Mayor and Corporation" being given, the Mayor and Councillors Ewing and Millar responded.

"Our Sister Municipality—Ashburnham" was responded to by Capt. Sutherland.

"Our Guests" by Messrs. Hatton, Eastwood, Hamilton and Strickland.

The Vice chair then gave "Our Agricultural Interests," "Our Mechanical Interests," "Our Commercial Interests," "Banking Interests," "Lumbering Interests," which were all duly honored and numerous thanks returned.

The "Heroes of Scotland" was spoken to by Mr. Campbell. The "Bard of Scotland" by Messrs. Telford and Ewing. "The Bar" by Mr. Hatton. "The Press" by the proprietors of the Examiner. "Our Wives and Sweethearts" by a host of married men and bachelors.

Mr. Hatton then proposed "The Health of W. A. Scott, Esq., the President of the Society," which was received with all the honors.

Mr. Scott replied in a short appropriate speech.

Mr. Eastwood gave "The St. Andrew's Society," when after singing "Auld Lang Syne" the company dispersed, all agreed that they had spent one of the pleasantest nights yet spent at an annual dinner of any sort here. Not the least source of pleasure being, that the favorite beverage of the evening was pure water from the fountain.

The Canada Farmer.

List for 1867 now open at Graham & Stratton's.

The Prospectus for 1867 is now before us; and the volume for next year promises to more than equal its predecessors. This very excellent paper should be in every farmer's house. And now that the time for storing the mind with useful information, during the long evenings of the winter months, is come, all who do not already take the Farmer should subscribe for it at once. It contains stores of knowledge on almost every subject connected with agriculture, and also many useful hints on various other topics that repay four-fold the few cents paid for it and cannot be obtained elsewhere at four times the cost.

A list for 1867 is now open at Graham & Stratton's Book Store. They will supply it for the year 1867 at the lowest possible price, and they invite the attention of intending subscribers at once, so as to have the list completed before Christmas, that they may be enabled to commence the new volume with the new year.

The "Globe" for 1867.

The publisher of this very superior paper has now issued the prospectus for 1867. It needs no comment from us. Our readers are all aware of the merits of the Globe, and of the able manner in which it is conducted. Thorough reform, and a bold advocate of the rights of the people, it deserves popular support. The publisher being the acknowledged leader of a great political party, and having opportunities of obtaining information on all subjects connected with politics, such as few others possess, subscribers to the Globe may rely on obtaining the earliest and most reliable news on political subjects; and the extensive circulation of the paper enables him to lay the news of all nations before his readers, regularly. Now is the time to subscribe for the ensuing year. Every one subscribing now will get the same to the end of this year also.

The "Montreal Witness."

This is one of the best family newspapers published in America. It contains, regularly, a large amount of general news, from all countries and on various subjects, besides several columns of well selected matter for family reading. A tone of morality pervades the whole paper, so that it may be placed in the hands of any one. It certainly deserves a place in every house.

New Publications.

We have just received from Messrs. Chewett & Co., Toronto, a copy of the Canadian Almanac for 1867. It contains much useful information, as the Canadian Almanac has always done since first published. It has also a neat Map of the proposed Confederate Provinces of British North America. The Almanac for 1867 is a good one. It can be had direct from the publisher, Toronto, or from Graham & Stratton, Peterboro, Tracts which purport to be copies of a letter from the Saviour, are being hawked about in the north of France. They enjoin the people to frequent the sacraments with assiduity, to keep holy the Sabbath, and to do good works.

The Committee of the Protestant Home beg to thank the undermentioned friends for contributions during the months of October and November:—Mrs. Gilmour, Apples and Cabbages; Mrs Hamilton, Bacon, Knitting and Sewing needles; Mrs. Haultain, a parcel of clothing; Master F. W. Haultain, a large Plum loaf; Messrs. Boyd & Wilson, Excellent soup meat; Mr. White, of Monaghan, Quarter of Mutton; Mrs. Hall, Clothing.

News by Atlantic Cable.

LONDON, Dec. 3 (evening)—John Bright was present at the great reform demonstration which took place in London. There were 25,000 people in the procession in spite of a heavy rain, only a portion of whom could enter the grounds where the meeting was held. Resolutions were passed amid great enthusiasm. At the conclusion the people dispersed peaceably. Mr. Bright will address an immense audience to-night.

The Fenian senator, Meany, who was arrested this morning was taken to Dublin.—No evidence of treason was found upon him.

It is said that the United States authorities in Italy had telegraphed to Malta to arrest John H. Surratt, one of the Lincoln assassins. On the steamer touching there the attempt failed, but they expect to effect the arrest when the steamer reaches Alexandria.

London, Dec. 4th, (noon)—The police justices of Cork have sent telegraphic despatches to the authorities here asking for more troops to preserve the peace of that city.

The enrollment of loyal Irish in Ireland has been ordered by the government. The government is determined to crush out the rebellion the moment it breaks out.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

Monday Dec. 3rd, 1866.

Present—The Warden, and Messrs. Miller, Pearce, Grover, Patterson, Kidd, Carnegie, Gilmour, McCarthy, Dean, Fitzgerald, Dunlop, Probert, Melville, Peck.

Absent—Messrs. Scott and Lucas.

WARDEN'S ADDRESS.

GENTLEMEN,—I deemed it necessary, after having consulted with various members of the Council relating to some matters of importance that have transpired since you last met, to call you together to dispose of them so as to leave as little trouble as possible to your successors.

I have been served with a Rule Nisi, calling upon me to show cause why, a By-law passed by you in June last, directing that a certain sum of money be levied on the proprietors of Lands in the Township of Burleigh, should not be quashed.—I placed the matter in the hands of the County Solicitor, subject to your direction.

The sheriff's sale of lands for arrears of taxes takes place on the 4th inst., and, I trust, you will reconsider the difficulties that have resulted and are likely to result from the resurvey of the Townships of Harvey and Burleigh, calmly and dispassionately, and arrive, if possible, at some amicable arrangement in the matter.

Mr. Sheridan, in carrying out your instructions relative to the screwing up and examination of the Peterboro' Bridge, found that the timbers or corbels on which the Bridge rested, and also the stringers, in connection therewith, were rotten, so much so, that it would have been unwise to have postponed its repairs any longer.

I was notified by Elias Burnham, Esq., (as a ratepayer of the county) of the unsafe condition of the bridge at the Locks, and that the corporation of the county would be held liable for the damage, if the Bridge should be allowed to tumble down. Immediately I had notices put up to apprize the public that the bridge was unsafe. Mr. Clark, who is now employed on the Peterboro' Bridge, has examined it, and says that the piers in the river will have to be re-built from the water, besides other repairs. It will, therefore, be necessary for you to make provisions to meet the expense that will be incurred in repairing those bridges as soon as possible, as they are of the greatest importance to the travelling community.

I was under the necessity of going as far north on the Bobcaygeon Road as the Peterson line, accompanied by the Warden of Victoria, and J. Graham, Esq., Government Land Agent at Bobcaygeon, to examine said road and procure the right-of-way round certain hills north of Minden village. All the correspondence I have had in the matter and the expenses incurred, will be laid before you in due time. Permit me to say here that those deviations both north and south of Minden village have made a vast improvement to the road, and are well worth all they have cost; and I may further be permitted to say that I never travelled over such a long continuation of so good a road through a new country, there being about 40 miles from Bobcaygeon to the Junction, over which any person can drive with comfort and safety. Mr. Graham, who superintended the work, deserves great credit for the manner in which he has had it done, and for the interest he has taken in assisting to procure the right of way at those deviations, and at the least possible expense to the county.

It would be well for you to reconsider your action of last session, relating to the building of a Drill Shed in the Town of Peterboro, as it appears that the government will now give only one thousand dollars towards its erection. Therefore, you will be under the necessity I think (if the building goes on) either to make provisions, in conjunction with the Town, for all the cost or expense attending its erection, less the afore-said one thousand dollars; or otherwise memorialise the government to carry out the proposition made to you through the Brigade Major in July last.

There may be some other matters that [illegible] and I trust that what I have now laid before you will receive that careful and earnest consideration by you, that their nature and importance require.

(Signed) E. INGRAM,
Warden.

Peterborough, December 3rd, 1866.

The minutes of the previous session were then read and confirmed.

On motion of Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Pearce, the Warden's Address was received and referred to a committee composed of Messrs. Grover, Dean, Pearce, Dunlop, Carrol, Kidd and the mover.

The Treasurer, Mr. Sheridan, submitted the following Report:

TREASURER'S REPORT.

To the Warden and Members of Municipal Council of the County of Peterboro';

GENTLEMEN,—I beg most respectfully to inform you, that subsequent to the June Session of the Council, I could not find an experienced carpenter to undertake the examination and repairs of the Peterborough Bridge in this Town. The Volunteer excitement was an additional reason for the delay.

In August I wrote to Campbellford for Mr. Clark, an experienced bridge-builder. My letter did not reach him for some time, with a view of making a thorough examination of the Bridge. A temporary scow was erected, Mr. Clark having brought some experienced hands with him, it was found that the six corbels on the cut stone piers were all rotten; as also the ends of the long joists projecting outwards from the same. As soon as the discovery was made, I attended the next meeting of the Town Council, and represented the whole matter with a view to their co-operation in the great expense which must necessarily attend the repairs of the Bridge. The heavy rains, the high floods, and the short days, all contributing to increase the expense, which up to the First of December, amounted to $424 12.

In the interim of the Council, the Warden instructed me to sell three debentures, the proceeds of which amounted to $960 each—say $2,880.00, which is carried out in my book to the credit of cash.

I submit herewith 7 debentures which are inoperative, and request that some action be taken by the Council at this time relative to said debentures.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

[Signed] WALTER SHERIDAN.

On motion of Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Pearce, the report of the Treasurer was received and referred to the several committees to which the several parts of it related.

The Committee on the Warden's Address reported—That they had taken the second clause of the Warden's Address into consideration, and would recommend that the Treasurer of the Council withdraw the lands from sale in the Township of Harvey, until this Council receive legal advice as to whether those lands can be legally sold for the whole amount of taxes which has been charged against said lands.

The Committe asked leave to sit again.

The report was adopted.

Mr. McCarroll moved, seconded by Mr. McCarthy, that the County Solicitor be requested to state whether or not he ever gave advice as to the power of the County Council to pass a By-Law for the re-survey of Harvey.

Mr. Weller, being present, was heard on the matter, and on motion of Mr. Carnegie a vote of thanks was tendered him.

On motion of Mr. Grover, seconded by Mr. Gilmour, a By-law was introduced for the purpose of withdrawing the lands in the township of Harvey, for sale for a arrears of taxes, out of the hands of the Sheriff, for the present, until it could be determined how to proceed legally to collect the cost of the re-survey. The cause of this withdrawal was the illegality of the By-law authorizing the levying of said cost of survey.

The Bylaw went through its different readings and was passed, signed and sealed.

A motion of Mr. Dean, seconded by Mr. McCarthy, to refund the township of Smith the sum of $156.40 being the cost incurred in defending suits under the By-law for the resurvey at Harvey, was referred to committee on Finance.

On motion of Mr. Dean, seconded by Mr. Pearce, the report of Committee was read, and on motion of the same, received and adopted.

TUESDAY.

Council met. 16 present—Messrs. Lucas and Scott absent.

The minutes of previous day were read and approved.

On motion of Mr. Dean, seconded by Mr. Peck, a report of committee on the Warden's address was read and on another motion, by the same, adopted.

In the report of Committee they approved of the calling of this meeting of the Council, as matters of great importance had transpired since last meeting of Council. They also recommended that the County Solicitor be instructed to defend the suit brought to quash the Burleigh By-law, so as to test its legality. They further expressed their satisfaction that the bridge was being repaired, and they trusted that the Committee on Roads and Bridges would also consider the state of the bridge at the Locks so as to have it made safe for the present, and properly repaired in the spring.

In reference to the Bobcaygeon Road, the Committee expressed their pleasure that the road was in so satisfactory a condition.

On the clause in reference to the Drill Shed in Town, the Committee would not recommend any alteration in the amount voted at last meeting of the Council.

On motion of Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Melville, the propriety of erecting a lock-up at Minden village and another at Apsley was referred to a special Committee.

A motion of Mr. Dulop to send one Margaret Bell, a prisoner in the jail, to Magdalen Asylum so as to endeavor reform her was referred to a special committee consisting of Messrs. Gilmour, Carnegie and Dean.

On motion of Mr. Carrol, the Warden was directed to solicit Col. Haultain, M. P. P., to come before the Council and give what information he could in reference to the resurvey of Harvey and Burleigh.

The Council adjourned till 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

WEDNESDAY.

Council met.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges reported, recommending that the Warden and Mr. Sheridan be authorized to have the Bridges repaired. The Bridge below the Town to be so repaired as to afford a passage for the winter, and that in spring it be properly fixed. They also recommended that they call on the Town Council for a just proportion of the cost of repairs. They further recommended a grant of $22.82½ for repairing the Little Bob Bridge.

Mr. Peck moved seconded by Mr. Pearce that Mr. Melville, commissioner to expend $30 on the boundary between Minden and Stanhope, be allowed to expend the same in erecting bridges at Buck's and Ferguson's [illegible] was carried.

Col. Haultain was heard in reference to the re-survey of Harvey, concerning which, he remarked that, although he could not remember all about the petitions, he knew that there certainly was one from certain parties in Harvey, concerning the re-survey of Burleigh, he had no distinct recollection, but felt certain that there was a petition in reference to it also. His remarks were considered very satisfactory, and a vote of thanks tendered him for his kindness in appearing before the Council and affording explanation.

On motion of Mr. Dean, E. Burnham, Esq., was heard in reference to the county taking stock to aid in erecting a bridge accross the Otonabee River at Wallace's Point (Hale's Mills).

The Warden made some explanation in reference to the proposed bridge, and left it with the Council to take what action they thought wise in the matter.

Mr. Scott asked if the Council intended to collect the legal part of the taxes against non-resident lands, so as to enable Harvey to get their portion to expend in improvements at an early date.

The Warden remarked that the question could not be answered, as he did not know what motion might be brought before the Council.

Mr. Scott then moved that the Treasurer take proper steps to have said lands advertised and sold for the taxes (less the 5 cents per acre for re-survey) so as to enable the Municipality of Harvey to obtain its portion before the 1st of August, 1867.—Carried.

The Committee on Lock-up houses for the Back Country then reported, recommending a grant for the erection of Lock-up houses at said places, provided Town Halls be also built. The buildings for said Lock-up houses to be under said Halls and constructed of stone, and not to exceed 16 by 22 feet.

The Council adjourned till 10 o'clock on Thursday morning.

MONAGHAN TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Monaghan, November 5, 1866.

A special meeting of the Council was held at 3 o'clock, p. m.

All the members present.

A By-law was passed dividing the Township into two electoral divisions for ensuing township election.

Division No. 1 to consist of Wards No. 1 and 2, election to be held at No. 2 school house; Mr. I. Campbell, Returning Officer. No. 2 Division to consist of Wards No. 3, 4, and 5, election to be held at the Town Hall; Township Clerk, Returning Officer.

The following accounts of sheep killed by dogs was read and laid before the Council:—Jas. Smith per Jas. Wallis, Esq., $16.50; Rich. Lund, $10.00; James Brown, $24.25. Ordered to be laid over till next meeting of the Council, on the 28th prox.—COM.

THUM THUMB ECLIPSED.—We read there has been a race between the New York Showmen to obtain possession of one George Washington Nutt, who is said to be several inches shorter than General Tom Thumb, and that P. T Barnum has succeeded in getting him for three years for $30,000, board and expenses. Is it not a great thing to be a small man! and is it not equally as great to have a Medicine that can be depended upon for curing colds, rheumatism, burns, bruises, summer complaints, cholic, &c., if so get at once a supply of the 'Canadian Pain Destroyer,' at the nearest Medicine dealers for 25 cts.

FOR THE

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY

PETERBOROUGH.

A'm glad an' fain a'm noo ma lane,
St. Andr w's Day has cam'd again,
Auld Scotia lies ayont the main,—
Fae, far, away;
But we, her sons, seals a' richt fain
To Land this day.

A' ken there's some that's gathered here,
Wha never mair agaid bosom, dear,
Nor sanctified her air as halloms clear
On summer morn;
The heather or the scented brier,
Or blossomed thorn.

Nor pu'ed the primrose fra the brass,
Where cawslips grows an' wish deer grass,
Or plucked the red haws or black sloes,
Wee fae the braes;
Waden the burn for bale lang days
'Gainst faither's wishes

There's fhces here, an' no a few,
In Scotia their first breath they drew,
Aft hae they trod her mountains dew,
Wi' their bare feet;
The hallsome fair that filled their mow,
Wes parritch sweet.

Few dainty bites was tasted there,
Knauch to eat—but nane to spare,
To mak' ends meet they aye tak care—
Forgotten never;
To gie their sons a wee bit lair,
To mak' them clever.

Yer faither's kent few hale days,
Yer mither's mended yer bit claes,
Just decent—but na daft displays,
O, fulish pride.
A thing oure prevalent noo-a-days,
The warld wide.

There's ne'er a nuik, a' carens where,
Whar white feet trod though o'er sa rare,
The rich an' vardant, bleak or bare,
A' carens whither;
Ye'll find a canna Scotchman there,
If there's anither.

There's manna a ane has flown their way
To this far distant Canada,
They meet upon St. Andrew's Day,
To haud a caucus;
An' talk o' Scotia far away,
Taste cake an' Baggis.

This wee bit Toun its share I as got—
O' them that claims the name o' Scot,
Can it be true—hae they forgot
Auld Scotia dear;
They winna meet wi' brithe Scot,
Just ance a year.

Sons o' auld Scotia! lagg na mair,
Join brither Scots na ranks compare,
Let needy Scots your bounties share,
Whatever your lot;
A country's pride to love and care,
For Brither Scot.

Auld Scotia she is nane to blame,
For a' the misery, crime or shame,
Proud Aristocracie's dreaded name,
To crush the poor;
Auld Scotia will maintain her fame,
While time endure.

Bards sang her praises,—her sons drew steel
To guard her name an honor weel
She spurned the tyrants despot heal,
Land ever free;
Long may the name o' Scotia leal
Be dear to thee.

Aye, dear to thee we' twafauld ties,
Can Scot his birth-place e'er dispise,
The dust o' your St. Andrew lies
In our auld hame;
In distant lands societies rise,
Bearin' his name.

Three thousand miles fra Scotia dear,
Ye hae that guid society here,
Heapin' pair Scots when they appear
In dep distress;
Ye meet thegither anes a year—
For friendliness.

Come Scots an' gie yer helpin hand,
In this our new adopted land,
Let rich an' puir, thegither stand,
Wi' richt guid will;
Tu mak' this guid Society stand,
A blessin still.

May yonr Society hae success,
For Scotia a' wad ask na less,
Ye needna yer bit lunge oppress,
Far less drap tears;
Let lika ane his mind express,
Wi' hearty cheers.

TOO MUCH GOVERNMENT.—Canada should surely be a well governed country. We have, in the first place, our own government, with its double Premier, and its double majority, on which it is not necessary to dilate. Then we have the British Government, which naturally and properly takes a parental interest in our affairs.—Thirdly, we have the Pope, who exercises considerably more dominion over us than the Queen deciding upon Confederation, education, &c., &c., and who raises loans among us when he wants money, a thing the Queen has not yet attempted. In the fourth place, the Irish Republic, whose head-quarters it is hard to locate, is issuing its mandates to be obeyed by us under penalties of unheard of punishments. And, lastly, Mr. Seward is taking a fatherly care of us, and telling us to be good boys, and mind what we are about, lest he will have to take care for us, we may be in danger of forming too high an opinion of our own importance. We had almost forgot, that in addition to all these governments we are promised another in the shape of a Federal Government.—Witness.

THE GOLD REGION.—Large numbers of persons from a distance continue to visit the Madoc gold region, and prospecting goes on as lively as ever. The purchaser of the Richardson mine was here last week and brought with him a gentleman of extensive experience in the gold regions of Colorado and California, who expressed himself well satisfied with the 'show,' and it is understood that they will return in a few days to pay over the purchase money and commence working the mine. Nothing positive has been received with regard to other mines, but rumors are very prevalent as to the discovery of the precious metal in other sections of the back country.—Intelligencer.

CLERICAL DEPOSITION.—The Rev. Henery Charles Eogre Costelle, late assistant minister at the Cathedral Church in Kingston, has been deposed from his office by the Bishop for having committed adultery. The sentence is irrevocable.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, in so it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, at 25 cts per box.

The following speaks very highly for the Electro-carbonized pens:—

We take much pleasure in recommending Mr. C. Barnard's Pens as the best we have used, being far more durable and easier in their action than the ordinary steel pens.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and will out the excuse of the former, here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done no more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers, their horses the sufferers, to avoid both use "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

THE Subscriber respectfully informs the Commercial public of Canada and the British Provinces that he has at length succeeded, after years of experiment and research, in making a METAL PEN entirely impervious to rust from the acids contained in inks (especially so when used with Arnold's writing fluid), which for elasticity and smoothness of action over the poorest paper, stands unequalled — Being Electro-Carbonized, they will outlast six or eight ordinary Pens, and are guaranteed not to cut through the thinnest foreign letter paper. The manufacturer feels confident that where the Electro-Carbonized Pens have been tried they will supersede all other makes, and respectfully solicits a trial of them.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

PROSPECTUS OF 'MONTREAL WITNESS' FOR 1867.

Daily Witness	$3 per an.
Montreal Witness (Semi-weekly)	$4 per an.
Weekly Witness	$1 per an.
Canadian Messenger	25c per an.

All strictly in advance, and the papers stop unless subscription be renewed.

On the 31st December, 1866, the Montreal Witness will have completed its twenty-first year, a period sufficient to render its character and objects generally known.

The Witness is devoted to the best interests of the people of Canada, temporal and eternal. It fearlessly grapples with oppression, infidelity, Intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and public evils of every kind. It is connected with no party or denomination, and consequently has no support except from the public, on whom alone it relies. Its various editions are probably the cheapest papers on this Continent; and, though the circulation they have obtained is large, we think it might be, and hope it will be, much larger throughout the Provinces. To this end we rely on the kind aid of the friends of evangelical religion and wholesome literature everywhere, who, we hope, will help us in the future, as many of them have done in the past.

Canada is passing through a crisis in its history; the United States are still convulsed with the struggle for justice and equal rights; the map of Europe is undergoing great changes; Italy is claiming Rome, and Russia again menaces Turkey;—in a word, the times are full of interest, and the Witness gives special attention to the news of the day. It has also an extensive department for Commercial Intelligence and Prices Current, &c., &c., upon which great care is bestowed.

The Messenger is devoted exclusively to Temperance, Education, Agriculture, Science, Art, &c., and consequently goes free through the Post-office.

Any Minister, Post-master, or School-teacher remitting for eight subscribers to any edition, will be entitled to a gratis copy. For a mixed list, amounting to eight dollars, a copy of the Weekly or four copies of the Messenger will be sent gratis.

Subscriptions may commence at any time; and as the best season of the year for obtaining new subscribers is probably just after harvest, we hope ere long to have many lists sent in.

All orders, advertisements, and communications to be addressed (post-paid) to

JOHN DOUGALL & SON, Montreal.

☞ To all newspapers publishing the above prospectus as for a few times we will send the Daily Witness free for one year.

Marked papers containing the prospectus should be addressed to the Publishing Clerk, Witness Office, Montreal, C. E.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK FOR 1867.

The Fashion Magazine of the World.

LITERATURE, Fine Arts, and Fashions. The most magnificent Steel engravings. Double Fashion-Plates. Wood-engravings on every subject that can interest ladies. Crochet knitting, Netting, Embroidery, Articles for the Toilet, for the Parlor, the Boudoir, and the Kitchen. Everything, in fact, to make a complete LADY'S BOOK.

THE LADIES' FAVORITE FOR 37 YEARS.

No Magazine has been able to compete with it. None attempt it.

GODEY'S RECEIPTS

For every department of a household. These alone are worth the price of the Book.

MODEL COTTAGES (no other Magazine gives them), with diagrams.

DRAWING LESSONS FOR THE YOUNG Another specialty with Godey.

ORIGINAL MUSIC, worth $3 a year.—Other Magazines publish old worn-out music; but the subscribers to Godey get it before the music stores.

GARDENING FOR LADIES. Another peculiarity with Godey.

Fashions from Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., of New York, the millionaire merchants, appear in Godey, the only Magazine that has them.

Ladies' Bonnets. We give more of them in a year than any other Magazine. In fact, the Lady's Book enables every lady to be her own bonnet maker.

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Miriam,"

writes for Godey each month, and for no other magazine. A new novel by her will be published in 1867. We have also retained all our old and favorite contributors.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I feel hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be relied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Pints, $1. For Sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

OUR CHILD.

Who was it added to the store
Of happiness replete before,
That we might love God more and more?
Our child.

When widow's lonely fane was mocked,
Who was it each hard questions asked,
As all our fund of knowledge tasted?
Our child.

Who was it made us strive to teach
The greatest truths in simplest speech,
That they the infant mind might reach?
Our child.

Who is it whose sweet smiles oft cheer
Our troubled hearts when doubt and fear
Make life's bright path look dark and drear
Our child.

When health shall fail, and strength decay,
Who then our sinking frame shall stay;
And wipe the dews of death away?
Our child.

O God, our Father, hear our prayer;—
All need Thy love and watchful care;
O safely through life's trials bear
Our child.

Then gayest her in love; may she
Give her young heart, in love to Thee;
And find how sweet it is to be Thy child.

THE SNOW STORM.

FOR THE YOUNG.

It was a dark December night, wild and stormy. Ever since mid-day the snow had fallen with unwearying perseverance, and now lay deep on the ground. I had been detained at my office later than usual, and had to cross a dreary moor for some two miles to reach my home. I confess I felt chilled at the prospect of such a walk in such a storm; but wrapping my plaid around me, and staff in hand, I set forward, thinking of the bright little home I should soon reach, and the dear ones who were waiting my return with a loving welcome. Soon I left the busy town with its many lights behind me, and stepped out into the dismal moor. The snow lay much deeper here on the untrodden footpath, and seemed to fall more heavily than before—so thick and blinding, that I found myself straying from the proper roadway, and with difficulty retraced my steps; the cold felt keener also, and a sharp east wind had risen. At times I grew almost breathless with the struggle, and had to pause for gathering strength ere I faced the storm once more. At length I rejoiced to see the guiding-post, which was placed where three roads met and against which I was thankful to lean for a few seconds, until I had recovered breath. I was just on the point of starting off afresh, when a faint sound of a human voice caught my ear. Startled, I listened, but all was still. I shaded my eye with my hand, and stared anxiously into the surrounding darkness; but nought could I discern beyond a wilderness of snow, and I was just concluding my imagination had deceived me, when again the same murmur came floating through the air.

Feeling that, with the guide-post so near, I could scarcely lose my way, I hastened forward in the direction of the sound, and soon distinctly heard a child's voice repeating the Lord's prayer. It had a strange effect in such a storm at such a place, and my heart beat high when the gentle "Amen" was said.

I called out, "Whose voice is that?" but there was no reply. I called again more loudly than before, and then the timid answer came, "Johnnie's," and a few steps brought me to a boy some eight years old, standing shivering in the snow.

"My poor little man," I said, "are you all alone?"

"No," he replied, "Nelly is here, but she grew so cold and tired I could not get her on, and now she is fast asleep. I felt sleepy, too, but thought I would say my prayers first;" and as I stooped down to the bundle of snow he had indicated as being "Nelly," he whispered softly, "Has Jesus sent you?"

"Surely he has," I answered, "had you not said your prayers, Johnnie, you might both have perished. But how came you here, my boy?"

"We went into town this morning to see grandma—it was snowing then," he said innocently, "when we left home."

"And where is your home?" I asked, "and who is your father?"

"Farmer Rutland," he replied; "we live at High Farm."

"High Farm" happened to lie on the road to my own house, so I told Johnnie we would all go home together. He rejoiced when he heard my name, and remarked to himself, "How well it was I said my prayers!"

I found Nelly indeed half asleep, wrapped in a heavy cape, which the devoted little fellow had divested himself of in his endeavor to keep her warm. Nor could I induce him to put it on until he saw me raise Nelly tenderly in my arms, and wrapping her in my great plaid, gathered her close to my bosom, prepared to carry her.

"Now, Johnnie," I said, "you keep hold of the skirt of my coat, and we shall soon be at High Farm."

The cold seemed to have become more intense, the falling snow more dense than ever. Manfully the little fellow kept up to my side, though the snow by this time reached above his knees. I tried to cheer him as we trudged along, but I felt the drag upon my coat becoming greater, and it was evident his strength and heart were failing him—then a suppressed sob broke from him, and he clung more closely to me as I bent down trying to soothe and comfort him.

"You are a brave little man," I said, "we will soon reach the farm now; think of the bright fire there, the nice warm milk and bread, and mother's loving kiss all waiting for you"

"I cannot walk further," he sobbed.—"Oh, take Nelly home, but let me lie down here. I will say my prayers again, and perhaps Jesus will send some one else to help me."

"No, no," I answered cheerily; "I cannot leave you behind, Johnnie; you must just make a horse of me, and mount my back. There you are now, hold me fast round the neck, and whip hard to make me go better." And again I started forward, endeavoring to keep him awake with questions and little sallies; but I felt the additional burden in such a storm was becoming beyond my already exhausted strength, when suddenly a wavering speck of light shot out of the darkness, then vanished, then appeared once more, becoming nearer and brighter. I hallooed loudly, and my shout was answered, and Johnnie called out in a faint and glad voice, "Oh, that's father!" And happily so it was; the poor farmer becoming alarmed at the lengthened absence of his children, had started with his two men and a lantern in search of them, and great tears of thankfulness fell from his eyes when he beheld his loved ones. Johnnie was at once taken into his loving arms, and a quarter of an hour's walk brought us to the farm, where the anxious mother received us. Nelly was soon aroused by the warmth and light of the great fire, little or none the worse for the night's adventure, but poor Johnnie was badly frost-bitten, and it was long before he recovered.

Deep was the gratitude of the honest couple for the aid I had afforded their beloved children, who, doubtless, overpowered with sleep, would have been hidden in the snow ere their father had reached them and must inevitably have perished, but for the prayer which Johnnie's trusting, simple heart had prompted, and had been the means, with God's blessing, of my saving them.

SEWING MACHINES!

GRAHAM & STRATTON
Have been appointed Agents for the County of Peterborough, for the sale of
C. IRWIN & CO'S
Sewing Machines.

These Machines have taken first prizes at the Provincial Exhibitions at Kingston, Hamilton and London; and also a first prize and diploma at the Provincial Exhibition at Montreal, 1865.

C. I. & Co. have got the reputation for making the Best Shuttle Sewing Machines
in Canada; as they have been for the last 12 years in the Sewing Machine business, and connected with the first class manufacturers in the United States, they claim to be thoroughly acquainted with the manufacture and adjusting, and the operating of the best Machines heretofore offered to the public.

These Machines are offered to Tailors, Dressmakers, Milliners, Manufacturers of light Leather work, and to those desirous of introducing into their families a Machine which will give perfect satisfaction upon light or heavy, coarse or fine work, using with equal ease cotton, silk, or linen thread, and having all the attachments required for hemming, felling, gathering, tucking, cording, ruffling, braiding, binding, frilling, as well as for plain stitching.

Every Machine is warranted for one year if used with proper care.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents,

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jem so P—" Exactly P—Spleen Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "owley" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"• • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"• • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"• • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"• • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1866.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Heimstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HEIMSTREET, Chemist.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c, where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that nourition which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and in more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Poetry.

A CRIMEAN EPISODE.

BY BAYARD TAYLOR.

"Give us a song" the soldiers cried
Their outward trenches guarding,
When the heated guns of the camp ollied
Grew weary of bombarding.

The dark Redan, in silent scoff,
Lay dim and threatening under.
And the tawny mound of the Malakoff
No longer belched its thunder.

"Give us a song," the guardsmen say,
We storm the fort to morrow;
Sing while we may another day
Will bring enough of sorrow.

They lay along the batteries side,
Below the smoking cannon;
Brave hearts from Severn and from Clyde,
And from the banks of Shannon.

They sang of love, and not of fame,
Forgot was Britain's glory—
Each heart recalled a different name,
But all sang Annie Laurie!

Voice after voice caught up the song,
Until its tender passion
Rose like an anthem, rich and strong,
Their battle-ere confessing

Beyond the darkening ocean burned
The bloody sunset embers,
And the Crimean valleys learned
How English love remembers.

And once again the fires of hell
Rained on the Russian quarters
With scream of shot and burst of shell
And bellowing of the mortars!

And Irish Nora's eyes are dim,
For a singer dumb and gory,
And English Mary mourns for him
Who sang of Annie Laurie!

Ah! soldiers, in your honored rest,
Your love and glory bearing;
The bravest are the loveliest,
The loving are the daring.

Miscellaneous.

Bonald M'Grie and his Indigo.

A TALE OF OLD ABERDEEN.

In matters of business, if you can help it, as far as possible never commit yourself by speaking first, and on no account commit yourself by speaking hastily. If these propositions can be tolerated by the reader, let him read on, and know that the hero of this little, moral sketch was a douce and canny Scot, a small tradesman well-known in Aberdeen forty years ago. He was a chapman in promiscuous line. In fact—why should we attempt to disguise the truth? he kept what in London would be called a chandler's shop.

He condescended, merely for the convenience of his immediate neighbors, to sell candles as low as a farthing apiece indeed, he would, for the nonce, furnish light so attenuated that you might purchase two for a farthing, and yet he had small deer in his emporium more attenuated still. He also sold dying materials, among which I might have classed his small ale, and he had cum-lus virtutes to set off against a half-penny's worth of salt, barilla against two sheets of parliament cake for a bawbee, and indigo by the pound against snuff by the half ounce.

Indeed our trustworthy friend, Donald M'Grie, had no small pride in his shop; and the street in which he lived in the gude auld town of Aberdeen, had just so much pride in Donald. Really Donald was a safe chiel; he kept his accounts accurately, both with God and man, for he was as punctual at kirk as in his payments, and, as he allowed no long scores with his neighbors, he took care never to run in debt by crimes of omission, which trust be some day settled before a tribunal so awful.

Having thus sufficiently described Donald's circumstance, we must now proceed to narrate the first grand step that he made towards acquiring the splendid fortune that he so well deserved and lived so long to enjoy.

He was out of indigo—that is to say all the indigo that he lately had, had gone out from his warehouse by dribblets. Thereupon he writes a letter to a house in London, a drysalter's in the most extensive line of business, ordering 'Forty-one pons weight of indigo' stating at the same time that if there was not a vessel, they must 'get ane.' Such were the exact words he used.

Now, at the time this occurred, communication between Aberdeen and London was rare, and at farthest, four times in the year was the utmost extent that Donald M'Grie and his wholesale dealers addressed each other. There were no telegraph lines by which Donald could have instantaneous commencication with the world over; nor, for the matter, of that, fast steam packets traversing the sea, nor railways the land; nothing but those slow-sailing packets which took time, and plenty of it, to make their trips from port to port, or the equally slow stage-coaches. As I have said, four times in the year was the extent of the communication between Aberdeen and London. Remembering this fact he proceed. The dealers were very much surprised at the extent of the order received from Donald. The reader will not wonder at it when he is informed that they could never suppose for a moment that a vessel could be ordered on purpose to carry forty-one pounds of indigo, so, after much scrutiny of the very hieroglyphical marks of M'Grie all the heads of the firm took it firmly into their said heads that their correspondent had fairly written for forty-one tons.

They knew very little of the man, and of the nature and extent of his business; all, however, that they did know was most satisfactory; they had done business with him for nearly twenty years, and had, during all that time, been extremely well pleased with the punctuality of his payments, added to which they had heard that he was wealthy. Upon all these grounds, they, without hesitation, executed the order; but, as they had not anything like the quantity on hand, they were themselves forced to become purchasers, in order to fulfil the commission. Having collected the quantity that they had supposed that Donald had specified, they shipped it for Aberdeen, sending with it an envoice, and also a bill of lading by post.

When M'Grie received this precious bill of lading, his astonishment was at once ludicrous and stupendous. At length, in order to give himself a little mental relief, he determined to set it down as a hoax, for, said he, 'What on earth can the people of London mean by sending me forty-one tons of indigo?' It was more than sufficient, with the then consumption, to supply Aberdeen for a gude Scotch generation—twenty one years. However, his prudence still prevailed over every other operation of his mind.

Like a canny Scot, he kept his perplexity to himself, for nothing was farther from his thoughts than to run hither and thither with his mouth open, and the letter in his hand, in order to tell his tale of wonder, and excite the stupid exclamations of his neighbors. Notwithstanding this stoical conduct, he could not so far command his deportment, but that those about him remarked a definite, though a mysterious change in his whole man. He was nearly silent; but the activity of his feet made up for the idleness of his tongue. He was fidgetty, repeatedly leaving his shop without any conceivable reason, and returning hastily to it on the same rational grounds. For once in his life, his neighbors thought that wily Donald did not very well know what he was about.

In the midst of this agitation, time and tide, which wait for no man, brought the vessel that bore the indigo to Aberdeen. It would seem that, in order to quicken Mr. Donald's apprehension, she had an extraordinary quick passage. No sooner was she moored, than the captain hastened to find the merchant to whom this large and valuable cargo was consigned. Having gone previously to the merchants, he, by nice gradations, at length arrived at the shop of the actual consignee, honest Donald M'Grie. Indeed, the skipper was as much astonished at the minuteness of the warehouse, which had it contained nothing else, would not have held the one-fifth of the consignment.

After the first few introductory sentences, that made each aware of what was their mutual business, the captain became convinced that all was right, from the quiet conduct of Donald, betrayed neither emotion nor surprise, though at the same time his heart was melting within him, as melts an exposed rushlight on a sunshiny summer's day.'

'And sae, sir, ye'll be sure ye' a brought the tottle of forty-one tons, A lugeous quantity, eh, sir? And did ye ever any one mon hae sae mickle before?'

'Never, Mr. M'Grie, never. Why, sir, do you know that the difficulty of getting all the indigo together had an effect on the market. It was full three farthings the pound dearer on Change the very day I left London.'

'O, ay-purely. It was—was it? Now I'll just put ane case—not that it is o' the slightest consequence, but merely tosatisfy my conjecture—supposing, mon, ye had all this indigo, what would you just do wi' it?'

'Why,' said the skipper, 'I should not have bought it unless I wanted it; and if I had wanted it I should have known what to do with it. That is, M'Grie, precisely your case.'

'Ah, well, my mon, but you're an unco' cannie chiel. Do you ken whether his precious majesty, may God bless him, ain't goan to make the volunteer ladies wear blue regimentals—blue is a pure standing color.'

'Why, I don't know, but some report of that sort may be stirring, for what with your large demand, and other matters, indigo is certainly getting up. But my time is precious. Here's your bill of lading, so just sign my papers—ah, all right—when and where shall I discharge the cargo?'

'Don't fash yourself, there'na nae hurry. I'll just speak to two or three of my worshipfu' correspondents, and let you know on the morrow, or aiblins the next day after. I may hae to send to Edinbro' anent the matter.'

'Ah, yes, I understand, a joint consignment. It won't prove a bad speculation, I'm thinking. Good morning, Mr. M'Grie.'

So away trudged the skipper, leaving the owner of much indigo in a state of doleful perplexity, such as ought not to befall any honest man. All that night he kept exclaiming, 'Gude Lord, gude Lord, what shall I do with all this indigo? Na, na, Donald will not commit himself. But it's a mickle heap!'

Very early was Donald abroad the next morning inquiring of every body all the possible uses to which indigo could be put. He got but very little satisfaction on this point. He began himself to look dark blue. He had almost resolved upon a journey to London, awful as it appeared to him, to have this mistake explained, but he still resolved to wait a little, and to do nothing in a hurry.

The next thing that happened to Donald, with his forty-one tons of dye, was his sad reflections when an old woman came and bought of him one farthing's worth of stone blue.

'Had ye na better try indigo, my gude frein?' says Donald to the old washerwoman.

'And what think ye, gudie mon McGirie, I'll be doing with indigo in the suds? Out awa, mon, but yer gafling a puir old body.' So off the old lady trudged with a damaged temper.

'Had I sold a farthing's worth o' this domned indigo, 'twould have been a beginning. Had the auld washer bodies had taken to it! and every little helps.'

About this time, the skipper who had brought the indigo was just passing the principal inn of Aberdeen, he observed a postchaise and four, with the horses all foam, stop with a most imposing jerk at the door, managing and confidential clerk of Hubbens, Hotbins and Robbing, the eminent drysalters. The clerk almost flew into the arms of the skipper, and with breathless eagerness asked him if he had delivered the indigo to McGirie?

'No; it is still in the vessel, but he has the manifest and the bill of sale.'

'Then the property is now vested in him?'

'As securely as the hair upon your head is your own property. He seems cautious even for a Scotchman.'

'Is he in a large line of business?'

'I can't really say that. We should call his place of trade nothing better than a chandler's shop in London. But they manage things in another way here.'

'What can he possibly want with all this indigo? He has actually drained the market, and we have just received advices that all the crops of indigo have failed in the West Indies. There is also a large demand for it from government, and it is now actually worth its weight in gold.'

'You don't say so. Why, he was saying something like it. No doubt but that some West Indiaman has brought the news here of the failure of the crops. Besides, he talked largely about his correspondents.'

'And I am losing all this precious time! Where does he live? I know nothing about the place.'

'I will go with you, if you choose. I should like to see how the douce Scot manages it.'

'No good, captain. Just show me the door. If I prosper you will just have to take the stuff back to London.'

'So I thought. But mind your bearings and distances with M'Grie. He is an overcautious tradesman.'

It had been a dull morning with Donald. He had sold a little snuff and a little sand, a little cheese, and a half-score of ballads for a half-penny, but not a particle of indigo, or no more stone or powdered blue. He was never known to give such short weight. He had wrangled awfully with his few customers, and was, altogether, in a very nasty humor.

'I would just gie twa punds Scotch to get out of this scrape, and some odd silver over;' and as he thus exclaimed aloud he struck the pound of butter that he was making up with his wooden paddles, a blow so spiteful, that it resounded like the report of a pistol.

At this moment the clerk entered. He paused for a space just within its threshold, scornfully surveyed the shop and its contents, looked with an air that was not far short of contempt on his proprietor, and immediately settled in his mind his plan of action. He was something of the petit maitre, so he placed his white cambric handkerchief before his nose and mouth and then jerked it away exclaiming, 'Faugh!' taking from his waistcoat pocket a smelling bottle, which like Shakespeare's pophyry,

"Ever and anon he gave it to his nose,
And took't away again."

But it was Donald who'

"Being angry when it next came there, Took it in snuff."

'What would ye please to buy, honest man?' said Donald pettishly.

'Buy, my good fellow, buy! Does any one ever buy anything here? You will pardon me but the stench is intolerable.'

'Ye fause young callant! Here ne nae thing but wholesome smells, such as sic pair thread paper bodies as your gainsell might grow sleek upon. An' ye no like the odor, healthfu' as it be, twist round yer ugly snout, and there lies the doorway. So tramp, ye neer-do-well.'

'Pard on me. I am sure, sir, I did not come to quarrel with you, but merely to rectify a mistake. I believe I am speaking to Mr. M'Grie—Mr. Donald M'Grie?'

'Ye don't lee, nae,' said Donald; very moodily.'

'I wish to release you from a great deal of uneasiness, in making right this little mistake of yours.'

'And pray where may ye be from?'

'London, Mr. M'Grie, the centre of the arts, the seat of sovereignty—the emporium of the world—but that is nothing here nor there—I come from London, Mr. M'Grie.'

'And how long might ye a' made this long journey? Aiblins by the slow waggon?'

'It is you that are slow, my good sir,' said the clerk, flourishing his handkerchief tastefully. 'Chaise and four—spanking along—astonished the natives—never lost a moment, I assure you.'

'Ye'll be making a long stay, nae doubt, in bonny Aberdeen?'

'Not a minute after I've rectified this little mistake. Southward ho! That's the word!'

'So,' thought Donald, 'this spruce young chap is come, I'm sure about the indigo doubtless?' said Donald after a pause, and very deliberately.

'Yes. My principals feel sure that you have made a trifling mistake in the amount of your order; so, to relieve your anxiety, they have sent me down to you to say that they are willing to take the indigo back, and release you from your bargain, provided that you will pay the freight—and a very generous offer it is, I can tell you.'

'I am sure that I am over obliged to the gude gentlemen. But pray, sir, who may be yer sinsel? A modest young man, nae doubt, but humble—yer preferment's to all to come. One would just like to know whom one is treating wi'—some junior clerk, or perhaps one of the warehousemen?—surely ye no be ane of the porters?'

Very indignant indeed was the fop at these degrading conjectures. With much hauteur he exclaimed, 'I must acquaint you that I am the confidential principal and managing director of the firm's vast mercantile operations; that I am a near relation of Mr. Hubbens, the head of the firm; and that I have full power and authority to do just what I please in this, as in every other transaction. My name, sir, is Daniel Hubbens, at your service. What do you say to my offer?'

'I should like to glance at your authority—no offence.'

Mr. Daniel Hubbens was offended, but finding the Scotchman firm, he was obliged to give him the necessary vouchers that he was empowered to treat with him for a resale of the merchandise. The examination of this document still further opened the eyes of McGirie to the value of his late purchase, and he finally became more dou ged and consequential.

Mr. Hobbens, perceiving the turn affairs were likely to take, and that he had a difficult task to perform, at once altered the loftiness of his manner, and said,

'Well, well my dear sir, the fact is you have long bought from us. I wish now to see if we, our very respectable firm, cannot purchase from you. So come down to my inn, and we'll talk the matter over a bottle of the best you can call for.'

'Oh! there's nae occasion; just say a' here.'

'No, no, my dear sir; come with me you must. I am very tired, and the best supper that Aberdeen can produce is providing for us two.'

'See ye are prepared for me. I understand. Ye would nae ta'en all this troublous wark for little. I'll awa wit you, my man.'

And awa they both went; in the short journey to the inn Donald, cogitating on the utmost he should ask for the re-sale of the indigo, and the managing clerk endeavoring to divert his thoughts from the value of the goods in his possession.

The supper and its accessories were the best that ever fell to the lot of Donald to share; but he was prudent, and the clerk gained no advantage through the means of his lavish expenditure of choice wines, so, after many flourishes, and much circulation, he was forced to put the plain question to his guest, 'What will you take to pass your cargo of indigo back to our firm?'

'Troth, Mr. Hubbens, I'm at a loss a bit. What will ye gie, truly?'

'Why, Mr. McGrie, the fact is, we have received a very unexpected order for the article, and our people have empowered me to come to Aberdeen and offer you a thousand pounds to return the cargo just as you got it. There is a glorious chance for you! A thousand pounds! Don't you feel yourself in heaven.'

'No, no; I'm better advised than that comes to. I didna buy the mickle lot but upon sound calculations. I have friens, sir, friens who have the first intelligence.'

It is as I suspected, though the clerk has had the first news of the general failure of the crops.

'I'll tell you what it is, Mr M'Grie—it is a bold step, but I'll take it upon myself to double the offer. Two thousand, sir, two thousand! Hey?'

'Indeed, no, my mon. I can make mair o't than that.'

'Weel, I must let you keep it,' said the youngster, with an air of well-affected indifference.

'Weel, weel, young sir, hear's to yer verra gude health, young sir, and a pleasant journey back.'

'Thank you, sir. May the indigo prosper with you!'

They drank two glasses of wine each in silence. The mortification of Hubbens could not be concealed, whilst M'Grie's visage represented content carved out in stone.

After a considerable pause, the clerk lost his temper entirely—his patience had long gone before it—and he resumed the attack upon the imperturable Donald. At length the would-be purchaser, not at all liking the prospect and the shame of an unsuccessful journey back to his principals, in a fit of desperation pulled out his private instructions, and said, 'Here, read that, obstinate man of iron that you are. Just so far am I permitted to go and no farther.'

M'Grie read very deliberately that his host was empowered to offer him the freight both ways and four thousand pounds.

'It is driving me hard,' said Donald; 'but as you are an unco' amiable young man, and as' to fash you with your employers, gude men, I'll just consent. And to show ye that I can be liberal too, why, when ye hae settled the reckoning, I'll stand a pint o' Glenlivet atween the the twa of us.'

After this, the transaction was immediately wound up, and the money paid down.

Donald M'Grie took this accession of fortune coolly and temperately. He reflected that men make a thousand unlucky for one lucky mistake, and that cargoes of indigo don't always quadruple themselves in price when bought by misadventure. Reflecting upon all this, he resolved at this the proper season, to retire from business. So he made over his stock in trade and his house to his nephew—'for a consideration' of course—and bon bi the lands of C—— C——, which at this moment are worth five times the money paid for them.

We have made out our case, and that by the means of no fiction. It well exemplifies our moral, 'In matters of moment, never speak first and never speak hastily.' In the lives of the most unfortunate among us, many lucky opportunities occur. It is neither the learned nor the clever who know best how to seize them, and to turn them to the best advantage. This faculty belongs to the prudent. Had Donald M'Grie spoken first, and spoken the wish of his heart, he would have said, 'Pray take fifty pounds, and me release from my bargain.' He held his tongue until it was a proper time to speak, and thus realized a handsome independence for himself and his children.

SIZE OF THE ARK.

Infidels have objected to the size of the ark,—have asserted that it is quite absurd to suppose that ever there could be a vessel constructed large enough to hold all the creatures which must have been placed in it, with sufficient food, it may be, from six to twelve months,—water for the fish corn for the four-footed animals, seed for the birds, and so on. Now we will take the dimensions of the ark from the record of Moses, and calculate them on the lowest possible scale.

There are two definitions given to a cubit; the lowest is eighteen inches. We will take it only at the lowest. Moses states that the ark was three hundred cubits long; this would make it 5 feet in length and fifty feet long, or about. The St. Paul's Cathedral is forty cubits; we breadth it twenty-five feet in breath,—then have to be thirty-eight cubits high, He ark was forty feet in height. Tonnage of the ark, according to the computation of modern steamers, must have been thirty-two hundred tons. The largest English ship, of a size altogether unmanageable by those who have never seen it, is two thousand five hundred tons burden; so that the ark must have been equal to seventeen of these ships of war, and if armed as such ships are, it would have contained beyond 13,000 men, and provisions for them for eighteen months. Buffon has asserted that all four footed animals may be reduced to two hundred and fifty pairs, and the bird to a still smaller number. On calculation, however, we find that the ark would have had more than five times the necessary number of creatures, and more than five times the required quantity of food to maintain them for twelve months.—Israelite.

FENIAN PARADE AT BUFFALO.

CAPTURE OF THE ARMS CAPTURED BY THE 'MICHIGAN.'

(From the Buffalo Courier, Dec. 5th.)

Yesterday afternoon was the time appointed for a grand parade of the Fenian Brotherhood of Buffalo, and the occasion was the reception of the arms, accoutrements, &c., captured from Gen. O'Neil's party, on their return from the invasion of Canada in June last, by the United States steamer 'Michigan.' Notwithstanding the inclement weather and the cold drizzling rain that fell, a large crowd, composed of citizens of all nationalities, commenced ascending about half-past 12 o'clock in front of the Fenian Head-quarters, No. 41 Pearl street, and by half-past one o'clock, the hour appointed for the procession to move, several thousand people thronged the street to witness the forming of the line and to welcome back to the Irish army.

Had the weather been favorable the demonstration would have been one of the very largest ever made in Buffalo. The public impression, however, that the parade would be postponed to a more favorable day, caused many of the Brotherhood to remain at home. The knowledge that the 'Michigan' was under sailing orders to leave on Erie, Pa., at which point she could not permit of delay, and the pressing cause, such as public address, was dispensed with.

At the hour agreed upon, the line of march was formed on Pearl Street. The military companies were fully represented and equipped with the most improved guns, &c., and being principally composed of men, who had seen service in the battle-field, and being well drilled and disciplined, attracted marked attention by their soldier-like appearance.

Col. Bailey the commanding officer, was mounted, and his staff were a cavalry escort, with green and gold bullion epaulettes, and mounted with a white heron plume.

As the procession moved along the route, the streets were crowded with lookers on, many of whom catching the spirit of the day themselves, and being charmed with the Irish music as played by the band, followed the procession through mud and rain from the corner of Main to Black Rock Dam.

On arriving opposite the point where the 'Michigan' was lying, the possession was handed over to Niagara street, and the Express Company moved to the dock to receive the arms, a bond that the arms should be used on no other occasion having been signed the previous day by P. C. Darling and John Magnire.

CAPTURE OF THE ARMS.

Messrs. P. O'Day and P. B. Gallagher visited the 'Michigan' and presented Capt. Bryson with the following order from Gen. Attorney Stanger, directed the transfer of the arms:—

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 3, 1866.

Capt. A. Bryson, U. S. Steamer 'Michigan':

Sir,—Please to deliver to P. O'Day, of Buffalo, the articles above named; being the arms &c., now in your possession, and lately taken from the Fenians, so called.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

(Signed) G. S. MANGER,
U. S. Attorney for Northern District, N. Y.

Fifty-one Arms, &c.—4 Spencer rifles, 7.2 muskets (rifles), 246 musket bayonets, 187 cartridge (musket) boxes, 189 bayonet scabbards, 111 waist belts, 9 shoulder belts, 21 swords, 24 sabbards, 34 revolvers, 2-2 revolver cases, 1 Fenian flag, 2 standard staves, 1 standard head and sling, 1 lot of cartridges.

Upon Mr. P. O'Day signing the following receipt which was attached to the above order, a gun of the 'Michigan's' crew was immediately set to work to pass the property from the "black hole." And a line formed by which it was passed ashore:—

Received the above from Captain A. Bryson, commanding U. S. Steamer 'Michigan'

(Signed) P. O'DAY.

The property thus delivered up consisted all that was taken from General O'Neil's party when captured, save the trophies in the shape of muskets and a stand of colors captured from the British troops at Fort Erie by the inhabitants of which, or whether they ever came on board of the 'Michigan,' Captain Bryson seemed to have no knowledge.

When the last of the property had been turned over, Mr. O'Day proposed three cheers for Uncle Sam, the officers of the 'Michigan' and the Irish Republic, which were heartily responded to by the crowd on the dock and the crew of the 'Michigan,' who seemed to be delighted to be rid of the property in their charge, and glad that it was about to be returned to its rightful owners.

When the arms, &c., had been placed on the waggons they were driven to the Pearl street headquarters, and halted, and were then opened, drums, arms presented, and the whole cheers.

Order was then given to march, and the procession returned in the same order to the auction room of Morris Vaughan, Esq., corner of Exchange and Washington streets, where, it is said, they will be disposed of at public auction to the highest bidder, thus relieving the boodsman of all responsibility for their future use.

The captured flag returned to the brotherhood, yesterday, was the beautiful banner presented, some time since, by the Fenian sisterhood at Buffalo, and in the return procession, was borne by John Smith, the standard bearer who carried it triumphantly through the fight at Ridgeway and the skirmish at Fort Erie.

Amongst those present to witness the delivery of the arms was a large delegation of representative men of the Brotherhood from Rochester, who, we understand, were handsomely entertained while here, and returned to their homes by the late train. It was late when the procession returned to the head-quarters on Pearl street. After being dismissed, they separated in squads to their respective homes, the most perfect order being maintained throughout; thus preserving the excellent reputation earned by the Fenians in this city during the excited times of the Canadian invasion last June.

Houses of Industry and Refuge for the County.

It has long been felt that something ought to be done to relieve the country from the burden of supporting parties that are well able to support themselves, and although we do not exactly see the good that will be accomplished by all the changes that have been made in the new Municipal Act, yet we think that the clause that makes it the duty of County Councils under certain conditions, to establish Houses of Refuge and Industrial Farms, is one that will work much good if properly carried out. The Act says:—Section

413. The Council of every County, City or Town separated from a County may acquire or retain in landed property Farm Buildings, Farm, and chattels not exceeding two years after the passing of the Act, establish a House of Industry and a House of Refuge, and provide by By-law for the erection and repair thereof, and for the appointment, payment and duties of inspectors, keepers, matrons and other servants for the superintendence, care and management of such Houses of Industry or Refuge, and in like manner make rules and regulations (not repugnant to law) for the government of the same; provided always, that any two or more united Counties, or any two or more contiguous Counties, having each a population of not more than twenty thousand inhabitants, may agree to have only one House of Industry for such united or contiguous Counties, but whenever such united Counties become separate Municipalities, or the population in any separate County shall exceed twenty thousand inhabitants, then, and in each of such cases, such County shall establish a House of Industry and Refuge within its own limits, and maintain and keep up the same in the manner herein provided.

411. Any two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, or of the inspector appointed as aforesaid, may, by writing under their hands and seals, commit to the House of Industry or of Refuge, to be employed and governed according to the rules, regulations and orders of the House:

First.—All poor and indigent persons who are incapable of supporting themselves;

Second.—All persons without means of maintaining two or more and able of body to work and who refuse or neglect to do so;

Third.—All persons leading a loose, dissolute, or vagrant life, and exercising no ordinary calling, or lawful business sufficient to gain or procure an honest living;

Fourth.—And all such as spend their time and property in public houses, to the neglect of any lawful calling;

Fifth.—And thirdly.

415. Every person committed to the House of Industry or of Refuge, if fit and able, shall be kept diligently employed at labor during the continuance thereof, and may be kept in close confinement, and if he or she refuse to work or labor as may be required, or is stubborn, disobedient or disorderly, such person could be punished according to the rules and regulations of the House of Industry or of Refuge in that behalf.

416. The Inspector shall keep an account of the charges of erecting, keeping, upholding and maintaining the House of Industry and Refuge, and of all materials found and furnished therefor, together with the names of the persons received into the House, as well as of those discharged therefrom, and also of the earnings, and such account shall be rendered to the County Council every year, or oftener, when required by a By-law of the Council, and a copy thereof shall be presented to each branch of the Legislature.

417. The Council of every City and Town may respectively pass By-laws:

First.—For erecting and establishing with in the City or Town, or on such Industrial Farm, or on any ground held by the Corporation for public exhibitions, a Work House or House of Correction, and for regulating the government thereof;

Second.—For committing and sending, with or without hard labour, to the Work-House or House of Correction, or to the Industrial Farm, by the Mayor, Recorder, Police Magistrate or two Justices of the Peace for the City or Town respectively, such description of per sons as may by the Council be deemed and by By-law be declared expedient, and such farm or ground held as aforesaid, shall, for the purposes in this sub-section mentioned, be deemed to be within the City or Town and the jurisdiction thereof.

From the above sections and subsections it will be seen that the duty is imperative, and that within two years from the passing of this act. We may expect, therefore, that our next Council will have the work to inaugurate, and perhaps complete the requirements of the act. This we hold will be a boon to the community by relieving them of the burden of supporting many that really require support, but who confine themselves to one locality thereby putting the whole burden on a few of the more charitable.

But the parts that we admire most, are sub-sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, under section 414. There are many who are capable of maintaining themselves but who refuse to do so; they are too lazy. These will then be compelled to earn their own living as they should, by the sweat of their brow. And the lewd, dissolute, and vagrant will be provided for.

In the County Council at its late session, the subject of erecting a partly reformed penitentiate to Magdalen Asylum, a plan designed for such characters, was discussed, and the councillor who brought the matter up in the council deserves the praises of all right thinging people for his efforts in behalf of fallen, and degraded humanity; and to the credit of the whole, there was a desire expressed by every member to do something for the unfortunate woman, but the Council could not see their way clear in the matter. Under the new law, those unfortunate creatures will be taken up and cared for. And all such as spend their time and property in public houses, to the neglect of any lawful calling. What a boon to those poor souls who have no power to keep out of harms way? the strong wall will compel them.

Every person committed to such House of industry will be kept diligently employed at hair, etc. This we feel, is a step in the right direction. Heretofore they have been committed to jail, and scraped, washed and cleaned, fed and provided for at the public expense. We will then find that there will be fewer cases of "gone up for 21 days." We trust that County and Town Councils will see to it and carry out this part of the act, if no other parts should ever be attended to.

BOARD OF INSTRUCTION.

The Senior Board of Instruction for the County held the semi-annual examination of Teachers, during last Thursday and Friday. There were about fifty teachers or aspirants, present. The Board proceeded very carefully, but found, that if very strict, they would have to cut off not a few, who have been engaged in teaching during several years. Not willing to do this at once, they thought it best to grant certificates for short periods with a view to stimulate teachers to self-improvement. The Secretary was instructed to inform the least worthy recipients of certificates where they failed in their examination, and this also with a view to stir them up. The Board acted leniently this time being the first effort to raise the standard of qualification in this county, and they trust that their successors will continue the good work.

Disappointed aspirants will feel aggrieved no doubt, but the interests of the rising generation must be of greater importance in the eyes of the Board than that of any individual teacher. Raising the standard, however, will, in the end, benefit teachers, as it will be the means of removing unworthy members out of the profession, and thereby induce a greater respect for those that are properly qualified.

TO TEACHERS.

We would also take this opportunity of advising Teachers to form Township Associations, and also a County Association, for the Teachers' special benefit. We have long appreciated the wisdom of having such associations, and never were we more convinced of their utility and of the necessity for them, than at present. And we hope yet to see a law that will compel Teachers to spend one day every month for the purpose of mutual improvement. We drive no hesitation in saying that nothing but laziness or a sense of unfitness to take part in the proceedings prevents teachers from coming forward at once and establishing an association in this county; and more than once have we heard this remarked. Superintendents of Schools should insist that an association be formed in every township, and teachers who do not attend, and fail at meetings of the Board, should be compelled to bear the consequence of their indifference.

RELIGIOUS.

The Committee of the Branch of the Bible Society held a meeting in the Secretary's office, on Monday last. Col. Haultain, convener of a sub-committee to take into consideration the wisdom of employing a Collector for the County, made a report in which we learned that the Committee had had Mr. Samson in the field for about three and a half months, during which period he had visited almost every part of the County. He sold number of copies of the Scriptures—Bibles, Testaments—and gave away. He also sold some tracts and religious books. He was received kindly by all to whom he went, and treated hospitably. The subject of employing a French and English speaking Collector for the winter months was discussed and the matter left in the hands of the resident clergy, Col. Haultain and A. H. Campbell, Esq., who literally offered to pay one half the expense of the agent, if the funds should be needed. Mr. Campbell is to write, so as to obtain a suitable person to go the Shanties. Mr. Samson's report of his labours was read and considered very satisfactory, and there was some talking of reappointing him to visit the English-speaking settlement on the Burleigh Road, but this may depend on Mr. Campbell's success in obtaining an agent who can speak French.

The Secretary and Mr. W. Hall were appointed to arrange for meetings to be held at the same places as last year, so as to stir up the people to give more liberally to this great and good object—the distribution of the Word of Life.

The anniversary meeting will be held this year in St. Andrew's (Presbyterian) church. The time, of course, is not yet known.

That Ten Dollars and the Defaulting Municipality.

Our readers will remember that in our report of the June session of the County Council, we referred to a letter from the Hon. Billa Flint, to the Warden, relating to ten dollars that had been sent to one of the municipalities of this county, but which had never been accounted for. The defaulting municipality turns out to be the Township of Burleigh. Mr. Flint, in a letter which accompanies the ten dollars this year, says: "In reference to ten dollars sent last year for the same purpose, I sent it to the Reeve of the Township, who, after some months elapsed, in answer to my enquiry stated, 'that as there were no schools in the Township he had returned the money by mail.' I know onething, I never received the ten dollars by mail or otherwise; and its loss caused me to adopt the principe not to remit any further only as first appropriated by the Council and properly authenticated by the Reeve or Clerk. I have the party's letter, which if I could lay my hands on, I could quote the exact words and give his name, &c., &c." It appears, therefore, that the money has been lost in passing through the post offices between Burleigh and Belleville.

There was a fearful gale on the Lakes on Saturday last. We have not heard of much damage, but this may be owing to the fact that vessels are nearly all laid up for the season.

The Lecture on Tuesday Evening.

The lecture on Tuesday evening, by the Rev. Mr. Cartwright, under the auspices of the Literary Club, was one of the best we have heard in Peterboro. The hall was not as well filled as we would have wished to see it; but the audience was an appreciative one. The Rev. Lecturer had for his subject, "The Signs of the Times," in a very able and eloquent manner. His diction is easy and chaste, his command of language unbounded, and during the lecture there were several thrills of eloquence rarely surpassed by any speaker. After the lecture Col. Haultain proposed, Mr. J. A. Hall seconded, a vote of thanks to the Rev. Gentleman, which was unanimously and enthusiastically accorded. The Club deserve great praise for obtaining the services of Mr. Cartwright, and we trust that they will be fortunate enough to get him to come and give us another lecture during the winter. But is it not too bad that they have to pay out of their own pockets over $6.00. Surely the citizens will not allow the club thus to suffer. Since writing the above we have received a communication, which we publish elsewhere, on the subject.

THE BRIDGE.

On Sabbath evening about six o'clock, several of the bents that have been erected under the bridge, for the purpose of getting the bridge repaired, were swept away. Gentlemen and ladies who were on the bridge at the time got a little scared, and one individual ran for his life fearing a watery bed was about to be his doom. The cause of it was the giving away of part of a new wing-dam lately erected by Mr. Rogers, the new work not having been filled with stone at the time. Had the whole bents been removed the entire bridge would, without doubt, have fallen, as no part of the bridge is at present resting on anything like solid work. The water in the River has not been known to be so high for many years. It would be wisdom to construct booms that would cause all floating logs, &c., to go down channel if for that purpose. If the bridge should get into the river it would be a serious matter; so long as the frame under it remains, it is safe, but a quantity of driftwood might sweep all away.

FENIANISM IN IRELAND.

Fenians in Ireland are active, but the constabulary are also alive. Seizure of arms have been made at Cork, Limerick and other places. There is an universal stir at all places where a landing might possibly be effected. At Belfast arms have been seized while being hauled from a vessel in a box, as if glassware. No outbreak has taken place, and every precaution is being taken to crush a first uprising. It will be a foolish and a fatal act for all who attempt to overthrow the established authority. The loyal party are armed and ready for any emergency.

NEW BOOK.

EARLY SETTLEMENT AND SUBSEQUENT PROGRESS OF THE TOWN AND COUNTY, BY DR. PARKS.

We are informed that there are 111 pages of the above work printed. The author is bringing it out at the rate of about 24 pages per week. It will, therefore, be completed in about two weeks. The work will contain a great deal about the early settlement of the County; and, being published at home, and by a citizen, it deserves a liberal encouragement.

Burglary.

Last week, during the absence from town of R. W. Erret, Esq., Insurance Agent, some scoundrel entered his office and took all the books and papers connected with several insurances offices therefrom, and also some writing paper. No traces can be discovered of their whereabouts. It is now believed that they are consumed by fire or otherwise rendered useless. This act is the more outrage as the books can be of no use to any person but the owner, and nothing but the most wanton villainy could have actuated the perpetrator. The constables are on the look out, and if the wretch or wretches be found, we trust they will receive their reward.

Books and Stationery.

Graham & Stratton are selling their extensive stock of Books, Stationery, Fancy articles, Combs, Brushes, Toys, Room Paper, &c., &c., at very low prices, which they will continue to do till after the New Year. Purchasers will obtain goods at their own prices. A call will satisfy that they are selling very low.

We would bring to remembrance the examination in the Grammar and Union School, during the ensuing week. All friends of education should attend: no parent can be excused for non-attendance.—The teachers expect parents to attend, so do the children; and their expectation should not be disappointed.

Hustlers. Mr. McGee and Mr. Erwin have run foul of each other. Mr. McGee attacked Mr. Brown personally, because he would not give up the name of his correspondent. The Globe enumerates Mr. McGee's weak points. The Minister of Agriculture would have shown more wisdom by being silent.

CAPTURE OF SURRATT.—Surratt, the person who, it was said, murdered President Lincoln, has been discovered, serving in the Papal Zouaves. The whole proceeding relative to his discovery and complicity with the crime is in the hands of the Washington authorities.

TEA MEETING.—The friends of the Bible Christian denomination here intend having a Public Tea, on the evening of the 24th instant. It will be in the vestry of the church, at 6 o'clock p. m. After the Tea there will be music and speeches. We advise our readers to remember the evening.

A most damaging letter against Stephens, the Fenian, has appeared in the N.Y. Times. The writer, who held a very high position in the Fenian organization, calls Stephens everything but an honest man. By this letter it appears that Stephens has received $363,000 for which he rendered no account.

A shed belonging to Mr James Chambers, and just beside the dwelling of Mr. Green, was set fire to a night or two since. A horse blanket, saturated with coal oil, had been employed.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—The steam-ship Queen, which sailed to-day, had some 340 passengers, mostly males and supposed to be Fenians.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

Thursday Dec. 6th, 1866.

Council met. 15 present; 3 absent.

Moved by Mr. Carnegie, seconded by Mr. Grover,—That the petition of the Fire Company for the annual allowance of $2, be now granted, and the money paid on production of the necessary certificates to the Treasurer. The Council adjourned for two weeks.

Ashburnham Council.

The Council of the Village of Ashburnham met on Monday evening.

Present—The Reeve and Messrs. Clark and Sutherland.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A few small accounts were ordered to be paid.

The propriety of granting a small amount towards the erection of the drill shed in Ashburnham was discussed but nothing definite done more than what had been done at the previous meeting of the Council.

A few dog cases were disposed of.

The collector was directed to allow John Maniece and Hugh Fisher the amount of their poll tax, they having, also, to pay taxes on real estate.

Council of Burleigh, &c.

A meeting of the Council of the United Townships of Burleigh, Anstruther, Chandos, Cardiff, Monmouth, Harcourt & Bruton held this 5th day of November, 1866.

Present—John Carroll, Reeve, D. B. Castiday, Caleb Lousley, Patrick Scott.

A communication was read from the Commissioner of Crown Lands with regard to the suit brought against A. H Campbell & Co., for cutting timber on the road allowance of this Municipality.

A communication was read from C. Perry Esq., offering to purchase the timber on the concession lines, and on the road allowance road Eel's Lake.

Moved by Mr. Lousley, seconded by Mr. Castiday,—That the Clerk be instructed to write to the Commissioner of Crown Lands and explain that the suit pending against Messrs. A. H. Campbell & Co., is not alone for the timber cut on the road allowances in the Township of Burleigh, but for timber cut on the road allowances in the Township of Anstruther and Chandos as well, and also explain that the timber cut on the road allowances in the Township of Burleigh was not cut in ignorance of the new survey, as Messrs Campbell & Co., were well aware of such survey having been made and that both they and their workmen knew that they were trespassing on the the road all was cut and that it was the intention of the Council to prosecute for such trespass.

Moved by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Lousley, - That the communication of C. Perry Esq., be referred to the Reeve to be dealt with in accordance with the resolution passed at the last meeting of Council, and that he be also authorized to deal with all other applications that that have been made for the purchase of timber and to execute agreements for the sale of same on behalf of the Municipality.

Moved by Mr. Castiday, seconded by Mr. Lousley,—That the Reeve be instructed to pay Mr. L. Tallon his commission out of the money paid to Messrs Weller & Hatton for the timber cut on the road allowances of the Municipality and also to pay such expenses as have been incurred in connection with the suit against Messrs A. H. Campbell & Co., and to deposit the balance of such money in the hands of the Treasurer, and that the Reeve place in the hands of the Clerk a statement of the above disbursements.

Moved by Mr. Lousley, seconded by Mr. Scott,—That a By-law be passed appointing a place to hold the next election of this Municipality.

Moved by Mr. Castiday, seconded by Mr. Scott,—That a By-law appointing the place to hold the next Municipal election be now read a first time and that the Council go into committee on the second reading.

Mr. Castiday in the chair.

By-law read in committee, and reported without amendment.

Moved by Mr Castiday, seconded by Mr. Tousley,—That providing a sufficient amount of money shall be paid into this Municipality on or before the 1st of January, 1867, being the proceeds of the sale of non-resident lands and timber cut on the lines of the Municipality that the Reeve be and is hereby authorized to pay to the four School Corporations in this Municipality, the sum of $100 each, the said several sums of $100, to be expended in the erection of School Houses, or where School Houses have already been erected for the maintenance of the Schools in the said several School sections.

Moved by Mr. Lousley, seconded by Mr Castiday,—That the By-law appointing the place to hold the next Municipal election be now read a third time and finally passed, and the seal attached.

Moved by Mr. Castiday, seconded by Mr Scott—That M O'Brien be paid the sum of three dollars for work done on the road.

E. S. HALL, T. C.

The following letter which we have received from Mr Sheriff Hall shows, that he and all on the train on which he was narrowly escaped with whole bones. The conductor of the freight train into which they ran must have been highly culpable in not making signals both ways, so as to arrest other trains. What a fearful thing it is to be at the mercy of such men. We feel persuaded, that if the accident was made known at headquarters, an enquiry would be instituted:—

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—On Friday the 30th Nov., about 10 p. m., as we were driving along on the Grand Trunk at the rate of 15 or 20 miles an hour, we were brought to a stand still in a moment, most of the passengers thrown from their seats, all hurt more or less but none seriously, in the car in which I was. In the night car, however, some were badly injured; some bruised severely. One poor old Irishman protesting he was "kilt entirely," but on examining we found a rather severe cut on the shins but otherwise he was all sound. The night being very dark and stormy we had some difficulty in finding out the cause of our delay; but after groping my way to where the engine should have been, I found it was completely demolished, having run into the rear of a freight train, smashing up the mail car and setting it on fire and it was then blazing furiously, but after a little put out, as fortunately there was an abundant supply of water in the ditches. We found the road completely choked up with the debris and by chance of getting on ex-pilot by walking some 2 or 3 miles to Island Pond, and that over a very dangerous part of the road. But there was no alternative except remain in the cars all night at the risk of being again run into by the next train, then about due. We concluded it best to try the walk and after a good deal of trouble managed to get to the hotel about one o'clock, very thankful to find ourselves with sound bones if not with whole skins. From this we got on by another train in the morning, and reached this place in good time after all.

What we have to complain of is the gross and unpardonable carelessness in giving no, not one of an obstruction on the road, either by telegraph or signal, until we collided. It is almost a miracle that a passenger train should be stopped at such a speed as we were going at, without several being killed. How the engine-driver escaped is wonderful, as the locomotive was completely buried under the wreck of the demolished freight cars. The trucks of the freight car were thrown off the track some ten or twelve feet and on the a pretty tight bank; and several of the other cars thrown off the track, and still very little injury done to our train.

Portland, 3rd Dec., 1866.

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner.

SIR,—I was one of the very small audience that attended the lecture given by the Rev. Mr. Cartwright here, on Tuesday night, under the auspices of the Literary Club; and I must say that I was surprised in several ways. I was surprised to hear such an eloquent and interesting lecture, for exceeding all idea I had of the Reverend lecturer's power, and I was also surprised at the paucity of attendance which was really disgraceful in a place like this. When efforts are made by a Club, like the Literary, to furnish amusement and instruction to the people of the town, the least they might do in return, is to prevent the Club from suffering pecuniary loss as has been the case in the present instance. People may say that they did not know who the lecturer was and consequently did not go; but in answer to this I may say, that they might rest assured that the Club would not bring a person to lecture unless they were certain of his abilities. It is the duty of the people of the town to encourage by all means in their power so deserving an institution as the Literary Club. I hope the Club will not be discouraged by this their first attempt in bringing foreign lecturers here, and that they will try it once again; and if such a small audience greets the lecturer, he may justly go away thinking that Peterborough is either too well informed on all subjects to be further enlightened, or that it is the most unintellectual place he ever was in.

Yours, &c.,

X.

Rev. Mr. Lumsden in Buffalo.

The Rev. Mr. Lumsden, recently tried in Toronto for being a Fenian raider, and acquitted without very solid grounds for acquital, has been lecturing in Buffalo on his recent experience among Fenians and in the Toronto gaol. The Buffalo Express says he did not compliment the Queen's Own very highly. He expressed surprise at the influence Gen. O'Neil held over the Fenians. At Port Colborne, a Canadian placed a pistol at the Rev. he'd sword by Mr. Lumsden, but an officer of the Queen's Own he says, interfered and preserved that portion of his sacred person from being fatally injured. He says the people of Fort Erie consist chiefly of gamblers and blacklegs. At Brantford, it was all the guard could do to prevent him from being torn to pieces by the mob, so indignant were they to find a Scotch clergyman among the Fenians.

He bestowed a high eulogium on the Sheriff of Toronto, and the governor of the gaol, who are "bricks." He next advocated the use of tobacco, on account of its soothing influence. His wife having visited him in jail, he pointed out the advantages he possessed over priest McMahan, who had no wife. Mr. C. Cameron and Mr. Thurston were highly complimented, but the two witnesses, Duggan and Lewis, were pronounced to be perjured villians. He complained that the Protestant clergy of Toronto paid no attention to him, while the Catholic priests of that city attended faithfully to the Catholic Fenians. He was entertained in the house of the lady visitors to the prison, but not to take Judge Wilson As to Ireland, he thought she should have the same rights in the British Empire as Scotland. He spoke for an hour and a half, and was at times applauded.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The following note on the subject of the Fenian prisoners was received from the English minister by Secretary Seward:—

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 26th ult., relating to the sentence of death passed on J. Lynch and J. McMahon, in Canada, and stating that the views entertained by the Government of the United States in the various considerations of law, policy, and humanity, which might be expected to arise in the course of the trials of the individuals concerned in the raid committed on Canada last spring, immediately on receipt of that note, I transmitted a copy of it to Her Majesty's Government, and await their instructions before entering at length upon the several weighty subjects contained in it.

The course pursued by the Canadian Government in bringing the cases before the regular tribunals of justice, thus giving to the prisoner the full protection which the law affords to the accused, and the readiness shown by them to communicate all such documents to the Consul of the United States as may throw light on the justice of the sentence and the Regularity of the proceedings will, I trust, satisfy the Government of the United States, that while unduly exercising the Majesty of the law, the authorities do not conduct the prosecution in any vindictive or harsh spirit. I am, moreover, authorized to state that the whole question of the disposal of such of the prisoners as may be convicted has been referred for decision to Her Majesty's Government, who will certainly be animated with the desire so to deal with it, that peace and harmony between populations living in such immediate proximity, and separated by a long frontier so easily traversed. I have the honour to be, with the highest consideration, your most obedient and humble servant,

FREDERICK BRUCE.

To the Hon. W. H. SEWARD.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The leading members of the Fenian Senate held an important meeting here yesterday. It is not known what business was transacted, but enough has transpired to know that the leaders favor an immediate movement on Canada.

THE MARINE GOLD REGIONS.—The parties who have bought the Richardson mine, are coming along with the wherewithal to complete the purchase. A gentleman who has just returned from the gold regions, says that he has taken gold from two different places between the "Richardson Mine." One of these places was in quartz sand, taken from the bed of the Moira River, where it runs through that Township. This is reliable, and settles the question of the occurrence of gold in quantities in Madoc. Messrs. Henry and John Cook, of Lots 18 and 20, in the 3d Concession, have sold the mineral right of the farm to a Canadian Company, composed of Mr. James Sutliff, Ontario Co., William Cotterell, Peterboro Co., Richard Graham, Peterboro Co., and William McConnell, of Cobourg, for the the sum of $30,000 to be paid on or before the 1st of February next.—Intelligencer.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, is see it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced on the authority of those who've lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, at 25 cts per box.

THE Subscriber respectfully informs the Commercial public of Canada and the British Provinces that he has at length succeeded, after years of experiment and research, in making a METAL PEN entirely impervious to rust from the acids contained in inks; especially when used with Arnold's Inks (Fluid), which for elasticity and smoothness of action over the poorest paper, stands unequalled.—Being Electro-Carbonized, they will outlast six or eight ordinary Pens, and are guaranteed not to cut through the thinnest foreign letter paper. The manufacturer feels confident that where the Electro-Carbonized Pens have been tried they will supersede all other makes and respectfully solicits a trial of them.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, releasing thousands from pains in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Destroyer has been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended, may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in soothing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Ordersare coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

All orders should be addressed to

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and will cut the exquisite of the former, here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers, their horses the sufferers, to avoid both use "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY
IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

Prescott, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.
Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen;

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assent [illegible] the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S
CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

ASTONISHING!

ASTOUNDING!!

CONFOUNDING!!!

BUT TRUE.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. V. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued shaking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

WILLIAM STORMS,
Brighton, C. W.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be applied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Pints, $1.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jest so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "lowly" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins more and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" " " " I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" " " " I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" " " " I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. " " The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" " " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.
Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Barnden's Express

"The sprain in my daughter's ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that mucorium which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to recover its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, poisoning the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

THE COMING OF WINTER.

He comes! the Winter comes!
I hear his footsteps through the nights!
I hear his vanguard on the heights
March thro' the place with muffled drums!

His naked feet are on the wood;
The grass blades stiffen in his path,
No tear for child of earth he hath!
No pity for the tender seed!

The hare cubs shudder at his breath!
A moment by the stream he stays—
Its melody is mute! A glaze
Creeps o'er its dimples, as of death!

From fettered stream and blackened moor
The city walls he silent nears;
The mansions of the rich he fears!
He storms the cabins of the poor!

The curtained couch, the glowing hearth,
The frost rimmed greyboard's power defy!
He curses as he harries by
And strikes the beggar dead, to earth!

For every gleaming hall he spares,
A hundred heartless hovels hold
Hearts pulseless, crisp with ice and cold,
Watched by a hundred grim despairs!

Here is your mission! Ye who feed
Your lavish fires! Not after
But at your doors your heathen are!
God's Poor—your creditors! Take heed!

The path is long to Pagan shores!
Their skies are sunny—God o'er all!
The Winter's deadly harvests fall
Around you! Deal your master's stores!

Miscellaneous.

KATE GOWER.

'My darling Kate, do not look so sad; after all, I have no doubt you will be very happy, and a fortnight or three weeks after you are married I shall hear you say there was never in the world half so nice a man or good a husband as George Melville!'

'Oh, Emily, Emily, I cannot think so, the very sound of his name makes me shudder!' was the passionate reply to Miss Woodford's words of encouragement; and the speaker buried her face in the bosom of her friend, and burst into tears.

'My dear girl, this will never do; it is not now too late, if you repent your determination, to break off your engagement with Mr. Melville. Do you regret what you have done?'

'I should do it again under the same circumstances,' answered Kate Gower, after a moments pause.

'And you would be right. Indeed, Kate, continued Miss Woodford, 'we have advised you for the best. Love is not necessary for happiness; and the calm regard and friendship you feel for Mr. Melville, (for you have only fancied you dislike him since he has appeared in the character of a suitor, while before you were really attached to him), will prove a far more durable means of happiness, than that passionate affection which girls fancy a necessary feeling towards their future husband. Yes, my dear girl, I am quite sure you will never repent it if you marry him.'

'But you know—you know I love another,' murmured Kate, in a voice almost inaudible through her tears.

'You believe, you fancy you do; but how do you know he cares for you?—You are throwing away, are wasting your affections on one unworthy of them,' said Emily Woodford. 'If he loved you, do you suppose he would have allowed so long a time to elapse without seeing you, and seeking some explanation? Instead of which he seems to have purposely avoided you; does such conduct betoken love?'

Miss Woodford paused, and Kate hid her face for a moment in the cushion of the sofa and then gasped out, almost writhing with anguish.

'Oh, Emily, you are too, too cruel!'

'I seem so, dearest; but ask yourself seriously if I am not right. Think of your mother, Kate; of your brothers and sisters, poor children! whose fate depends so much on your conduct—remember—'

'I know all—I think of it all—I remember all,' interrupted the unhappy girl; 'if I did not, think you I could consent to become the wife of one I detest? Do you think if my mother, my gentle, suffering, idolized mother, had not with tears in her eyes implored me to accept Melville's hand, and had not even owned she believed it would prolong her life were I to do so, think you I ever, ever could have so degraded myself as to bind myself to one man, when my every pulse is throbbing with wild, passionate love for another? Could I,' continued Kate, with increasing vehemence—'could I, when the images of my mother and her little children were conjured up before my eyes, in poverty and dependence—could I refuse to assist them, to render them happy, to give them a home, when it was in my power to do so—could I, Emily? Alas! alas! no. But I deserve it all,' she passionately exclaimed; 'I deserve it all! Oh, I am rightly punished! I was proud, I was wayward, I wanted to bring him to my feet; I wanted to show it was a favour to be loved by me; and he, too, was proud, and left me, and we have never met since! Oh, Emily, Emily, God help me!' and Kate ceased speaking, exhausted by the violence of her emotions, and began hurriedly to pace the little drawing-room. Miss Woodford was thoroughly perplexed; she knew not what to say to her friend, whose unusual excitement almost terrified her. It was too late, she reflected, to break off her engagement; besides the thought of Kate's invalid mother flashed across her mind, and she knew such a sudden disappointment would most likely be a death-blow; but yet, surely it was not right that Kate Gower should be allowed to contract a marriage evidently so abhorrent to her feelings. Poor Emily! she was sadly puzzled; and as she thought of her own happy engagement and handsome lover she sighed deeply. She could not, however, decide on any plan of conduct, and resolved, at last, to let matters take their own course. It was a pensiveness she bitterly repented when it was too late.

Mrs. Gower was the widow of a major in the army, who had died, leaving her with four children and heavy debts, two years before the opening of this narrative. It was a hard struggle for five human creatures, of refined states and habits, to live upon the scanty pittance allowed them by government; so no wonder that when George Melville, young, rich, and good-looking, fell in love with and proposed to her eldest and favorite daughter, Kate, the widow, unaware of her previous attachment, urged and entreated her to accept his proffered hand. We have seen from the conversation recorded above, that Kate, moved by the tears of a mother she dearly loved, and aware of the immense advantage that would accrue to her family by her marriage (for Mr. Melville had promised to provide them with a home), consented, and a few days only were now wanting to that fixed for the wedding.

Alas for a woman who marries a man she cannot love! and doubly alas for her whose affections are already bestowed on another. Oh, mothers loving and kind, and unselfish and affectionate though ye be, beware lest for the fancied advantage of your children you sacrifice their every chance of happiness. The husband may be kind, and generous, and loving, and constant; but if the wife love him not, how, how can she be happy? And it is on her whole life that the deep gloom of despair will be cast; not for days, nor weeks, nor months, nor even years, but for ever—for her whole life, with no hope for relief but in the grave; and her one despairing cry will be ever ascending to heaven—'Let me die, Lord! let me die! I only ask for death!' Poor and one, God help thee!

* * * * *

Kate Gower's wedding-day had arrived and never had she looked more beautiful.—A strange light burnt in her dark brilliant eyes, and a bright flush on her cheek deceived the numerous spectators into a belief that she was marvellously happy. Mrs. Gower's heart dilated with joy as she gazed on her lovely daughter, who, with the bridal wreath on her brow, and the lace veil falling on the ground around her, knelt at the altar, and pronounced her marriage vow, to 'love, honour, and obey' her husband. What mockery! what hallowness! Poor, unhappy Kate! But so well did she sustain the part she had imposed on herself, that not even her bridesmaid, Emily Woodford, for less did her happy mother, suspect for one moment the sacrifice she was making. She was so perfectly calm, even smiling, that Emily believed her quite reconciled to her fate; and many would have laughed at the idea of its being otherwise. What! with a two-thousand-pounding, fine-tempered husband, not happy? Why, what would the girl have?—aye, what indeed?

* * * * *

Four months had passed away since Kate Gower had become Kate Melville, and still her husband loved her with almost the passionate ardor of his first devotion. True, the thought sometimes flashed across his mind that the feeling was not reciprocal, that Kate even shrank from his caresses; but he soon persuaded himself that to a natural quietness of manner was to be attributed her apparent coldness; and fortunately he had never known her otherwise, for their acquaintance had commenced but a few months after her father's death, when the irreparable loss of a kind and indulgent parent had subdued, for the time, every trace of her natural gaiety and sparkling spirits, so marvel, as it ripened, and as the prospect of becoming the wife of one she could not love, stood ever before her—so marvel that they did not return, and that to Melville she had even appeared both undemonstrative and reserved. We will not stay to tell how different she had been, when overflowing with the happiness of loving and being beloved; every flower in the field, every star in the sky, every section in the day, had been a source of heartfelt joy, and pure, simple mirth.

Vivian Howick and Kate had met in Malta, while her father's regiment was stationed there, and soon congeniality of tastes and similarity of feelings had taught the young people first friendship, then love. The day before that on which Vivian had decided to ask Major Gower's approbation of their engagement, a foolish misunderstanding arose between the lovers, and Kate, indignant at being for once suspected of levity, exclaimed, in answer to some gentle reproach from Vivian: "Mr. Howick, you are assuming a husband's authority a little too soon; I have no wish to lose my liberty at sixteen, and if you cannot trust me, if you have no faith in me let us part—it will be better—let us part!" Before she could retract her words she was alone; Vivian had sprung up, passed through the open French window, and was gone. Poor Kate! she had never seen him since; and yet almost before the words had passed her lips she bitterly repented them. A few days after, she heard that Mr. Howick had left for England, and soon her father's regiment was also summoned there, previous to embarking for India. Major Gower died a fortnight after their arrival in London; and since then Kate had never even heard the name of Vivian Howick mentioned. How often it hung upon her lips, and how often it brought a passionate flood of agonizing tears to her eyes, we care not now to tell; there are some feelings in a woman's heart that should be secret even to sympathy.—Vivian Howick stayed but a few weeks in England, when having obtained an appointment as secretary to the ——— embassy, he set out for ——— * * * *

'Kate, dearest, it is ten o'clock; had you not better begin to dress?'

'Certainly, if you wish it;' and Melville was left alone in the large dining-room of his mansion in Grosvenor Square. Half an hour had passed when Kate rejoined her husband. She was looking very lovely, and he could not resist pressing her to his heart, as he murmured some lover-like compliment on her surpassing beauty; and then, for the first time, he marked her expression of shrinking scorn, as even the faint color that usually tinged her cheek fled from her face, and a feeling of distrust and disappointment, almost of anger rose in his heart. He instantly withdrew his arm, and opening the door of the apartment, motioned her forward. In another moment they were in the carriage, on the way to Lady ——'s.

A murmur of admiration arose from the group hanging about the entrance of the ball-room as Kate entered it, leaning on the arm of her husband; and in truth she was looking gloriously beautiful; a smile had rarely dwelt on her face since her marriage, but her classical beauty had perhaps rather gained than lost by its additional severity; and the pure simplicity of her white dress, and the large lilies in her dark hair, were well chosen to show off to the most remarkable advantage the singular beauty of her face and form. But Melville, usually so proud of the admiration she excited, was this evening gloomy and irritable; and though he authoritively insisted on her dancing, he watched her throughout with an earnest attention, which too plainly showed how the trust he had felt in her had vanished from his heart.

'What do you think of Miss D'Arcy; it is her first appearance this season!' said Lord Fitz Mordant to Kate, during the pauses of a quadrille.

'Which do you mean—where is she?' inquired Kate.

'That girl in blue, sitting near the door—there now she is standing up—do you see? Is she not pretty! But, good heavens! Mrs. Melville, what is the matter?' exclaimed Fitz Mordant, as Kate's eye, following his directions, glanced first at Miss D'Arcy, and then rested on an elegant man, leaning against the wall near her. 'Are you ill?' continued he; 'allow me to find you a seat, and ice?' and the good-natured young man, really alarmed by her fearful paleness and convulsive respiration, elbowed his way through the crowd, and refusing a thousand offers of assistance, conducted her into the conservatory, where Kate, sinking into a chair, and striving vainly to thank him, at last motioned him away. With true delicacy of feeling, the young viscount obeyed the gesture and left her alone.

With her two hands pressed against her throbbing forehead, Kate tried to calm herself; but the task was impossible, and she fell back powerless and almost senseless in her chair. It was, indeed, Vivian Howick, she had seen—Vivian, whom she still loved wildly, devotedly, and now, God help her! criminally.

And the sound of music in the ball-room came faintly on her ear; and oh, how it jarred on her strained feelings! Poor, poor Kate.

Many minutes passed thus, and Kate was still leaning back in her chair, her face hidden in her hands, when a footstep close to her made her glance up. In another moment, acting on a passionate impulse, she flung herself towards Vivian, who was passing before her, and with a low cry burst into tears.

'Kate! Kate!' and he guided her to a sofa, where she sat sobbing as if her heart would break, and he bending down to her, with an expression of love and pity, and stern heart-rending grief.

'Oh, Vivian! Vivian! do speak to me, do have mercy on me, do forgive me!—Oh, Vivian!'

'Kate,' he whispered, 'I forgive all; but, oh, you have broken two hearts, you have shattered all the happiness of two existences. God help us, Kate!'

'But why, why did you never seek me since? why never even come near me?' asked Kate amid her tears.

'I have only just returned from abroad, where I went a month after I parted with you—you remember when?'

'Vivian, have pity!'

At this moment a figure stood suddenly before them, and Kate was roused to a full sense of her error by seeing her husband with flashing eyes, gazing upon her.

'Mercy, mercy,' she gasped out; and at the same moment, seeing Melville's hand raised, preparatory to striking Howick, she threw herself forward, and the blow fell on her shoulder.

"Coward," exclaimed Vivian, as he sprang up; and almost before the words had passed his lips, Melville was laid prostrate on the ground, a crimson stream flowing from his head, which had come in contact with the sharp corner of a marble consol. The conservatory was soon filled with an inquiring crowd, for the noise of his fall, and Kate's piercing shriek as she fell back on the sofa, had penetrated even to the ball-room. A pretended accident accounted for the affair; and on Melville corroborating the story when he recovered, Vivian was permitted to leave unmolested, and Kate was placed apparently lifeless in the carriage by her husband, who threw himself beside her, as in a faint voice he peremptorily gave the word of command, Home.

A hostile meeting was the consequence, and next morning Vivian was waited upon by a certain ferocious-looking gentleman, answering to the cognomen of Captain Lutestring, who "exceedingly regretted being obliged to call relative to certain matters connected with his respected friend, Mr. Melville." All arrangements were speedily made—the meeting took place, and when Kate partially recovered from a long and dangerous illness, it was only to learn that her husband had slain one whom she had worshipped in her girlhood with an almost idolatrous passion, and whom she still loved but too well!

We dare not dwell on the scenes that followed; the grave soon gave rest to the tried and erring spirit, her fate a warning and a lesson.

Melville lived many years of a sad and sorrowing life; he was almost as much sinned against as sinning; and God grant that his one crime may be atoned for by his grief and remorse.

Emily Woodford had married a few weeks after Kate, and but one shadow was thrown on her life of sunshine—that was the consciousness, that had she possessed sufficient moral courage to interpose, when she saw how hateful her marriage was to Kate, two lives would have been saved to happiness and peace! It was a gloomy reflection, and often did her tears bitterly fall over the grave of her early friends.—Our tale points its own moral—may it be a profitable warning.

THE BLIGHTED LIFE.

About fifteen years since, James Baynard and I graduated at the same university. He was my superior in everything but Latin. The plain and orators of Greece and Rome were his favorite companions.—Often have we walked under the shadows of ancient colleges and tall embowering trees, contrasting the breadth and depth of our acquirements and speculations on the future. Often have I stood to enthusiastically listen to him picturing in glowing colors the [illegible] that [illegible] his after-life. He could scarcely have been said to have lived in the present. He was either brooding over the treasures of the past, or soaring on the wings of imagination into the untrodden future. Time passed on, and I had not seen my friend for several years. I had occasionally heard of him, but the intelligence was far from an encouraging character.

One beautiful star-lit evening, while crossing London-bridge, a man with stooping mien, his hat over his eyes, and his dirty, torn coat, buttoned around him, asked me for some coppers. I thought I remembered the voice, I looked at the man, and started back, and stood for a moment speechless, as if I had encountered a ghost. I was almost certain that the wretched being who stood before me was the one whom I once rejoiced to call my friend, and of whose success in life I had once such high expectations. I dared not for a short time speak to him and call him by his name, fearing that he would answer and confirm my suspicions. But I did so, and his answer sent a cold thrill through my frame. It was he, or what was left of him. He was no other than a mean-looking, soul-broken, drunkard. I no sooner told him my name, than he looked still more ghastly, and appeared for a moment as if annihilation would be a comfort to him. As we both partially collected ourselves, he tried to shew me by saying, 'I beg pardon sir, I took you for some one else!' That did not satisfy me. I followed him and compelled him to share a part of my purse.—He took it tremblingly, and said, 'I am a miserable, guilty, lost man.' My heart was so full, that I could only take his address, and tell him that I would call on him. I went on my way in deep, deep sorrow. I had seen the friend of my earlier years, one in whom I had reposed much confidence—one from whose lips I had caught many an inspiration, and one who had in my [illegible] [illegible] my mind and coloured my destiny. Here was I in affluent circumstances, and with bright prospects. But what was he? A fallen man, an outcast, a victim to strong drink. What advantage to him was the classic page; what was all his learning, his ardent hopes, his warm aspirations now? What were Plato, Aristotle, Socrates, Homer, Virgil, Tacitus, Thucydides, Cicero, and Horace now! He could not be worse off if Greece and Rome never existed. What was the greatness and glory of his own country to him? Art, science, philosophy, history, poetry, truth, man, God, and eternity were forgotten.—The stars may shine on in their deep mysterious beauty; the earth, the heavens, and millions of human souls might await to contribute to his happiness, and impress him with the loftiness of his nature, and the vastness of his destiny. But no, there he was, a crushed mutilated being. After a few minutes' reflection, I resolved to write to him that very night, and tell him that I would call and see him the next day. I wrote the letter and posted it. The following day, at the appointed time, I called at the place where I was directed, and made inquiries for a person named James Baynard. "O, sir," was the reply, "he left this morning, not to return again; and he left a letter for a gentleman, a Mr. Hall, whom he said would call for it." I asked for the letter, and it was delivered to me. It was as follows:—

During the last few years I have suffered many pangs. My life, almost from the time you and I parted at Oxford, has been a checquered, unenviable, and ignoble one. I will not tear your heart by relating it; I can only say I am an irrecoverably lost man. I am careless, hopeless, and reckless. I have forsaken my friends, and they have forsaken me. But all my misfortunes and sins have not annihilated every particle of humanity and pride in my bosom. I have just sufficient left to dread the meeting of your glance, and encountering your conversation. I therefore only hope that we may never meet again on earth. I go I know not whither, and I care not whither. Meeting you has caused a momentary resurrection of my earlier joys, loves, hopes, and dreamings; but such remembrances only revive to harrow my soul. The more I think of what I have been, the more do I curse the present and dread the future. O that I was never born! Gin has been my chief enemy. May good have mercy on one who has now no mercy on himself.

Farewell,

JAMES BAYNARD.

S. HALL, Esq.

The reading of this letter made me shudder with sorrow and dread. What could I do? I knew not where to go to find the one I wanted, so that I might relieve him. Perhaps he would die of want; perhaps he would commit some crime, and get imprisoned, transported, or executed. These and similar thoughts rushed through my mind. I resolved to do my best to find him, and, if possible, reclaim him. I have from that time to the present searched and inquired after him in vain. May Providence put him once more in my way, so that I may be his benefactor.

A GOOD lady, who had two children sick with measles, wrote to a friend for the best remedy. The friend had just received a note from another lady, inquiring the way to make pickles. In the confusion, the lady who inquired about the pickles, received the remedy for the measles, and the anxious mother of the sick children with horror read the following:—"Gould those three or four children in very hot vinegar and sprinkle them with salt, and in a very few days they will be cured."

lum to head in ch... against him, thus placing them in the p... of prosecutors, and when the inquiry ... ing on, members of the Court would ... find out the

...they found that the e... was likely to be unfavorable to him.

Those who were acquainted with these facts, and they are notorious in the neighborhood, will not be surprised that the Court acquitted Col. Dennis of all the several counts of the indictment ... against him.

The evidence is not yet published, but when it is we are certain the country will be surprised at the finding of the Court on the evidence produced. It will be seen whether the evidence was not sufficient to convict him on more than one of the charges made against him. It is not at all surprising that the finding was dissented from by the President, Col. Dennison, and that the Commander-in-Chief does not approve of the finding of the Court.

The most serious charge that was made against Col. Dennis, and the one that he is pronounced guilty of, by the Commander-in-Chief, in that he, "after having received information that a large and overwhelming force of the enemy was within a very short distance, and after himself seeing the force approaching, recklessly and uselessly landed five officers and 98 men of the Welland Canal Field Battery and Dunnville Naval Brigade from the steamer Robb, marched them along an exposed road and posted them in a most dangerous position, where they were exposed to a front and flanking fire from the enemy—which course on his part resulted in disaster to his command—in the serious wounding and maiming of some of them for life—of an officer and five men, and the capture by the enemy of four officers and 32 men of that command."

Cols. Shanly and Fairbanks pronounce him not guilty of this as well as all the other charges made against him, but Col. Dennison and the Commander-in-Chief consider it fully proven. It was this action of Dennis that was most condemned by the public—in fact, all the others re-ulted from it. If he had allowed the men to remain on the Robb, as he was advised to do by Capts. King and McCallum, none of the other disasters could have happened to his command.

The Commander-in-Chief finds fault with Capt. King for interfering with Major Wallace in procuring evidence for Col Dennis.
We suppose that no inquiry has been made into the conduct of Capt. King in this matter, and that the Commander-in-Chief is acting upon the statement of Major Wallace, without giving Capt. King an opportunity to defend himself. We would like to know what Major Wallace had to do with the inquiry. He resides at Whitby, and could not know anything about the matter personally, as he was not forward till after the Fort Erie affair was over, as Col. Dennis is Brigade Major of the division in which Major Wallace holds his command, and is therefore in a position to greatly influence ... witnesses in favor of Col. Dennis. ... ...ys ... the extraordinary interest which Wallace took in the inquiry; for his coming all the way from Whitby, and using every means in his power to obtain evidence favorable to Col. Dennis.

The Court of Inquiry have given their verdict, and the Commander-in-Chief has given his remarks thereon, but there is a higher power than either that will pronounce an opinion upon the matter. The people of Canada have yet to speak, and they will do so. Every one was willing to allow the decision in Col. Booker's case to pass, on account of the peculiar circumstances in which he was placed, but the public are not inclined to be so lenient with Col.
Dennis. The brave Capt. King and his men were placed in a position of great danger, contrary to the advice of their own officers, and some of them have been maimed for life by the incapacity of Col. Dennis.—
No matter what influence Col. Dennis may bring to bear in his favor, the people of Canada will not be satisfied to allow him to go unpunished. Col. Dennis must not be allowed the opportunity of placing men in such a position again; and such officers as Capt. King and McCallum, who did their duty nobly on that occasion, will be commended for bringing Col. Dennis forward to answer the charges made, and for producing evidence to prove these charges.

Aid to the Sufferers—Extraordinary Developments.

(From the Quebec Daily News.)

Already the magnificent sum of $276,- 000 has been received and acknowledged by the Quebec Conflagration Relief Committee. This is about $38 per head of the whole number of sufferers, from the aged and invalided to the infant on the breast, or, averaging the number of families at five each, about $190 for the relief of each family, and is in addition to the immense quantity of clothing and other necessaries sent to assist them over a hard Canadian winter. Will any one dare to tell us that the assertion we have already made, that this sum is adequate and more than adequate for all purposes of relief, is untrue, and that in raising our pen to caution the benevolent at a distance from being further imposed on, we were guilty of uncharitableness towards those whom a great and sudden calamity had rendered helplessly destitute?—
We know that if this sum had been distributed as it was received, or even the half of it, the duties of the Relief Committee would have come to a close before this, and we would not have heard the faintest murmur of distress from the burnt district, not even that which presented itself in other years in the same quarter, when no such calamity had befallen it. Of the $276,- 000 received, the Relief Committee has distributed about $60,000, leaving four-fifths of the amount collected yet in the hands of the Treasurer. Two-thirds of the recipients have received all that they are to receive, and in doling them out their last pittance of $2 per head, they were distinctly informed of this fact, so that we may fairly conclude that there are not at present over 2,000 persons on the relief-roll; and if the balance of the donations be distributed equally among them, which we very much doubt, they will each be entitled to the handsome douceur of $100 each, or about $500 per family. The distribution of the clothing and other comforts is about on a par with the money relief afforded the sufferers. We know that immense quantities of clothing have come [illegible] for the manufacturing towns of [illegible]
Hull. The less than 3,000 [illegible]

THE AMERICAN NAVY.

From the report of Mr. Welle, Secretary of the United States Navy, presented to Congress with the President's message we learn that there was now on the American service 279 vessels carrying 2,351 guns
—a much smaller force than is generally supposed. Of all these vessels, 54, carrying 167 guns are iron clad—that is sea-going "monitors" and boat-pleased for river service; 2 are old sailing vessels; 81, carrying 749 guns are wooden vessels, either laid up, in course of repair, or offered for sale; 7, with 40 guns, are iron-clads not yet completed; and 19, with 368 guns, are steam vessels not completed; of the whole force, 69 vessels, carrying 695 guns, are on squadron service on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, in the Mediterranean and in the Chinese and Japan waters; 9, carrying 43 guns, are on special service; and 27, carrying 252 guns, are on duty at various stations in the United States—making a total of 115 vessels, carrying 1,027 guns, now in commission. The total number of seamen in the service is 13,600. The Secretary calls of the existing iron-clads as admirably adapted for harbour defence and even for sea-service should it be necessary to employ them; but in anticipation of war with a maritime power, he strongly urges the construction of larger vessels, which may be propelled by sail as well as steam, in order to carry on an offensive as well as defensive war. He also recommends the construction of more dry-docks, pointing out that one port in England had more accommodation of this kind than all the ports in the United States put together.
Several other propositions are made for increasing and strengthening the navy with a view to being prepared for any contingency that may arise involving hostilities with any European power.—Leader.

AN ATROCIOUS OUTRAGE.—Information has been communicated to the Kingston police by an American gentleman, to the effect that on Tuesday evening, between three and four o'clock, a most diabolical outrage was perpetrated on the person of Captain Murdock, residing on his farm on Grindstone Island, opposite Gananoque, but in the State of New York. It appears that at this hour Captain Murdock and his wife went to the stable to feed the cattle for the night. Mrs. Murdock having milked the cows, left her husband, when two men with their coats turned inside out, and their faces masked leaped from the hayloft, seized Captain Murdock, beat him until he was insensible, tied his hands up to the haymack, and resorted to a horrible mutilation of the genitals. Captain Murdock's brother lives on the same island, and hearing of the outrage, he and his wife went to the injured man's residence, and Mr. Murdock went for a doctor. Returning to his house next morning he found the premises had been entered and his furniture and household effects thrown into confusion. A light had been seen in the house in the night time, and it is thought that the ransacking was done by the same persons who had committed the more horrible deed of assault and mutilation. The American who bro't the news here assigns no cause for the outrage, but says Cap. Murdock is a man who had lived peaceably with his neighbor and is much respected. It is to be hoped that if the miscreants have escaped to Canada, the information in the hands of the police will lead to their arrest.

Since the foregoing was placed in type, we learn from the Kingston News of Monday last, that the parties suspected of having committed the atrocious outrage on the person of Cap. Murdock on Grindstone Island two brothers named Bullock, one of whom was the second mate of the vessel which Cap Murdock sails, and was discharged, and living in Canada. One of them has been taken, the other has escaped.

FENIANISM IN GLASGOW.—The statement which appeared in the Sunday Gazette that the Government in consequence of information received as to the state of feeling among the Irish population in Liverpool and Glasgow, had resolved to strengthen the garrisons in these cities with an additional regiment each, has created some surprise in Glasgow where the Irish, though numerous enough, were not supposed to be in any unusual state of agitation. The Government, in fact, if it knows anything about the existence of Fenian sympathies in that city, is better informed than the local authorities, who are quite unaware of anything in the conduct of the Irish population to warrant the strengthening of the garrison by an additional regiment. In a city where there are somewhere about 60,000 Irish there are, of course, many Fibanmmen, but they are now neither more nor less loyal than they have always been, and they give little trouble to the police. All that the Glasgow authorities have done in connection with the Fenian movement is the appointment of a detective specially to keep a look out for Stephens, who, it will be remembered, in escaping from Ireland, reached London viâ Ardrossan and Glasgow. There is a considerable traffic between some of the ports in the west of Scotland and France and Ireland, and there is a possibility that Stephens, instead of reaching Ireland, if such be his intention, by the more common routes, may choose one more roundabout and less exposed to watchful eyes, such as is presented by the west of Scotland.

THE COBOURG & PETERBORO' RAIL-WAY.—We offer our sincerest congratulations to the active men in the movement to resuscitate our Railway, and to our readers generally both in town and country.—
Cobourg seems destined, at last, to take a start in the race for superiority, with her sister towns, and this time, we think, with the best chance of winning. The smelting of the marmora Iron Ore took place about ten days ago in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and was pronounced by the scientific men who witnessed it, a perfect success. Mr.
J. H. Dumble was telegraphed for and went to New York, and the report now is, that the money for the road will be sent forward at once. While exulting in our own good luck we may be permitted to rejoice in the good fortune of our neighbors.
Mr. Covert, it is reported, has sold out for a handsome sum to responsible parties, and has thus in the very nick of time, got rid of the Elephant. It now remains to be seen whether our Company or the Port Hope concern has the greater pluck and the larger purse.—Sentinel.

Artemus Ward says—"We have a passion for oratory in America—political oratory chiefly. Our political orators never lose a chance to "express their views,"
They will do it. You cannot stop them.
There was an execution in Ohio one day, and the sheriff before passing the rope round the murderer's neck, asked him if he had any remarks to make. "If he hasn't," said a well known local orator, pushing his way rapidly through the dense crowd to the gallows—"if our illustrated fellow citizen don't feel inclined to make a spe ch, and is in no hurry, I should like to avail myself of the present occasion to make some remarks on the necessity of a new protective tariff."

CLIFTON, Dec. 21st.—A Mr. Henry, cattle dealer, was robbed in a sleeping car between Ontario and the Bridge, this a.m., of his pocket book, containing $13,000 in greenbacks, and 3,000 in Canada bills. The pocket book containing papers of value was subsequently picked up on the floor of the passenger car.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1866.

SLOW TO ACT.

Our Council has been very slow to act in some matters that relate materially to the welfare of the town. The bridge, as is well known, was almost falling before anything was done, and, strange to say, the County Council was the first to move in the matter.

The Town Council could not but have been more or less aware of the state of the bridge, but their unwillingness to lay out the money of the people in repairing the bridge, caused them to let it pass unheeded until the County took it up. If the County had neglected the matter till it had become like the bridge at the locks, and had to be nailed up to prevent loss of life, how would people have gained access from the east. The only possible way would have been by employing a scow of some sort, or by going round by Campbell & Huston's mills. And how would such a state of things act on the trade of the town? Not very advantageously we can surmise. It is true that one citizen did call the attention of the Warden to the state of the bridge at the Locks, but why was the Town Council indifferent to it?

When the County Treasurer appeared before the Council and called their attention to the bridge and the cost of repairing it, nothing was done to have the work proceeded with. In fact there was a rumour afloat that the Town Council intended repudiating having anything to do with the bridge or its repairs. Now, it is well known that the better the means of approach to the Town, the more will come to do business with us, and it must be a short-sighted policy that neglects the improving, and exceeding of means of access to the market of the County. The Council, however, has been brought to its senses in some degree. The County Council has ordered the work of repairing the bridge to cease until the Town Council shall appropriate a proportionate sum of money to defray the expenses of such repairs. This we must say, we expected for some time, and our wonder was that they did not do it sooner.

At last the Council has appointed a special Committee, to whom is referred the communication of the Warden on the matter, and we trust that that Committee will see that something is done to have the matter set at rest, and that will enable the repairs to go on to completion. We suppose the Council has been actuated by a desire to save money, but it is possible to be penny-wise and pound-foolish, for it is easier to pay a shilling when business is healthy than to pay a sixpence when it is dull. Some may say, the people must come here to do their business, any way, for this is the market for the County. True, it is now the principal market, but it does not follow that it will continue to be so unless we do something both to keep the trade and also to increase it; and we hope that the next Council will look outside of the Town and do something to induce people to come here. Nothing has been done to draw the trade of the back country here. The people north of the lakes complain that so little is done to ensure the transit of goods and passengers to and from Peterboro'. The boat, it is true serves in summer as far as the lakes are concerned; but nothing is done to ensure a regular communication in the winter, or even to the lake in summer.—These things should be considered by the Council; and we hope the new members will not be slow to act in the matter.

Then there is the eastern trade. What have we done to bring the trade of the east to us? Simply nothing! At the last session of the County Council, P. Pearce, Esq., got a grant of $400 to open up a road from Norwood through Belmont and Methuen to the Burleigh road, on condition that the Municipalities through which the road is to pass, shall open it up. Here then is a step in the right direction, for Norwood. This road will open up communications with the new settlements as they are formed, and by directing the trade to Norwood, ensure the trade of those settlements to it, almost to all time to come; and this the astute representatives from the extreme east saw clearly. But where will Norwood get its supplies?—What effort is being made to bring the trade of that rising village here? The road thither is kept instead of being one of the best in the County, is nearly neglected, or left to pathmasters, and Township councils to see after; while the road from Norwood to Colborne is a first rate gravelled road; and hence, we find that the people of the east go to Colborne instead of coming here, although the distance is about 10 miles greater. Timely attention to this might ensure the traffic to Peterboro', while Norwood might supply the country in the rear of itself. We can supply Norwood, and that as advantageously, and more so, than any other place can do, and while we supplied the merchants of Norwood, and they supplied the back country, we would be receiving the benefit of the entire trade. These things should not be lost sight of by the Town Council, and they know very well that good roads has much to do with the directing of traffic. The Town Council hardly ever troubles itself about these matters. Not one of its members ever manifests the least interest in any of the meetings of the County Council, far less do they manifest even a willingness to meet them in a spirit of improvement. More could be obtained for our advantage, were it sought for. Mutual cooperation instead of opposition, would benefit both.

We trust, therefore, that in future, the Town Council, will meet the County Council in a spirit of mutual concession and agreement, and that they will go with the County Council in carrying on every reasonable enterprise of building up roads, bridges, and other means of ensuring the trade of the surrounding country. A few dollars spent in this way will repay one hundred fold.

It is much to be regretted that the Town was ever separated from the County. We believe that the growth and prosperity of the two would have been greater had they remained together, than it has been since the separation. Now, however, any cause for separation is removed by the new act, as by it all property shall be assessed at is actual cash value, instead of rack-rent as heretofore, and if the Town assessors value the Town property too high, they will be to blame, and not the statute. We hope, therefore, to see some steps taken at an early day, to have the Town and County reunited, that thereby the work of progress may be better be carried on. An effort was made to get a clause inserted in the late Municipal act, to enable Town and Counties to unite if they so desire it. But unfortunately, the framers thereof, did not insert anything to that effect. Our only other remedy, is to petition Parliament for a special act for that purpose, and we trust that ere long something will be done towards this end. All causes for arbitration would then be at an end, and the cost thereof—all our great interests would then become as it were the interest of one individual, and if the County Council should continue to extend its accustomed enterprise in improving our County when backed by the Town, we would soon see the altered appearance of things in general.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

It is very gratifying to learn that the people of this county are not indifferent to their interests in Municipal matters. In all the townships heard from, there is a deep interest felt in the choice of Reeves and Deputy Reeves. This is just as it should be. The Reeves and Deputy Reeves constitute our County Council, and it controls a great share of the Government assessment, &c., of even the Townships. It is therefore wise to send none but the best men to represent the people in the County Council. Inasmuch, however, as there has been considerable talk about the action of that body, in reference to Harvey and Burleigh, we may be permitted to offer a few remarks on these matters.

The County Council has been blamed for their action in the matter of the re-survey of Harvey and Burleigh. But after calm and careful consideration of the whole affair, all honest men will acquit that body of any blame. The people of the Municipalities of Harvey and Burleigh petitioned the Government to have the Townships re-surveyed, and this was absolutely needed, as all traces of the original survey had been obliterated by fires, lumbering operations, &c. The Government informed the County Council that after a memorial should be sent in, they were willing to order the re-survey, and also pay the expenses of surveying the unpatented lands in the Townships. The County Council complied, and on behalf of the petitioners memorialized the Government, and in due time the survey was completed and the Government paid their share of the costs of such survey. Thus far the Government is as much to blame as the County Council; yet the Government never considered the work illegal, or, most assuredly, they would not have paid the costs of the survey. The County Council, in good faith, paid the part due for the patented lands, and proceeded according to law to levy and collect the same against those lands, as directed by the statute, and several hundred dollars of the cost has been collected and paid to the Treasurer of Smith and Harvey. This money, any one would say, should be paid to the Treasurer of the County, but as the courts have decided otherwise it will be paid to the Treasurer of Harvey, which will be downright injustice to the County as the County has already paid the cost of re-survey.

That this re-survey was a necessity, even the opponents of the by-law admit; they only set up the plea of informality—a very poor plea indeed.

In the second case, the By-law is held as illegal on the ground that the statute never contemplated the re-survey of a whole township—only a part of it. As much as to say, that if the Township of Harvey consisted of 12 concessions, there is no law to order the re-survey of the whole 12; but if it consisted of 13 concessions, then the government could order the re-survey of 12 or any part short of 13, that is to say, of even 12½ concessions, something that perhaps the framers of the act never once thought of; yet such is the whim of the Courts on the matter.

But another view of the case arises. The plan of the re-survey of Burleigh is not according to the plan of the original survey. Perhaps if the whole township no two lots of the new survey agree with those of the old survey, and now since the By-law is quashed or is illegal as the quashing will make it, the old survey must be the legal one, while almost all the lands sold in Harvey have been sold under the new survey; hence is about to be a source of great trouble and endless lawsuits, unless the government, at the next session do consider the matter and pass a special act to make the last survey legal. This is now a matter of necessity on the part of the government, and cannot be delayed, as if it be done, no one in Burleigh knows to whose lot he is living, or is improving.

But how comes the government in contact with the court? The government ordered the re survey of the whole township, yet the court says the act never contemplated any such thing. In the meantime no blame can be attached to the members of the council, as they acted under advice of the government, who ordered it, and also paid their share of the costs. One remarkable feature in these cases is, that of those men (32 in number) who petitioned for the re-survey, the names of more than one are also engaging in endeavouring to have the By-law quashed. We learn from good authority, that a copy of the original petition which is deposited in the Crown Lands Department, is now in possession of a gentleman who can furnish it when required. This removes all blame from the council, as it proves clearly that that body acted on this petition, and if they acted wrong, so did the Crown Lands Department. The fact is, the decision of the court is puerile, notwithstanding all the learning of lawyers, and we feel certain that if they acted thus childishly in every matter it would soon be that Parliament would even have to establish forms for By-laws, to prevent their being quashed. In this case, Parliament will have to pass an act to legalize the whole proceedings, in which case the cost of re-surveys will still come against the lands effected by such survey. The sooner this shall be done the better, as no toll then is the matter likely to be allowed to rest.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

MAYOR.

At ten o'clock a few people assembled at the Council Chambers to see what was likely to transpire. Up to a few minutes to eleven o'clock, rumors had it, that Capt. Kennedy was about to come out. At ten o'clock, D. G. Hatton, Esq., proposed, and Councillor Millar seconded, that W. H. Scott, Esq., present Mayor, be Mayor for the ensuing year. There being no one else proposed, at the expiration of an hour the Town Clerk declared Mr. Scott duly elected.

Mr. Hatton, in proposing Mr. Scott, remarked that he took great pleasure in doing so, as he (Mr. Scott) had shown himself well qualified for the position, and his affable and agreeable manner in conducting business connected with his office, had justly made him popular, as also the satisfactory manner in which the business was done, showed him to be a fit and proper person for Mayor.—After the declaration, Mr. Scott, being called for, thanked those present for the honor they thus conferred on him. He felt it an honor to be re-elected without opposition. It was gratifying to know that his labours had proved satisfactory. He had endeavored to perform the duties of Mayor faithfully, and he was pleased to know that there were no serious complaints. He also remarked that he would continue to discharge those duties to the best of his abilities, and if his labors should not prove satisfactory, it would not be a fault of will, but of judgment.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The candidates in the North Ward are Messrs. Toole, Jas. H. Dixon, D. W. Dumble and Mr. Wrighton. Mr. Toole is a well tried Councillor, Mr. Dumble would make an active and intelligent Councillor, and so would Mr. Dixon and Mr. Wrighton, who will be returned remains to be seen.

In the Centre Ward, Messrs. Stevenson, Doherty, and R. D. Ewing—old Councillors and Mr. Walter Paterson, A. W. Kenpt and T. White—new candidates, are proposed. But it may be that some of these will retire. Mr. Ewing has been tried and proved faithful, Mr. Paterson would also make a good Councillor; Mr. Kempt, we are persuaded, does not desire municipal honors; he has assured us that he will not stand.—Mr. Stevenson is sure to be elected.

In the East Ward, Messrs. Clinton, S. Dixon, Wm. Kennedy, and Mr. Ewing. As Mr. Ewing is nominated in two wards he may retire from the contest in one, which one we cannot yet say.

South Ward, Elias Burnham, E. Chamberlain, A. Graham, T. Leonard, and T. Beavis. Mr. Chamberlain is also proposed as Reeve for Monaghan.

ASHBURNHAM.

On Monday, the 24th inst., the free and independent electors of this village met at the Town Hall, and nominated their Reeve and Councillors for the ensuing year. There appears to be complete satisfaction with the old Councillors; there was no opposition to them. Three of the citizens met, and constituting, as they really appeared to be, all who were desirous of having a Council for 1867, proposed A. C. Dunlop, Esq., for Reeve; and Messrs. D. Sutherland, P. H. Clark, J. Lodgate and Henry Bennett, Esqs., as Councillors, and there being no opposition after waiting one hour, the Clerk declared them duly elected. It must be gratifying to those gentlemen who serve in the capacity of Councillors for the present year, to know that the people are so well satisfied with their labours, that they are willing to place the entire affairs of the village into their hands; yet, the continuance of such indifference is not desirable. It may do very well while honest men are managing the business, but the people should be watchful lest a *dis*honest Council should get into power.

DOURO.

For Reeveship:—John Carnegie, George Clark, James Hogan.

For Councillors:—Jas. Hogan, John Allen, Wm. Reid, Robt. Casement, Jos. Fitzgerald, John Walch, Wm. Moher, George Young, Wm. Gill.

In Douro, the polling comes off at one place, and as the time is limited to one day, we doubt whether all the voters can have an opportunity of recording their votes, and unless that is afforded to every man, or at least time to do so, the election can easily be upset. The Council should have passed a By-law to divide the township into wards so as to allow every man the opportunity of voting.

OTONABEE.

The candidates for Reeve in Otonabee, are:—E. Ingram, Esq., present Reeve; Wm. Lang, Esq.

Deputy Reeve:—James Millar, John Millar.

For Councillors:—Christopher Huston, Robert Matchett, Richard Reid, John Armstrong, 12th Con., Andrew Nelson, Wm. Larmouth, Wm. Comrie, Jas. Girvin.

It is useless to speculate on the chances of the candidates: after the election we can do it with more certainty. It is a sign of health to find so many desiring to watch over the public weal. We hope that those who succeed will be as efficient as their predecessors.

MONAGHAN.

For Reeve;—J. W. Gilmour, Geo. Young and E. Chamberlen, Esqs.

For Councillors:—Messrs. Collins, Harper, John Tully, Wm. Robson, Geo. Hovey, John Dendass and Robert Laing.

SMITH.

For Reeve—John Walton and M. S. Dean, Esqs.

For Deputy Reeve:—Isaac Garbutt, Esq. No opposition.

For Councillors:—John Galvin, George Fitzgerald, Michael Sanderson, Jas. Mann, Jesse Fitzgerald, Jos. Blewitt, George Paul and — Stothart.

Holiday Teas.

Our thanks are due to Mr. Wm. Somerville of the LONG ARM CHOP Tea Ware House, for some excellent Teas, sent us for Christmas. We can recommend our readers to go to Mr. Donnelly, and if he gives them Tea of the same quality as that he sent our humble selves, they will not feel disappointed.

Literary Club.

This evening there will be a private debate. The subject to be chosen by the Chairman, and all members allowed to take part in it.

Profane Swearing.

It is impossible to hear the length to which profane swearing is indulged in the present state of civilization. You cannot turn a corner of the street, or traverse any of the streets (not to speak of the low places where swearing is carried on as a trade) without being pained with hearing the most profane oaths and coarse expressions. Even men? (can they be men?) give vent to their feelings, in oaths of the most revolting, and heinous sort. Now it is too bad that any man should so forget himself as to pollute the air, with words that are scarcely heard in the regions of the lost.

Many of our readers, have, no doubt, been grieved to hear the oaths of those creatures, who cannot speak but with oaths; Boys follow the footsteps of their fathers, and swear like them, but, if possible, in more fiendish words: and Ashburnham is no exception to the general state of things. On Saturday night, while returning home, the very shingles of the houses were reechoing with the most horrible oaths. Every name that is dear to man was being used in profanity.—On directing our steps towards the scene, we found they were proceeding from two or three boys, who were (as they said, for play) and were thus amusing themselves by profaning the sacred name of the Most High.—And this was not far from the store of Mr. J. Z. Rogers, and right opposite the door of Mr. Ainslie. We trust that Mr. Ainslie will take these hopefuls under his immediate care, and try what effect a night in the lock-up would have upon them. It is fearful to have the small children polluted by such wretches. As these youthful malefactors, have to be tried before two J. P's., instead of one, and as there is only one acting magistrate in the village, it would not be amiss, if the worthy Representative of the County would get another magistrate appointed for Ashburnham, as we are informed that this would enable these young roudies to receive at once, and more readily, the reward of their shameful practice.

The anniversary of the Sabbath School of St. John's Church was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening last. The room was beautifully and tastefully decorated with flags, evergreens and appropriate mottoes and designs, the whole of which reflected a great deal of credit on the teachers of the School, who, we understand, were a committee for that purpose.

About half-past six the children sat down to a splendid tea provided by the teachers and their friends, which they discussed only in that way that those little people thoroughly appreciate.

The chair was occupied by Rev. Mr. Beck. We noticed on the platform Mr. J. W. Dunnet, Superintendant, and Mr. Campbell of Ashburnham. A good deal of amusement and instructive information was afforded the audience, adult as well as juvenile, by the display of a magic lantern by Mr. Campbell. Many of the scenes were interesting, especially those showing the ice-bound regions of Greenland. The singing by the juvenile choir, under the instruction of Miss Rogers of Ashburnham, is really deserving of more than a passing notice. Rarely, if ever, will you see the same number of young voices perform each their part as well as was done by them on this occasion, which shews that they have paid a great deal of attention to their instructor. Mr. Dunnet, on behalf of the Ladies of the congregation, presented the Sexton with a well filled purse of money as a token of their appreciation of his attention to his duties. The evening's entertainment was brought to a close by the choir singing the national anthem. The trouble taken by the teachers in decorating the room for the pleasure and comfort of the children and furnishing the tea, shews the affection and good will entertained for them, which we trust will be appreciated, and that Christmas Eve, 1866, will ever be remembered with kindness and gratitude and with the hopes that their instructors may enjoy many happy returns of the season. We beg leave to join with them on this occasion in presenting them with the compliments of the season.

Died, at Port Hope, on Friday last, the 21st inst., the Rev. JOHN EDWARDS, brother of our townsman Mr. James Edwards. We learn that he left Montreal the evening before, on the Grand Trunk Cars, intending to spend Christmas with his brother. The cars were three hours behind time, and while walking with a friend, towards a friend's house in Port Hope, he sunk down [illegible] became unconscious. He was conveyed to a Hotel, and a Doctor sent for, but all [illegible] unless that is afforded to every man, or at least time to do so, the election can easily be upset. The Council should have passed a By-law to divide the township into wards so as to allow every man the opportunity of voting.

OTONABEE.

Soiree.

We would call the attention of our readers to the annual Soiree of the Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society, on New Year's day, at the Town Hall, North Monaghan. Tea will be served at 5 o'clock, p. m., after which will follow speeches, &c. Let as many as can avail themselves of the opportunity, attend on the occasion.

Railroad Rumors.

It is said that the Port Hope, L. & B. Railway has changed hands, and that the purchasers are, Messrs. Gzowski, McPherson & Brown. For the truth of the report we dare not vouch, still we are inclined to think that we may rely on it as correct.

Bible Christian Tea.

The Tea Meeting on Monday evening was a success, considering the unfavorable state of the weather. A goodly number took tea and all seemed to enjoy themselves.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening. There were 9 members present.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from the Warden of the County was received, relative to the request of the Bridge, asking the Town Council to put the Treasurer in a position to pay a just proportion of the expenses. This was referred to a special Committee, consisting of Messrs. Chamberlen, Doherty, and Wilson, with a request to report at next meeting of the Council.

A communication was received from W. Dennistoun, Esq., informing the Mayor of Council that in his opinion the award lately made between the Town and County could be reduced on application.

Also a communication from Thomas D'Arcy Oroley, relative to a mistake on London street. Another from Richard Hall, Sec'y of the Fire Company, relative to uniform and requesting an answer.

There were a few applications for remittance of taxes.

Mr. Clinton was heard in reference to being over-assessed on personal property. Taxes were reduced to an amount equal to what they would be on $6,000.

Accounts amounting to $119.86 were recommended to be paid.

A By-law was introduced to provide for the measurement of wood and the weighing of straw. The By-law was afterwards passed.

Mr. Henthorn was allowed a remittance of $8.00 in taxes on the store occupied by Mr. Sutherland, being the difference between taxes on real value and personal.

The collector was instructed to receive $9.60 from Mrs. Tanner, in lieu of taxes on her property that had been assessed to Alexander Stewart.

The Council adjourned for 3 weeks.

MONAGHAN.

A meeting of the Electors of this Municipality, was held at the Town Hall, on Monday Dec. 24th, at noon, when the following nominations were made:—

Reeve—Messrs. Chamberlain, Gilmour, and Young.

Councillor—Messrs. Laing, Robson, Hovey, Dundass, Harper, John Tully, and Collins.

Mr. Gilmour addressed the meeting at some length explanatory of County Council matters, which seemed satisfactory. He wished to be judged by his past conduct, hoped the election would be amicably conducted, that no unpleasant feelings would arise during the contest, and assured them that if returned he best attention would be at the service of the Municipality.

Messrs. Young, Robson, Dundass, and Harper, severally expressed themselves to the effect that if returned they would act similarly.

Mr. John Tully charged the council with little or no acts, considered that they met much more frequently than was required, showed how much the taxes had risen of late years, contrasted the late with former councils which gave their services gratis, considering the hopes sufficient remuneration, which he was still willing to do if elected, and concluded by charging the Councillors who brought forward the motion for the drill shed with abominable conduct.

Councillor Dundass took the matter to himself, and replied very warmly, stating that instead of feeling that his conduct was such as had been stated, he rather felt proud to have his name mentioned in connection with so laudable an object; namely, that of procuring a suitable place for the defenders of our country to drill in; and in his opinion, any person speaking as Mr. Tully did, was fitter company for the Robert's Fenian faction, than that of the Council Room, or of loyal Canadians.

Mr. Collins, in consequence of being the last nominated, considered himself a kind of a whip-per-in; he spoke most favorably of Mr. Chamberlain's ability for the discharge of the important, and now onerous office of Reeve, but was of the opinion that if elected Councillor for the town of Peterboro', as was currently reported, would be so, it would disqualify him for being Reeve of Monaghan, as late proceedings in the Town Council showed most unmistakably that the interests of the places clash too much to expect that any individual could discharge both offices to the satisfaction of those concerned.—Respecting himself, he had now served six years in the Council; a longer period he believed than that of any other, thought that he had spent his time badly, if he had not gained some knowledge of Municipal matters; although differing from Mr. Dundass respecting the Drill shed, believe in the sincerity and purity of his motives, noticed the unanimity of feeling which existed in the present Council to render justice to all parts of the township which he hoped would always be the case, and thanked them for the heartfelt confidence reposed in him, which he hoped had not been violated. If returned again he would continue to act in the same manner as heretofore.

A poll being demanded, the Chairman announced that by a By-Law of the Municipality the township had been divided into two Electoral Divisions. Wards number one and two voting at the School House No. 2 Sec., and Wards No. three, four and five, at the Town Hall; proceedings to commence on the first Monday in January, at 9 o'clock, and continue to 5 o'clock p. m.

COM.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR:—In your last impression you state that I shall "deliver a Lecture" in St. John's Church, Peterborough, on St John the Evangelist's day; and, in the the "Review" of the the following day, it is called a "Masonic Lecture."

To prevent any disappointment or misunderstanding I beg to say that I was requested by the Freemasons of Peterboro' to "deliver a Sermon to the Fraternity," a request I promised to comply with. So that the address will be a Sermon and not a Lecture. Had I been desired to give a Lecture on Masonry to the Lodge I should have been equally ready to do so and shall be to preach a Sermon.

Permit me to take this opportunity of announcing that a collection will be made on the above-named occasion in behalf of the Lakefield Church Building Fund; and as the collection has never been made in the Church in Peterboro' for any purpose connected with my Parish, I trust that I shall not be deemed too importunate in having applied to the Rector for his assent, as assent he was kind enough at once to accord. The proceeds will be handed to the Ladies of my Congregation for the purchase of materials for our forthcoming Bazaar.

KNOWLEDGE.

BY MRS. ABDY.

"Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of the world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?"—1. Cor. 1. 20.

Knowledge! thou idol that in youth I sought,
Yielding my spirit to thy potent spell,
Giving to thee my bloom of heart and thought,
And loving thee, not wisely but too well;
All were my vows and faith repaid by thee—
A bane, a bitter bane, thou wert to me.

Hope I not woo'd thee by the waning light,
Climbing with patient pain thy ruined way;
Yet when I breathless gain'd the wish'd for height,
Behold uprising Hills my toil repay?
Fainting I paus'd—repress'd the burning tear—
Then rush'd unquailing on my new career.

And how in sickness would I wail and grieve,
To think thy gifts could profit not the dead?
I dwelt in all the treasures I must leave,
On language unbridled, books unread,
Couriers unrisked, arts unattained,
Problems unsolved, and sciences ungain'd.

But God has tow'rds my heart with holier feelings;
Knowledge! I love thee with a chasten'd love,
And hold the proudest wealth of my revealings,
Poor to that sacred wisdom from above,
Which tells the humble sinner how to win,
Peace, pardon and redemption for his sin.

Nor need we towering intellect to learn
The lessons taught in Revelation's page:
The simple peasant can those truths discern
As clearly as the poet or the sage;
God to no lettered band confines his call—
His mercy and his grace extends to all.

And when death comes upon his awful mission,
We need not our such knowledge to forego;
Since we shall regain heaven th full fruition
Of our humbly cherished hopes below,
Faith on the "things unseen" reposes here,
And greets their glories in a happier sphere.

Knowledge! at length I view thee as thou art—
Religion's handmaid; I can still allow Thy power to charm and dazzle but my heart
Rests firmly on the Rock of Ages now;
Nor puts proud scientific lore to scan,
Content to know that Jesus died for man.

THE POOR PRINTER,

OR THE BROKER'S DAUGHTERS.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

CHAPTER I.

'I should like to know the name of that handsome young fellow who accompanied you to church last Sunday,' remarked Clara Mullins to her amiable and beautiful cousin, Maria Sedgeland.

'That's a pretty question to ask. Do you imagine I am so simple as to tell all I know in the age of secret societies? The next thing you will want an introduction; by-and-by you will set your cap, and who knows but you may steal away my gallant beau and then leave me alone in the glory of single blessedness?'

'Now, Maria, stop poking fun at me, and let's know the name of that nice young man.'

'Well, Clara, if it will afford you so much gratification to ascertain his name, I will not be so cruel as to withhold it; here is its end.'

'George Raymond. What a pretty combination of names. George is the Greek word for farmer, and Raymond signifies sunlight on the mountains.'

'So you admire the name, and think he who wears it is personally handsome.'

'Yes, Maria, I think he is a perfect model of a man. How neatly and yet how plainly he dresses. What a fine figure, broad forehead, and beautiful eyes he has. Is he a lawyer, or doctor, or professor, or merchant, or student? What is he?'

'He is a printer.'

'A publisher, you mean.'

'No, he picks up types in a newspaper office.'

'O, now I understand; you intend to say that he is the editor and proprietor of a newspaper.'

'No, my dear cousin, he is a journeyman printer.'

'You don't say he is nothing but a journeyman.'

'He is a poor man who works for a livelihood.'

'How could you consent to let him sit in our pew, and beau you home from church? I would not permit a mechanic to touch my arm with a pair of tongs. I think you ought to be ashamed of such vulgar society. I shall inform ma this very day, and so long as you remain under t is roof I am quite sure she will not allow that plebeian printer to pay any attention to you.'

'I declare,' observed Maria, pleasantly, 'you have won me a Cauddle lecture. If that distinguished foreigner, who fell in love with you at the museum, and who has been so assiduous in his attentions ever since he obtained an introduction, could have heard you, I have no doubt he would highly commend you for looking down on what he calls common herd.'

'I wish you to understand that Mr. Fitzgammon is a real gentleman by birth and he has the advantages of an ample fortune and a refined education' continued Clara.

'I am heartily sorry, my dear cousin, that you encourage the addresses of such a fop. I am sure he does not display much good breeding, and as for his education he seldom speaks without murdering his mother tongue. For my part I should prefer the society of one who works for a living provided he is honest, virtuous, sober and intelligent. I have been acquainted with Mr. Raymond ever since he was a child—indeed, we were schoolmates. I know his parents, and although they are poor, they are quite respectable, and have given George a good common edu ation, and he is now occupying his leisure hours in acquiring a knowledge of the languages. Even you admire his personal attraction, and all who are acquainted with him unhesitatingly acknowledge that his intellectual endowments are far superior to his physical beauty.'

'I am much obliged to you for that sermon, Miss Maria Sedgeland; it does not require the assistance of a microscope or a spy glass to discover you state of feeling in regard to this vexed question. The truth is, you are envious or jealous, because I have made an impression on the heart of dear Mr. Fitzgammon, while you can only pick up letters in a printing office. Ma will put a stop to your courtship, and if you were at the altar, pa would rise and forbid the banns.'

The next morning, immediately after breakfast, Maria was requested to go into her aunt's room. She had been seated but a few seconds, when the aristocratic old lady came into the apartment, and observed.

'I have been informed that, without my knowledge or consent, you have accepted the attentions of a young man employed in a printing office.'

'Why, aunt,' remarked Maria, blushing to her temples, 'Mr. Ra mond came from my native town, and we have been acquainted with each other ever since we were children. He is a respectable young man, and a welcome guest in some of the best circles of society.'

'Well, Miss, I shall put an immediate stop to such interviews as you have had with him. You shall not go with him to the theatre, nor drink wine with him at parties.'

'He never goes to the theatre, and he never drinks wine. He belongs to a division of the sons of temperance.'

'So he is a cold water rat, is he? Now I hate him more than I did before; and if he ever comes to my house, I will drive him away with a broomstick.'

CHAPTER II.

'John,' said Mrs Mullins to her servant man, 'take this billet-doux to the hotel where Mr. Fitzgammon boards, and give it to him yourself, with my compliments.'

It was past nine o'clock, and yet Mr. Fitzgammon was still in the embrace of Morpheus. The waiter, however, glided to awaken the sleeper, and feed him, so that the dining-room might be got in readiness for the next meal, awoke him at once.

He usually spent an hour at his toilette, washing his hands, powdering his face, unpapering his curls, lacing his stays, etc.—Whilst he was dressing and decorating his person, John commenced conversation with an intelligent waiter, who was an old chum of his.

'I guess means is again to have a party to night, and this note is to ax the gentleman you have just called to attend.'

'You do not call him a gentleman, I hope. He is as cross as a bear with a sore head, and is more trouble at the table than any other six boarders in the house. He smells of the soup until his mo stache dips into it, and then pronounces it meat for pigs; he says the beefsteak is tough as leather—the butter stinks as Sampson—and the pies and puddings not to be compared to such luxuries in London. We have to be as careful in feeding him as though he were a wild beast, guarding his teeth on the keeper of the menagerie.'

'Why don't you talk, Bob. Miss Clara takes quite a shine to him, and she would have thrown a kettle of hot water on you, if she had heard what you said just now. I wouldn't wonder if they got married before long. She says he is the son of a lord.'

'Son of the devil, more likely.'

'Well, if they should pair off, after billing and cooing a while, I hope he will make Miss Clara stand round, for she has a horrid temper, and Miss Sedgeland has to put up with her ill-humour. She is half the time scolding her, because a working man went with her to meeting on Sunday.'

'Are the old folks rich?'

'They are well to do in the world, but they need not turn up their noses at poor folks, for I remember the time when old Mullins couldn't cut such a swath as he does now. He used to keep a barber's shop, and had some idea of taking my father into partnership with him; but father refused to have anything to do with the old skinflint. He held on to every sixpence until it squeezed, and soon saved change enough to commence brokering on a small scale. Folks used to laugh, and say that one pole would answer for both branches of business. Now he uses soft soap, and shaves notes, and is ashamed of the more honest and honourable calling of shaving faces. I wish the old man would try his hand on the face of the dandy who is after his daughter.'

'Yes, John, I think he could improve his looks; but then, if a man makes a beast of himself, I can see no earthly nor heavenly reason why he should not look the one. I believe this stranger, who palms himself off as a distinguished foreigner, is an impudent imposter, without either wit, money, or morality; and I should be sorry to have him marry your young mistress.'

'John, you talk like a book.'

'Well John, I read books, and study human nature; and if I am not vastly mistaken, the ill-looking, ill-natured, and ignorant fop of whom we have been speaking is a vile fellow, and ought to be exposed. I think it would be a good idea to get Mr. Raymond to publish him.'

'Do you mean Raymond the printer?'

'Yes.'

'He is the very man who went to church with the graceful and lovely Miss Sedgeland last Sunday, and means has vowed he shall never darken her doors again.'

'What an old goose she must be. Mr. Raymond is loved and respected by all who know him. Several of our oldest, most wealthy, and influential citizens have clubbed and raised funds enough to buy a press and types, and have engaged him to edit a newspaper they design to publish. He is the famous author of the thrilling sketches published over the initials of G. R.'

'Miss Clara says she wouldn't touch him with a pair of tongs and that he is a low fellow, fit only to go with the vulgar people.'

'Pshaw! that's all moonshine. The time may come when she will be glad to be in his company. There is an accomplished and pretty young lady boarding here who gave the mitten to Mr. Fitzgammon, but she would be delighted to have Mr. Raymond accept her hand, her heart, and her fortune.'

CHAPTER III.

As John summed, that very evening there was a grand soiree at the house owned and occupied by the haughty, homely Mrs. and the hard-fisted, dignified Mr. Mullins.

At an early hour the washed, combed, brushed, curled, dressed, perfumed, and decorated Mr. Fitzgammon might have been seen ascending a flight of granite steps, and, after spelling out the name engraved upon the silver door-plate, pulling the bell with such violence that the lap-dog howled with the ear-ache, and the servants started with alarm, and the busy old minister wondered what on earth was the matter.

He was escorted into a pleasant room, which was handsomely furnished with the most fashionable furniture. After being introduced to the company present, he made a low bow, tried to smile, scraped his feet upon the carpet, and then awkwardly tumbled like a bale of dry goods upon the sofa; after which he looked up with an air of wonderous wisdom and great importance, which seemed to say, what think you of this imported specimen of gentility.

He really was a remarkable looking object. His coarse hair was oiled, curled and scented. He stared at every person in the room through his quizzing-glass.—His wore on his unintellectual face moustaches, imperial and goatee, and looked like an ass that had swallowed a horse and left the tale sticking out of its mouth. His red, carrot fingers were hooped with huge rings, and a brooch large enough for a looking-glass stuck upon his ruffled shirt bosom.

Most persons could have seen at a glance that he was one of those nondescript creatures, who know but little of themselves externally, except what they learn from the looking-glass, and who know nothing of themselves internally except what they feel from the liquor-glass. The following conversation between the parties will afford a view of the mental calibre of the distinguished gentleman.

'It is a beautiful evening, sir,' remarked one of the company.

'Very foine.'

'How do you like our climate, sir?'

'It's very foine.'

'What do you think of American scenery?'

'It is very foine.'

'You have seen the Falls of Niagara, I am told. What do you think of that sublime and beautiful water wonder?'

'It is very foine.'

'I think I saw you at the meeting which was recently addressed by the Hon. Daniel Wesster: what did you think of his eloquent and magnificent speech?'

'It was very foine.'

'How do you feel, sir, when excited by the thrilling, electrifying eloquence of our Demosthenes?'

'Very foine.'

'The sensation must be akin to that occasioned by the trumpeting of the storm when the winds and the waves do battle.—What are your sensations during a storm at sea?'

'I am sick at the stomach, at such times; but when we have a smooth sea and fair wind I feel very foine.'

The conversation was just then interrupted by the appearance of Mrs. Mullins and her daughter. They were richly dressed and gaudily bejewelled, and Clara, notwithstanding the unmistakable lines which ill-temper had traced upon her countenance, was beautiful to look upon. The moment they entered the room Mr. Fitzgammon arose from his seat—and squeezed the hand of Miss Clara, and told her she looked very fine. In the course of the evening, he ventured to say to her that she was a charming girl, fit to be the wife of a lord, and that he meant all he said, upon honour.

Maria was present at the party, and her aunt avoided herself of an early opportunity to ask her how she would like the attention of such a man as Mr. Fitzgammon.

'Best at a distance,' said she. 'I could not endure such a band-box dandy, whose head is as empty as his hat.'

'You rude thing, how dare you speak so disparagingly of my company in my own house!'

'Why, aunt, he has been winking at me and staring at me most impertinently thro' his quizzing-glass. He is not a gentleman, and ought to be requested to leave the house. If he does not leave, with your permission, I will retire to my room.'

I suppose you are anxious to see the journeyman printer, but if he dares to show his face within the reach of a poker, I will drive him into the street. I have a will and a way to punish upstarts who do not know their own place, and have no regard for the higher orders of society.'

At a late hour that night, or rather at an early hour the next morning, the party broke up; but the unfortunate Mr. Fitzgammon had partaken too freely of wine, and some John was nominated and appointed a committee of one to lead the eminent stranger to his lodgings.

The next day it was rumored in different parts of the city, that a lord, duke, knight, baronet, or earl, or something else had fallen in love with Miss Mullins the broker's daughter. Maria received a severe Cauddeling from her aunt, and dittо from her cousin, because she spoke so contemptously of Mr. Fitzgammon.

Miss Mullins' jealously induced her to believe it several young ladies were not only smitten, but dead in love, with the golden calf she worshipped, and in order to make sure of the idol of her affection, she and her parents went to work in good earnest to bring about a match and have the parties united in matrimony.

The landlord to whom Mr. Fitzgammon was indebted for board and borrowed money did not press his claims for fear he might lose a customer.

In a short time arrangements were made for the wedding. Milliners, tailors, shoemakers, and confectioners were busily at work. The day was selected, the guests were invited, and all the interested parties were on the tip-toe of anticipation, when an event occurred which is related in the following chapter.

CHAPTER IV.

'Well, did you see this new paper?'

'Yes, I saw it, but you know as well as I do, that I have no time to read newspapers. Clara is to be married next Monday and I shall have to be as busy as a dressmaker, or cut a sorry figure at the wedding.'

'But there is a lot pointing to a paragraph about Mr. Fitzgammon the distinguished foreigner.'

'Do read it, pa,' said Clara, smilingly.

'I know he would make a noise in the world. A man of his rank in society, having such a princely fortune, and a variety of accomplishments, such fascinating manners, and such superb talents, cannot fail to make a great sensation among a people competent to appreciate his genius. Let us hear it, pa.'

'We have received the London Times.'

'Hear this, ma, the news is from England. Now I suppose my curious, jealous aunt of a cousin, who told me she believed somebody was an imposter, will see her mistake.'

'Do let me read without further interruption, if you please.'

'We received by last night's mail a copy of the London Times, which contained the following startling and unexpected announcement:—'John Gammon, who was a groom in the service of William Fitz, Esq., has robbed his master of considerable jewellry and clothing, and it is supposed has sailed for America. He is about thirty years of age, of medium size, has dark eyes, and coarse, curly hair, and a scar on his left cheek, which he received from a watchman who arrested him in the act of whipping his wife. One hundred pounds shall be given to the person who will secure the thief.' Early the morning one of our efficient police officers read the announcement, and at once put the Fitz and the Gammon together, went to the hotel, where he found a sleeping beauty with a scar on his left cheek, and the name of Fitz on some silver spoons in the trunk.—He awoke and arrested Mr. Gammon, alias Fitzgammon, and escorted him to jail.'

Clara fainted when she heard the sad tidings, and after she came to her senses, she exclaimed:

'O, me! O, pa! what shall I do? My dresses are made, our friends are invited, everybody will laugh at me! I wish I could be shot up as a nunnery!'

'What a villian he must be,' said Mr. Mullins. 'He has a wife now living. He has been stealing spoons. I shouldn't wonder if he stole that silver cup of the mantel piece, for I noticed it the day after he first called here. I hope the authorities will hang him by the neck until he is choked to death.'

'Mr. Mullins, who is the editor of that paper?'

'Mr. George Raymond.'

'I wonder if that is the young man who gallanted Maria to meeting that Sunday?'

'I suppose it is,' said Mr. Mullins.

'Well, go and ask him concerning the particulars of this singular, and most unhappy affair.'

Mr. Mullins went to the office and inquired if Mr. Raymond was in.

'No sir,' was the answer; he has gone to the State House. He has recently been elected to the Senate, and consequently spends much of his time in the Senate-chamber.'

Is this Mr. Raymond the young man who used to work in the brick block across the way?'

'Yes sir.'

'When he returns, give my compliments to him, and say that my name is Mullins, and that all the members of my family would be happy to see him.'

Mr. Mullins returned and informed the family that the journey man printer had become, not only an editor, but also a prominent member of the Senate, and that the reporters acting Mr. Fitzgammon was, alas, too true.

The intelligence spread like wild fire through the city, and afforded a rich feast for tale-bearers, and scandal-mongers; and those who carry devil's mail-bag from door to door had their hands, hearts, and mouths full for a fortnight.

The Hon. Mr. Raymond,—the low-born journeyman—the plebeian printer, who belonged to the vulgar herd,—called frequently to see the charming and beautiful Maria Sedgeland, and although Clara set her cap for him, and tried all the skill of an experienced coquette, she failed to win the heart of the printer, who became the happy husband of Maria Sedgland. Clara improved in wisdom as she increased in years, and finally became the contented wife of a worthy and respectable man who worked as pressman in Mr. Raymond's office.

SACRIFICE OF TWO HUNDRED MEN IN DAHOMEY.—A letter from Lagos, on the coast of Africa, says: "The frigate Venobie carrying the flag of Rear Admiral Vincount Fleuriot de Langle commanding the French naval squadron on the Western coast of Africa, has just visited St. Paul de Loando, the chief place of the Portuguese establishment of Southern Guinea. The admiral was well received by the the Governor and the authorities of the country.—He reports that French commerce has been sensibly increased at this point during the last three years. On leaving St. Paul the Zenobie visited Mossamedes and Elephant's Bay, which serves as training ground for the ships on this station. The day after the arrival of the frigate at Lagos an English schooner brought news from Dahomey. The King was preparing to go to war with the Ashantees, and, to propitiate fortune, had ordered two hundred men to be sacrificed to the Genii. This is the third time within a year that he has indulged in this horrible barbarity."

The Roman Catholic Priests and Father Chiniquy.

From the Kankakee Journal.

For ten years past, Father Chiniquy has been prosecuting a work among the French Protestants of Illinois, which begins to tell seriously on the future of the Church of Rome in our midst. The priests of Rome bear a public testimony to the extraordinary success of the reformed priest. In turn they have attacked him in every way, from the day he left them. In turn they have dragged him before our civil courts more than twenty five times, where he successfully defended himself against the serious charges they brought against him. They confess to day that they have only failed to crush him, but they tell us and the whole world that Father Chiniquy is stronger than ever, and that he is more than ever successful in his work of converting the Roman Catholics from their chimera to take the Bible as the only lamp to their feet and the only light to their souls.

After having failed to destroy Father Chiniquy by the numberless and costly trials to which they have subjected him, they now hope to demolish him by means of a monster lottery under the name of a concert.

We do not object to Roman Catholics fighting their battles fairly against their formidable adversary, but we object to their coming to us Protestants, and asking our money under false pretences. For it is a fact that many Protestants have kindly given their names and promised their money for the concert of Mr. Lemoine, who, if we are not mistaken, would have refused both if they had fairly been told that the object of that concert was to paralyse Father Chiniquy. We live in a free country; the Roman Catholics are allowed, as well as the Protestants, to worship God according to their conscience, but the Protestants are glad to see the work of Father Chiniquy. It has done that which we are so proud our fathers have done for themselves and for us; they left what we believe to be the errors of Rome to follow the simple and pure word of God. As Protestants we confess that the letter of the priests of Rome is the best compliment that Father Chiniquy could receive. From the very lips of the priests of Rome we hear of the extraordinary efforts of the Reformer of Kankakee to educate his people and his admirable success in converting his fellow-country men.

As Protestants must we not congratulate Mr. Chiniquy? Must we not unite to cheer him up, instead of paralyzing him.

A late number of La Minerva of Montreal, contained an appeal to the Catholics of Canada, signed by several bishops and priests. After stating that the French Canadian Catholics of Kankakee, Illinois, are "in a score of an critical position, and in great danger of losing their faith," and that the bark of St. Peter is, in that locality, so tossed about that it seems ready to be submerged, the appeal goes on to say:—

"The persecutions and the religious troubles that we have experienced in Illinois through the apostasy of the unhappy Father Chiniquy, and the noble devotion of the Canadian priests, are things too well known to you for us to go into superfluous particulars.

"It is enough that we should lay before you the actual situation, and the unfortunate consequences to which the new and strange persecutions of this apostate have carried, and are still carrying us. Our fears have been realized, and fully justify the appeal we now place before you.

"For ten years past this wretch, after having soiled and dragged in the dust the livery of the Lord, is still infuriated for the destruction of our Catholic institutions," &c., &c.

A Clerical Plot Preparing in Rome.

The Roman correspondent of the Debats writes as follows:—"While conciliatory ideas seem to prevail in high quarters at Rome, a busy and implacable faction, which claims to dictate laws to the church, and to trace the conduct which its august head should follow, is more than ever striving to get him to quit Italy and thereby render all possible any reconciliation with a government which it regards revolutionary. The Pope declared in his allocution of October 29 that he would leave Rome if necessary, that is to say, if he was forced. The object, therefore, is to get up a popular movement against the government so as to influence the action of the Pope. For this purpose elements of disorder have been assembled in the city. The brigand chiefs of Southern Italy and Sicily have been collected and concealed in convents where their fanaticism is excited by priests. The national committee, which has its eye on these plans, has shown that the bread and meat supplied to the convents by the butchers and bakers is three or four times more than the usual quantity. Depots of concealed arms have also been discovered, and all the powder in the shops of the vendors of that article has been sold in one day. It is to be hoped that these guilty designs, which would of course be attributed to the Italian Government, will fail. It will be sufficient to appeal to the patriotism and moderation of the Roman people, and this is what the committee is doing."

The Edinburgh correspondent of the Filfshire Advertiser is responsible for the following: An elopement has taken in one of our first families, of the oldest son with his father's cook. The young gentleman had been reared with the greatest care, having only returned from Eton last year with high academic honours, and was destined by his father as the husband of a young and beautiful heiress. The bride elect is a buxom brunette, is by some years older than the bridegroom, and has been in the family for a considerable period. On Saturday last no appearance of the cook at her post or of the young gentleman at breakfast table inspired ominous surmises and suspicious remarks, which ultimately resolved into the truth, the chamber maid confessing that "they were away to get married in Aberdeen." The telegrap and all other means were resorted to stop the fugitives, the father taking the earliest train to Aberdeen. After searching in company with a detective every place where they were likely to be found, it was discovered that they had departed for Montrose, whether the "furious parent" followed, but only to find them inseparably united and sweetly slumbering in each other's arms.—So enraged was the old gentleman that, forgetting all delicacy, he dragged the bride from the embraces of the bridegroom, and, in a torrent of abusive language, was about to eject her from the bedroom, when all the spirit of cookie's sex arising, she collared her quondam master and hurled him headlong from the apartment, to the considerable injury of his clother and person. The runaway son then endeavoured to explain, and pacify his insulted parent; while the lady, not exactly relishing her peculiar position, saw the useage she had received sans ceremonie seized her husband, and, entwining him almost ad nauseam back to the bedroom, locked the door and left the old gentleman to collect his scattered senses and arrange his disordered attire.—The young gentleman is entitled to considerable property in his own right.

The following very naively expressed confessions are made by the Boston Traveller:—

"The Provincial papers express the opinion that our Government, when it decided to terminate the Reciprocity Treaty, made a great mistake, and for once we think they are not far from right. The Canadians and the other Provincials further east had been so strong in their sympathy for the rebels, and so bitter in their hostility toward the North, that it was thought best to punish them, and in selecting the means for accomplishing that but little enquiry was made as to the probable effect upon ourselves. We have prevented them from obtaining many articles manufactured here as cheaply as before, but by so doing we have to some extent decreased the number of customers for our wares. The Government now gets a small revenue from the importation of articles heretofore free, and the Provincials get lower prices for their wood and coal, their potatoes and fish, their lumber, their beef and their wheat, but at the same time the price of these articles to our consumers has been largely increased. Our unneighborly neighbors have been punished but it has been partly at our own expense. They grumble under the infliction, and we cannot blame them. While the war lasted we were willing to suffer, if by so doing we had our revenge upon our foes, but it is a question whether we can afford to continue longer the present state of affairs. They desire a renewal of reciprocal trade, and say so; we need it, but have hesitated to admit it. It is now about time to study how to benefit ourselves, rather than the best method of spiting those who have despitefully used us, and we hope soon to see negotiations looking toward the restoration of the old business relations between the two countries."

The Montreal True Witness, the Roman Catholic organ of the Seminary of Montreal, rightly appreciates the significance of the Ritualistic movement in the Church of England, and with his views upon it we heartily agree. He says the Ritualists have adopted the "exterior rites and ceremonies with which the (Roman) Catholic Church most appropriately celebrates her Eucharistic sacrifice-rites and ceremonies which are, however, idle and void of sense in the communion service of the Church of England. Many persons of the ritualistic clergy, and even of their congregations may accept the Anti-Protestant doctrines, which these rights and ceremonies signify and preach to the unlearned; but that they are repugnant not only to all that is Protestant within the establishment, and to the general tone of the Prayer Book and its Rubrics no impartial judge will attempt to deny. For be it understood that the extreme Ritualists, not only use the rites, ceremonies and dresses of the (Roman) Catholic Church, but they hold up, or propound, the consecrated elements to the worship of their people; thus, by implication, doing one of two things. Either they tempt or provoke their several congregations to worship that which they themselves hold to be as much bread and wine after consecration as before—which is undoubtedly idolatry; or they believe, and try to teach, that the consecrated elements are no longer creatures, but God himself, which is manifestly repugnant to any interpretation, however forced, that can be put upon the 29th of the Anglican's 39 articles."

COLONIAL BISHOPS.

We find the following in an English journal:—

"The Earl of Carnarvon has taken a step which marks a highly important change in the position of the colonial churches in communion with the Church of England. In consequence of recent decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the Crown has for some time past ceased to issue patents for the appointment of Bishops in colonies having independent Legislatures.—Lord Carnarvon has consulted the law officers of the Crown upon another important point, and they have advised him that "a mandate from the Crown is not necessary to enable colonial Bishops to perform the right of consecration." This decision has been called forth by the recent election of Archdeacon Bethune to be Coadjutor Bishop of Toronto, by a Synod of that diocese. The consecration of the new Bishop will now take place by the authority of the Metropolitan of Canada, given under his seal, and without any intervention of the civil power. We congratulate Lord Carnarvon on having advanced the liberty of the colonial churches another stage."

The Colonial Secretary has taken exactly the right ground, and deserves great credit therefor. This action is consistent with the legal position of the Anglican Church in Canada, and we in y add consistent with the true interests of that church.—Globe.

DENTAL ASSOCIATION OF CANADA WEST.—A Convention of Dentists was held at the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, on the 3rd inst.—B. W. Day, M.D., of Kingston, occupied the chair, and Dr. J. S. Scott, of Cobourg, was appointed Secretary. It was moved by Dr. J. S. Scott, and seconded by Dr. Chittenden. That we proceed to the organization of a Dental Association for Canada West. Drs. F. G. Callender, Chittenden, H. S. Wood, and J. O'Donnell, of Peterborough, were appointed a committee to draft a constitution. The committee reported a draft of the constitution, which was adopted. The following officers were then elected:—B. W. Day, M. D., Kingston, President; Dr. C. S. Chittenden, Hamilton, 1st Vice-President; Dr. H. S Wood, Picton, 2nd do.; Dr. F. G. Callender, Cobourg, Treasurer; Dr. J. S. Scott, do., Recording Secretary; Dr. J. O'Donnell, Peterborough, Corresponding do.; Dr. D. A. Bogart, Hamilton, Librarian. The following committee were appointed on by laws:—Drs. Callender, Bogart, Snider of Toronto, and Lelonde of Brockville. On motion of Dr. Bogart, seconded by Dr. Callender, the following were appointed a committee to draft a bill of incorporation to be submitted to Parliament at its next session: The President and Vice Presidents, the Recording and Corresponding Secretaries. The meeting then adjourned until the first Tuesday in July next, at Cobourg—this to be the semi-annual session—the first annual session to be held at Hamilton on the third Tuesday in January next.

THE MOST MARITIME COUNTRY IN THE WORLD.—One of our Nova Scotia exchanges state that shipbuilding has not produced very favourable results this year, and that, nevertheless, the shipping interests of the Province have not been seriously injured, inasmuch as Nova Scotia owns and sails nearly all the craft she builds. It then goes on to say, and we have good reason to believe with truth:—

"Hence, ships sailing from ports of registry in this Province are to be found seeking freight in all parts of the world, and their sails may be said to whiten every sea. These adventurous keels are in nearly every case owned by a number of proprietors, and as no person can by any possibility reside more than twenty-five miles from the water in this Province, it is nothing more than natural that all classes are interested in shipping. As a people, we are either maritime farmers or agricultural sailors; men, women and children, indiscriminately, own shares in ships, or are otherwise interested in shipping, and hence Nova Scotia occupies the ground position of being the most maritime country in the world, in proportion to population. This distinction applies to the manning of Provincial vessels as well, for to a very considerable extent they are both officered and manned by native born seamen."

BURLEIGH &c.

The Election of Reeve and Councillors for the Municipality of the United Townships of Burleigh, Anstruther, Chandos, Cardiff, Monmouth, Harcourt and Bruton has resulted in the election of Mr. Carroll, Reeve.

Messrs. Cassady, Lousley, Stone and Scott, Councillors.

BELMONT.

P. Pearce, Esq., Reeve, not a single vote having been polled against him.
Messrs. Weld, A. W. Dafoe, Young and Preston, Councillors.

It must be pleasing to Mr. Pearce to be elected, not without opposition, but without a vote having been polled against him: and this in the face of the fact that there was a large vote polled.

Belmont could not send a man that would be able to do as much for them as Mr. Pearce can do.

Wm. Sowden, Deputy Reeve.
Messrs. R. Howden, W. Hunter and A. Webster, Councillors.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

NORTH WARD—A. Graham, Esq.
CENTRE WARD—Thos. White, Esq.
SOUTH WARD—W. Coulter, Esq.

EAST WARD, the only one in which there was a contest, was between W. Lundy, an old Trustee, and Capt. Kennedy. Mr. Lundy gained the day by a majority of 28.

ASHBURNHAM.—H. Bennett was re-elected. Mr. Rogers refused to allow himself to be re-elected, and in consequence Philip Sargent was chosen in his place.

A New Idea.

The Townships of Asphodel, through the action of its Clerk, was almost being left without a council. He took the Anomalous course of declaring the five first nominated on the 24th ult., elected. This is now considered illegal, and to remedy it, the people have a Meeting to nominate other candidates, and we are informed that they intend holding an election on Friday (to morrow) to determine on whom the choice of the people will fall, and the old Council has agreed to appoint the five successful men. It is a new idea, nevertheless it is equivalent to an election, as far as choice of men is concerned, and the appointment of these men by the old council will make them a legal body. Would it not be better for the Clerk to study the act a little more carefully.

Early Settlement, &c., of the Town and County.

We learn that the printing of this work will be completed during the present week; so that its issue may be expected immediately. The greater part of it has been submitted to Col. Haultain, M.P.P., for the county, W. H. Scott, Esq., Mayor of the Town, Jas. Edwards, Walter Sheridan, E. Burnham, Esquires, and other gentlemen, from whom the most flattering commendations of the work have been received by the author. From the numerous enquiries of persons desirous to purchase, it is evident that the whole edition will be rapidly sold. Orders to all cases must be accompanied by the cash.

BURLEIGH.

Mr. Fitzgerald favors us with another letter anent the survey of Burleigh, and we insert it with pleasure. We are perfectly willing that he should "hold by the opinions" before expressed, and we can assure him so do we hold the opinions before set forth in our reply. Mr. F. cares neither for law nor logic; we think so too. He admits that the effect of an act of parliament will be to confirm the recent survey; we think it will be to confirm, not annul. He anticipates action on the matter: we advised action; but his anticipation and letters admit a necessity for action; that is what we advised, so as to settle the whole question, and the sooner this action be taken the better. We never condemned the re-survey, nor did we intimate any intention to say a word against it, but on the contrary, we wish it established. It is not now the established survey. We trust that the new County Council will at once set to work to get it established. Our desire is to quiet the people's minds and prevent litigation and local trouble. But we would remind Mr. Fitzgerald that his opinions, although of value to himself, will be considered of either of value or not according to the views others take of the matter. To us they are of little importance in this case.

The Re-union.

This entertainment on Thursday evening last, under the auspices of the Literary Club, was a great success. The Hall was overcrowded, which made it uncomfortable for many who were forced to stand during the whole proceeding, but even this was encouragement to go on. The programme was well arranged, and all those who took part in the music, recitations, songs and readings, deserve the thanks of the Club and of the audience for their kindness in affording so pleasant an entertainment—Where all did so well it would be invidious to particularize, but we may be allowed to remark that we hope the club will be able to procure the services of Mr. Heathfield for a few more of the promised re-unions, and also of those Ladies who delighted the audience with the melody of their charming voices in songs and choses on Thursday evening last. We censure, frain from mentioning the reading of Poe's "Engene Aram" by Mr. Wright, of Toronto. This piece was well rendered, and caused many to hope that Mr. Wright might able to favour the Club with another reading during these re-unions. Miss Rogers sang several songs in her usual faultless style. The Hall is not well suited for sing, yet Miss Roger's vocal powers did appear taxed in the least, she certainly sing harmingly. The Duett "Moonlight Bay and Flowers," by Miss Rogers and Mr. Bush, was fully appreciated as testified by the applause of the audience, and the instrumental music was all that could be need or expected from amateurs. The Club was fortunate in obtaining the co-operation of the performers. The "Irish Physician" by Mr. Haggart convulsed all. We would like to hear some readings from good authors, and we hope the managers will make arrangements for one or two such readings during the winter.

Literary Club

A Meeting of the Directors of Literary Club will be held at the Firemen Hall, this evening, at 7½ o'clock. A full attendance is requested. There will be debate by Members of the Club afterwards. Subject to be chosen by the Chairman. Members only admitted.

We have been requested to state the examination for promotion to the Grammar School Department will take place on day next, and all who desire to enter the Grammar School are requested to present. No promotion can take place after the summer vacation, Explanation.

We have received a complimentary note from Mr. W. H. Wrighton, which we will give a place verbatim et literatim. It is as follows:—

Mr. Stretton

Sir

I called into your shop to see you respecting a few statements you made at the poll in the North Ward the day of the election. I demand from you an explanation of your conduct there; you stated publicly that I was the meanest man in Town & you wondered that the electors of the North Ward would elect such a mean man, a man who would be guilty of doing what I had done. you stated that I had gone to the entrance, and because I could not get in without paying I had raised a disturbance and went in with force rather than pay the admittance, I beg to contradict this statement, it is a base falsehood and I am prepared to prove it such and the man who said it spoke what was not true. Mr Mitchell called into my shop, and said he was going to the concert, I said I would go with him if he would wait, he did so and we went together with Mr Chambers. Mr Mitchell said to me that I did not require to pay anything at the door as I was a fireman I said I was going to pay he said no it was all right, under the impression that it was all right I went in nobody prevented nor did any person ask me for the entrance fee Mr Chambers did likewise. the next morning I was informed that there was something said about the matter I immediately afterwards met Mr. Cameron and told him I would pay the admittance which I have done as I had been misled in the matter and was willing to rectify it if possible, what more could I do what more could any man do these facts are true and I am prepared to prove them therefore I say you have done me every injustice; & I demand and explanation of your conduct

W. H. Wrighton

Jany 1867

Our only explanation is, that we do wonder that the electors of the North Ward would return Mr. Wrighton in preference to a man of the standing of D. W. Dumble, Esq., and we have no hesitation in saying that the Ward has disgraced itself.

We never said Mr. Wrighton was the "meanest man in Town;" but we did say, and we do now say, that it was a "mean act" for a councillor of the Town of Peterboro' to be guilty of. We did not say that Mr. Wrighton raised a disturbance, but that he rushed in without paying, and would have raised a disturbance only that those at the door allowed it to pass off; and the fact that Mr. Wrighton got ashamed of himself next day, and paid the "York shilling," shows that it is no wonder others also were ashamed of this rowdy act of a City Father.

We have no other explanation to offer; our mind is not changed an iota, and we only regret that the people of the North Ward did not know this noble act in time. as we feel assured that if they had, their good sense would have elected the man to stay at home.

We may add that Mr. Dumble did not canvass—indeed did not go to the polling place, as he was from home during the polling day, otherwise we would not have had Mr. Wrighton in the Council during 1867. We trust that his shame will not forsake him for a year, and that no other act of his will bring scandal on our city fathers.

Board of Trustees.

There was a special meeting of the Board on Tuesday evening. Present—The Chairman, Col. Haultain, and Messrs. Cluxton, Lundy, Stevenson, Dumble, Helm, Coulter, and Cameron.

A report from the Principal and one from the Local Superintendent, were received, and at the request of the Board, Mr. Cluxton was requested to communicate with the Teacher to whom the reports referred.

Some accounts were presented and referred, but we could not hear to whom. Some other matters were about to be introduced, but the meeting being for a special purpose, they were deferred to the next general meeting.

Furious Driving.

On Thursday evening last while Mr. Robert Erskine, a frail old man, of Ashburnham, was going home from Town, he was run over by one Edward Hendron, of Dummer, we believe, and severely hurt. The tongue of the sleigh struck him in the back and knocked him down, when the horses and sleigh ran completely over him, breaking his right arm above the wrist, and tearing the flesh and sinews off his hand. He is also severely bruised in the body, neck, and head. In fact the wonder is that he escaped with his life. Hendron was drunk at the time, and although he was told he had killed a man, he just drove on. We hope that the friends of Mr Erskine will not allow this to pass unpunished, and that drunken drivers will be taught a lesson. It has become unsafe to go on the streets here until these sots leave for home. If Hendron is made pay for furious driving, driving without bells, the Doctor's bill for attending on Mr. Erskine, and also for racing over the Bridge, it will bring him to his right mind.

Accident.

Last week, while a Mr. Sedgwick was crossing one of the back Lakes with a span of horses and horse-power of a Threshing Machine, the ice gave way and almost instantaneously swallowed up the Team and horse-power, Mr. Sedgwick narrowly escaped with his life.

Dangerous.

There are two or three bad holes in the Bridge that require fixing. It would be well if they be repaired before some accident occurs. It is easier to put on two or three planks than pay damages if some animal gets through and breaks a leg. Just as we go to press we find a man repairing the bridge.

Advices from Ireland seem to indicate that all fears of a Fenian rising have almost entirely passed away. So thoroughly were the government officials aware of all the ramifications of the abominable plot that they were able to arrest the heads of the conspiracy just before the time when the rising was to take place, and thus prevented it from culminating. Lord Strathnairne and the Lord Lieutenant have both acted with great vigilance and are entitled to the thanks not only of the government, but of all lovers of peace and order throughout the world. The immense force which the British government had at its disposal has been put to the very best use as a preventative of rebellion.

THE ARMY WORM.—This pest is making sad havoc among the wheat and other crops, in various parts of the country, and we are unable to advise as to the best means of getting rid of them; but for the cure of colds, rheumatism, Burns, Cramps, Pains, Neuralgia, and all pains of the body, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is decidedly the best. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, price 25 cts per bottle.

The following address was presented to Mr. W. S. Griffin, late Teacher in the 4th Division of the Union School, on the occasion of his leaving that institution to pursue his studies for the Medical profession. They presented him a valuable book at the same time:

ADDRESS.

Mr. W. S. GRIFFIN,

SIR,—Your Pupils regretting very much that circumstances have made it necessary for you to sever the ties, which for a length of time existed between you and them, have appointed us a committee, to present to you a small token of their appreciation of the kindness and attention you have invariably shown to all under your care, since you entered the Union School as a Teacher.

We acknowledge that our regret arises from selfishness, for in parting with you, we lose a Teacher who has led us imperceptably to ourselves, to love what we before thought irksome, and now, when we were just taking pleasure in our studies under you, we have to separate from you, perhaps never to meet in the same relation

But as it is for your own advancement in after life, you are taking the step which causes our separation, we earnestly wish that you may progress rapidly in your own studies, until you arrive at the highest position in the profession you have chosen for yourself.

To aid you a little in that direction, we now present you with this book, and when you open its pages, it may remind you of your Pupils in the Peterborough Union School. And now, dear sir, while saying "farewell" to you, we hope you may have every success wherever you go, or whatever profession you may engage in.

On behalf of the Boys of the Fourth Division

SAMUEL ENGLISH,
WM. J. JOHNSTON,
WM. WHITE,
FREDERICK HAULTAIN,
C. SAWERS, Committee.

REPLY.

DEAR FELLS,—I beg leave to acknowledge, and accept your kind present, and tender you my most sincere and heartfelt thanks for the respect and affection you have shown me in making it.

Our relation of teacher and pupils has now closed, and though I have looked forward to the approach of this time with a certain degree of pleasure, it was not without an admixture of regret, and this token of your esteem and regard for me cannot fail deeply to increase that feeling.

During the time that I held the position of teacher in the Peterborough Union School, I endeavoured to impart useful knowledge, and if at any time I seemed harsh and unkind, it was the deep interest I took in your welfare that prompted me to that course of action.

Though I now leave you I still take a great interest in your welfare, and earnestly hope to see many of you take high positions in our Schools and Colleges.

Once more allow me to thank you for thus kindly remembering me and let me say that while perusing these pages, I shall ever be reminded of the happy hours spent with you in the Peterborough School.

And now farewell, and that success may crown your every endeavor, is the earnest desire of your former teacher.

Signed, W. S. GRIFFIN, Teacher

MONAGHAN TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Monaghan, Dec. 28th, 1866.

The Council met at 11 o'clock. Present—the Reeve and Councillors Collins, Robson and Dundas.

The minutes of previous meetings were read and confirmed.

The following accounts of sheep killed were given in: James Wallis, $23.00; Chas. Braely, $7.60.

Orders for salaries and accounts were given and left with the Clerk for distribution.

The Assessor having certified that he made a mistake of $60.00 in transferring Robert Tulley's valuation into the Assessment Roll given into the Council, the Clerk was directed to make the necessary correction in connection therewith.

On the motion of Mr. Collins, seconded by Mr. Robson, the sum of $77.35 was ordered to be paid from the Dog Tax as follows:—James Wallis, $36.10; James Brown, $24.25; Richard Lund, $9.50; and Charles Braely, $7.50. But should the Dog Tax fail to meet the above named sums, then the Treasurer shall be authorized to pay to each party before named in proportion to the amount of Dog Tax collected in the Township.—Carried.

The Reeve informed the Council of the union of School Section number four, Monaghan, with number nine, Cavan.

On the motion of Mr. Collins, the Reeve vacated the chair, when the Council unanimously tendered him a vote of thanks for the able and courteous manner in which he had presided over their deliberations during the past year.

The Council adjourned sine die.

COM.

The Ninth Annual Soiree of the North Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society was held at the Town Hall, on New Year's Day, when the place was tastefully decorated for the occasion and presented quite a pleasing appearance.

In the absence of John W. Gilmour, Esq., who was absent from indisposition, Mr. Foster occupied the chair.

The Secretary's report showed some improvement in the affairs of the Society for the past year.

The Rev. Mr. Allen, of Millbrook, addressed the meeting at considerable length. He said he was glad at having another opportunity of renewing his acquaintance with the audience; thought the Society erred in not introducing the female element into their affairs; mentioned the necessity which existed for such Societies and gave advice respecting its future management; took a glance at European and Canadian affairs—especially the Fenian raid; showed that in order to use our privileges aright, we should be educated; that it was a matter of much pleasure that such facilities existed for that object, and concluded an address pregnant with information, amidst the applause of the audience.

Col. Haultain, M. P. P., agreed with all that Mr. Allen had stated; and, in an address of nearly an hour's duration, reviewed some of the more prominent events of the past year, noticing Confederation, contrasting our form of government with that of the United States; showing how much the Society would gain by individual exertion; that all had talents, which might be greatly improved; and that, as far as time would allow him, he would use his best efforts to aid the Society, which he considered deserved encouragement. It required some exertion to get there, but he was glad to meet them on such a festive occasion, and hoped the Society would realize the most sanguine expectations of its founders.

The instrumental and vocal music, under the able superintendance of Mr. and Mrs. Parnell, of Peterboro, assisted very much to enliven the entertainment, and for which they were tendered a vote of thanks.

Rev. Mr. Allen was kind enough to consent to give the Inaugral Lecture, on Wednesday evening, the 16th inst., at 7 o'clock.

The whole was ably joined with the choir in singing the National Anthem, which concluded the proceedings.—COM.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—When last week, I addressed you a few words in exception to some statements made by you in the previous issue of your paper, relative to the re-survey of Burleigh, and the position of the settlers there, I had no thought, as I have not now, of holding any discussion with you—much less, of entering into details respecting the re-survey of that township. For this reason I shall not further refer to the subject here, than simply to state that I hold by the opinions I then expressed—all your law and logic to the contrary notwithstanding. I repeat then, the settlers in the south half of Burleigh may feel at ease regarding their lots, all of which have been legally established. I repeat also, the settlers in the north half of the township have no cause to be troubled about; for the effect of an act of parliament, doubtless will be, not to annul, but to confirm the recent survey. In anticipation of, and in accordance with which I believe all the lots occupied have been selected and improved upon.

As to your allusion to the sayings of certain members of the County Council, I may inform you that, I do not hold myself responsible in any manner or matter to the County Council, or to any member of it; and, without meaning disrespect, I care as little for what members of the County Council say now, as I did for what members of a former County Council said, and tried to do, in the matter of the same survey of Burleigh.

I am, Sir,
Very truly,
JAMES W. FITZGERALD,
Prov. Land Surveyor

Peterboro, 8th Jan'y, 1867.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—As there is a great deal of excitement about gold being found in Madoc, and as in all probability there will be a great rush there in the spring, perhaps a few remarks about the early days of gold mining in California may not be unacceptable to some of your readers.

When gold was first discovered in that country, it caused great excitement; thousands started for the Eldorado. As soon as ships arrived in the Bay of San Francisco, captain, cook and all hands left them to their fate and started for the mines. At first, gold was very easily obtained on the bars and beds of rivers; a tin pan and knife was all that some used—after a while the cradle came in use and then the sluice box. In the early day no one worked for less than an ounce of gold per day; if the claim would not pay that much it was abandoned. I have seen $180 washed out of a single pan of dirt taken from a crevice of a rock. An old man, working by himself, in a short time made $30,000 on the Spanish bar, on the middle fork of the American river. I had only been a few days in the mines, working in partnership with a man from the State of Mississippi, when we found a claim that would pay us about $10 per day, washing our stuff with a cradle; we would not work it, considering it too poor; we sold our claim to another party for a trifle; they cut a ditch and brought in water, and washed the stuff in sluice boxes, and made from $50 to $100 per day to the man—it was a pile claim, but we threw it away not knowing how to work it.—One great reason why so many miners did not make money, was because they wanted to get rich in a hurry, and would not work for reasonable wages but kept running about from place to place prospecting for better claims; it was our own faults if we did not make money in those days in California; in no other country have I ever seen gold so easily obtained. Laborer's wages were from $8 to $10 per day, carpenters and masons an ounce of gold, or $16. Men seemed mad, rushing about from one part of the country to another, as reports came in about new discoveries having been made of some place richer than any that had been found. If money was easily got in those days, many let it go as easily; some miners would lose thousands of dollars at the gambling table in one night. A miner, who had made about $5,000, left the mines with the intention of going home; when he got as far on his way as Sacremento, he went into a gambling saloon, and while there he made up his mind that he would either lose his money or double it, if he lost he would return to the mines, or if he won go home: he lost his all on the turn of a card, and as luck would have it he won and went home like a man.

California at one time was full of the greatest set of scoundrels the world could produce; murders were of every-day occurrence, almost every one went armed with a bowie knife or revolver, in the mines there was no law, but lynch law; to kill a man was not considered a crime, unless robbery was connected with it, but to steal a horse or a mule was punished with death. For this offence ten minutes was all lynch law allowed a man to say his prayers before he was run up to the nearest limb of a tree. No man would take the least insult from another; the knife or pistol generally settled all disputes at once. In one respect peri aps I was of use, it made men cautious how they behaved, and it certainly was a great check on ruffianism. It was astonishing the amount of hardships the miners endured prospecting on the western slope of the Sierra Nevada mountains, crossing deep ravines and mountain ridges, some places to slip a foot was certain death—but the hope of some day realizing our golden dreams upheld us through all. Many a time when I have been tired and weary, when travelling over these dreary wastes, I have been cheered by suddenly coming on some beautiful and rare flower, and such was the exquisite beauty of some of them that the roughest and rudest miner in our company could not help stopping to admire them.

Gold has been found over a vast extent of country On the Pacific coast, from British Columbia in north, to Chili and Peru, in South America. At short intervals it has been found over this vast region; in the east it has been discovered in Nova Scotia, and on the river Chaudiere, in Lower Canada, to the west in the Red River settlement; and last of all, near our own doors, in the Township of Madoc.

Well, looking at these facts, what other conclusion can we arrive at but that that gold will be found in many places scattered about over the vast regions of British America; and who can tell but far richer gold fields may yet be discovered than either California or Australia can boast of. Gold mining is a lottery at best, and but few miners become rich; but there is one certainty about it, if rich gold fields are found it will enrich the country. And even mining need not be such a lottery as it has been if the Government would pass good mining laws granting a good sized claim to prospectors of those who discover a new gold field on Crown Lands. Small claims has always been the ruination of miners. In Australia, at first, 8 feet square was the extent of a claim—After a man had worked out his claim he generally spent all he had made before he could find another that would pay. The Government did all they could to keep the miners from becoming rich; they were afraid if they made money they would buy up the land which they wanted to keep for sheep runs, and not for settlers

It is most likely that the quartz reefs will be found to contain the most of the gold that will be found about Madoc, from the appearance of the country. Quartz is admitted on all hands to be the mother of gold, but how it came there no one can tell. Sometimes it is found in the casing of the stone, and frequently in the solid stone: some suppose electricity may have had something to do with it; at all events, it is strange that all the quartz reefs run nearly north and south, no matter what way the other strata of rocks may be. All the gold that is found in hills or in the rivers has originally come out of the rocks and has been washed down by the floods, as the quartz reefs kept mouldering away One of the surest signs of a good quartz reef is to find fine gold thickly scattered over the stones, and quartz of a blueish white or reddish tinge is generally the richest. It is seldom a reef pays for one hundred yards in length, but some pay to a great depth, and they vary in width from an inch to thirty feet. Quartz mining is of all the most expensive and uncertain, but when you do find a good reef the most lasting and remunerative.

Yours, &c.,

THE Subscriber respectfully informs the Commercial public of Canada and the British Provinces that he has at length succeeded, after yea s of experiment and research, in making a METAL PEN entirely impervious to rust from the acids contained in Inks (especially so when used with Arnold's writing fluid), which for elasticity and smoothness of action over the poorest paper, stands unequalled — Being Electro-Carbonized, they will outlast six or eight ordinary Pens, and are guaranteed not to cut through the thinnest foreign letter paper. The manufacturer feels confident that where the Electro-Carbonized Pens have been tried they will supersede all other makes, and respectfully solicits a trial of them.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Armies, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SELLY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Dennis Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical efforts.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in cases of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

"The Ottawa Citizen,"

Published Daily and Weekly at Ottawa.

I. B. TAYLOR, PROPRIETOR.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1867.

THE "OTTAWA CITIZEN," is the oldest newspaper extant in the Ottawa Valley—in a few weeks it will enter upon the thirteenth year of its existence. The time has therefore arrived when the Proprietor may appropriately offer a few remarks concerning the past and respecting the future. The Bytown Packet, the precursor of the Citizen was first issued in the year 1845, and was continued until 1851, when its name was changed to the Ottawa Citizen. The Citizen has, therefore, under the two names, been published continuously for twenty-two years. Until May, 1855, the Citizen was issued as a Semi-weekly and Weekly Journal, when a change of proprietorship taking place, its publication as a Daily Newspaper, with a Weekly Edition also was commenced. The connexion formed twenty-two years ago by the Packet, with readers and advertisers in all parts of the Ottawa Valley and Central Canada, has been preserved. With the growth and expansion of the population and resources of the Valley, the circulation and influence of the Citizen has gradually increased, and now the extent of the issues of both the Daily and Weekly editions in the Metropolis and surrounding districts is such as to give much gratification to the Proprietor, while it affords the amplest of guarantees to advertisers that their notices will be brought fully before the people. The aim of the Proprietor has been to make of the Citizen, a reliable and faithful medium of general news, and a trusty advocate of correct political principles. He has spared no reasonable expense to provide for the readers of the Citizen the earliest and most reliable intelligence of public events. The Telegraph lines have been unsparingly used to convey an epitome of news from the principle cities in the Province and for the transmission of Reports of important Public Meeting and Demonstrations from the pens of the Citizen's own editorial staff. At the time of the Fenian raids in June last, the Proprietor despatched from his own office two special correspondents, to the scene of danger, one East and one West with instructions to spare no expense in the preparation of reliable intelligence; other correspondents, too were engaged at different points; and it may be permitted in him to doubt whether any newspaper in the Province was better prepared to furnish the public with news from the Seat of War. A prominent feature in the Citizen is the publication every morning of Midnight Despatches per Atlantic Cable, and of other despatches, by the Montreal Line from all parts of the Provinces, wherever occurrences worthy of note take place. The arrangements of the Citizen for the procurement and publication of the Latest Intelligence are such as to place it in the van of Provincial newspapers for enterprise and industry. The Proprietor will aim to maintain the reputation acquired, and will ungrudgingly meet all possible expenditure with that end in view.

Since the formation of the Coalition Ministry, there have been but few party issues in the political world, and the political complexion of even the most extreme of partisan journals has been eclipsed under the influence of the preparatory measures for Confederation. Political leaders have been lost sight of, and the political Lions and Lambs have lain together in the same fold. The year 1867, however, will, no doubt witness a revival of political issues—After the consummation of Confederation, new party lines will be drawn and new and great questions of public policy come before Parliament and the people. To meet these contingencies and issues when they arise, it is the duty of the faithful journalist to make diligent preparation. The aim of the Proprietor of the Citizen will be to meet the new state of things with thorough independence of action freedom from party bias. His efforts in the past are a sufficient guarantee, that, in future, no exertion or expense will be spared to make of the Citizen a faithful public journal, and a reliable medium for general intelligence.

PROSPECTUS OF 'MONTREAL WITNESS'

FOR 1867.

Daily Witness	$3 per an.
Montreal Witness (Semi weekly)	$2 per an.
Weekly Witness	$1 per an.
Canadian Messenger	25c per an.

All strictly in advance, and the papers stop unless subscription be renewed.

On the 31st December, 1866, the Montreal Witness will have completed its twenty-first year, a period sufficient to render its character and object a generally known.

The Witness is devoted to the best interests of the people of Canada, temporal and spiritual. It fearlessly grapples with oppression, infidelity, intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and public evils of every kind. It is connected with no party or denomination, and consequently has no support except from the public, on whom alone it relies. Its various editions are probably the cheapest papers on this Continent; and, though the circulation they have obtained is large, we think it might be, and hope it will be, much larger throughout the Provinces. To this end we rely on the kind aid of the friends of evangelical religion and wholesome literature everywhere, who, we hope, will help us in the future, as many of them have done in the past.

Canada is passing through a crisis in its history; the United States are still convulsed with the struggle for justice and equal rights; the map of Europe is undergoing great changes; Italy is claiming Rome, and Russia again menaces Turkey;—in a word, the times are full of interest, and the Witness gives special attention to the news of the day. It has also an extensive department for Commercial Intelligence and Prices Current, &c., &c., upon which great care is bestowed.

The Messenger is devoted exclusively to Temperance, Education, Agriculture, Science, Art, &c., and consequently goes free through the Post-office.

Any Minister, Post-master, or School-teacher sending for eight subscribers to any edition, will be entitled to a gratis copy. For a mixed list, amounting to eight dollars, a copy of the Weekly or four copies of the Messenger will be sent gratis.

Subscriptions may commence at any time; and as the best season of the year for obtaining new subscribers is probably just after harvest, we hope ere long to have many lists sent in.

All orders, advertisements and communications to be addressed (post-paid) to

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KN

A Farmer killed a sheep, and according to custom, sent his son John to the minister's with a fine shoulder of the mutton as a present. It was rather a long walk and when John arrived at the parson's door he felt a little 'cuckered out.' He pulled the bell—no one appeared. He repeated the summons, with no better success. Then he tried the door, and finding it unfastened, went directly to the kitchen, dumped the meat upon the table, and was passing through the entry on his way out, when, through half-opened door, he perceived the man of God at his table, busily engaged in writing.

Now this John was a nice boy—a good shrewd fellow at a trade, but without culture,—rough as pudding stone, whereas on the contrary, the minister was a gentleman of much refinement—instinctively polite. So when John, his hands rammed into the pockets of a greasy blue frock, a ram-bearer hat cocked rather sharply on his head, while his big round face glowed with the exercise he had undergone, burst upon him, bawling out, 'There's a shoulder o' mutton in yonder for ye—father sent it,' to say the least, a little shocked. Laying down his pen, he said to the boy, who stood staring at him with a pair of blue eyes as large as old fashioned saucers, 'John, you are rather rude; you should cultivate better manners, and be less noisy. Is this the way you generally do your errands? Let me show you how I should present the mutton. Sit here in my chair; I will go and fetch the meat, and you shall hear what I say.' Down sat John in the comfortable chair where, a-reading his cowhide boots out on the carpet, he waited his first lesson on good breeding. Presently he heard a light tap at the door. 'O, don't stand there a knocking,' cried John, 'come in will ye!' The minister entered the room looking as meek as Moses, and holding the mutton in his hand far above the carpet. 'Good morning, sir,' said he, in the blandest voice recognizable, 'a very pleasant morning? How is Mrs —— and the baby, this morning?' John nodded approvingly. 'My father,' continued the parson, 'presents his compliments to you, and begs your acceptance of this shoulder of mutton. My mother desires to be remembered to Mrs —— and yourself, and hopes to have the pleasure of seeing you soon at the farm. Good morning, sir.' With this the parson turned to leave the room, when our hero jumped from his chair and fairly screamed out 'Here, here, stop! stop. Tell your father I'm much obliged to him, and you're a nice little boy—and HERE'S A QUARTER DOLLAR FOR YER.' Will 'Seems' tell us which knew the most, the minister or the boy?—Boston Statesman.

An Irish Blower.—A good story is told of a verdant Irishman who was left in charge of the bellows of the organ in one of the churches while the regular was attending to other duties. Before his return 'Gloria in Excelsis' came in the order of the service to be chanted and Pat was desired to blow. The organist ran his fingers over the keys, but all was silent, 'Blow,' whispered he. 'Blow,' said the leader; but still not a puff woke the slumbering harmony. 'Blow, blast you!' said the choir; but still the organ was as mute as the harp in 'Tara's halls.' An investigation thereupon took place, and Pat was found with both hands holding on to the handle of the bellows, his mammoth clatmout, with one end stuck in his mouth his eyes and cheeks distended, and the perspiration running down his face, engaged in a vigorous but vain attempt to force his breath into the body of the instrument! The bystander could scarcely restrain their mirth, but Pat was speedily put in the way of it, and found the blowing with his hands when compared with the mouth, was very purty exercise.

A Good Moral Character.—In one of our courts one day an Irishman appeared with his papers to become naturalized, and two friends were sworn to answer questions and to vouch for the applicant. One of the vouchers was a red haired child of Erin, and was thus interrogated by the judge:—'How long have you known this man?' 'Known him? All me life, yer honnor, sure we were both raised in Ballyraggin at the same time!' 'Well, how long has he resided in the United States?'—'Ever since he came from the old country, yer honor.' 'How long has that been?' 'Seven long years yer honor.' 'Do you know that he bears a good moral character?' 'To be sure I do; faith he's the boy that can play the fiddle, and he is the prettiest behaved lad at a dance yer honor ever saw.' The court, at this response, could hardly maintain its grave dignity, and turning to the witness with some severity of manner said;—'What do you mean, sir, by moral character?' 'I beg yer honour's pardon; I don't mane the laste harm in the world, only that Terrence, yer honour—' 'Stop sir. What do you understand by a good moral character?' 'What do I understand by a good moral character?' Yes, what do you understand by it?—'O, to be sure, it's goodness itself he is, barrin' the time he tastes the whiskey, for it's going to church he is every Sunday.' The clerk was ordered to make out his papers, and Pat was forthwith Americanized.—N. O. Picayune.

A Generous Churchwarden.—An illiterate personage, who always solicited to go round with the hat, but was suspected of sparing his own pocket, overhearing a hint to that effect, made the following speech:—'Other gentlemen puts down what they thinks proper, and so do I. Charity's a private concern, and what I gives is nothing to nobody.

At the police court an Irishwoman, charged with an assault upon one of her country women, palliated her conduct by saying that she 'never interfered until she was murdered with a poke.'

Ah, Mr. Simpkins, we have not chairs enough for our company,' said a gay wife to her frugal husband. 'Plenty of chairs, dearky, but a little too much company,' replied Mr. Simpkins, with a knowing wink.

A hog fight in Cincinnati attracted great attention. 'That hog has mettle in him,' said a man, pointing to the winner in the contest. 'Pig metal, I suppose,' suggested a punster.

A debtor's jail, as defined by a musician, is a stone instrument, with additional keys, where a man is sent till he can make a satisfactory overture to his notes.

Why is the last day of February like one of Shakspeare's plays?—Because it is winter's tail.

Why is the great Russian bear like a half-starved fox?—Because he's got Hun(g)ry, and wants Turkey.

Poetical.—That's a pretty thought of Jean Paul's who says: 'The moon is a light-house on the abyss of the other world.'

One of the candidates for a country office is named Bowie. He ought to go in like a knife.

They say an oyster about six feet has been taken at Nahant. Who swallows that.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF CONSUMPTION
BY THE
GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY
IN CANADA.

Messrs. Y. & C.—Gentlemen:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but he did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a abl spoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,
THAT THE
GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

This all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Flats, $1. For Sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

We, the undersigned, having entered into an agreement for the ESTABLISHMENT NEXT SPRING OF A LARGE
IMPORTING DRY GOODS STORE
AND CLOTHING MANUFACTORY,
On a far more extensive scale than we have ever carried on before in this town,

Beg to inform our Customers and all Cash Buyers, that
ON THE FIRST OF NOVEMBER
We will commence to sell, in each of our respective stores,
Our Entire Stock of FALL AND WINTER
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
At a Reduction of
FIFTEEN PER CENT UNDER OUR PRESENT PRICES!

This will be an opportunity not to be forgotten.

Our present Stock, in each Store, is over $12,000; part of Ready made Clothing, of the best Cloths and Trimmings, and well made; and every article of this must be sold without reserve before opening the new establishment, which will be entirely on a new style.

For ten years we have been established in Peterborough, during which time we never had the opportunity of offering such GREAT BARGAINS as we do now; so that those who want Ready-Made Clothing, such as Over Coats, Pants and Vests will do well to call before buying elsewhere.

Remember our Stores,

SEWING MACHINES!

GRAHAM & STRATTON
Have been appointed Agents for the County of Peterborough, for the sale of
C. IRWIN & CO'S
Sewing Machines.

These Machines have taken first prizes at the Provincial Exhibitions at Kingston, Hamilton and London, and also a first prize and diploma at the Provincial Exhibition at Montreal, 1865.

C. I. & Co. have got the reputation for making the Best Shuttle Sewing Machines
In Canada; as they have been for the last 12 years in the Sewing Machine business, and connected with the first class manufacturers in the United States, they claim to be thoroughly acquainted with the manufacture and adjusting, and the operating of the best Machines heretofore offered to the public.

These Machines are offered to Tailors, Dressmakers, Milliners, Manufacturers of light Leather work, and to those desirous of introducing into their families a Machine which will give perfect satisfaction upon light or heavy, coarse or fine work, using with equal ease cotton, silk, or linen thread, and having all the attachments required for hemming, felling gathering, tucking, cording, ruffling, braiding, binding, frilling, as well as for plain stitching.

☞ Every Machine is warranted for one year if used with proper care.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1 00 in large bottles, and by Dumas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said, they were there "every time." If he felt "ow-leg" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or in any way oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"* * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"* * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"* * * I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"* * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." "* * * have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some au pair from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1858.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Spavins, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our mules all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Herndon's Express

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using our celebrated Mustang Liniment.

EDWARDS."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and posters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Dennis Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belles? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts per bottle.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do
It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is universally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HELMSTREET, Chemist.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Lyon's Extract of Pure Jamaica Ginger—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. DeRIST'S
Arabian Blood Remedy and Condition Medicine

Is positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Hoarse, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Hoarse clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Poetry.

MAY.

Ah! my heart is weary waiting,
Waiting for the May—
Waiting for the pleasant rambles,
Where the fragrant hawthorn brambles,
With the woodbine alternating,
Scent the dew away.
Ah! my heart is weary waiting,
Waiting for the May.

Ah! my heart is sick with longing,
Longing for the May—
Longing to escape from study,
To the young face fair and ruddy,
And the thousand charms belonging
To the summer's day.
Ah! my heart is sick with longing,
Longing for the May.

Ah! my heart is sore with sighing,
Sighing for the May—
Sighing for their sure returning,
When the summer beams are burning,
Hopes and flowers that dead or dying
All the winter lay.
Ah! my heart is sore with sighing,
Sighing for the May.

Ah! my heart is pained with throbbing,
Throbbing for the May—
Throbbing to the sea-side billows,
Or the water-wooing willows;
Where in laughing and in sobbing
Glide the streams away.
Ah! my heart, my heart is throbbing,
Throbbing for the May.

Waiting, sad, dejected, weary,
Waiting for the May
Spring goes by with wasted warnings,
Moon-lit evenings sun-bright mornings;
Summer comes, yet dark and dreary
Life still ebbs away.
Man's ever weary, weary,
Waiting for the May.

Literature.

ALICE DORIEN,
OR THE EMBROIDERED HANDKERCHIEFS.
BY MRS. ABDY.

A small evening party has assembled in the pretty little drawing-room of a Mrs. Hatfield, a widow of a certain age. The locality was in Bloomsbury; consequently the guests were not denizens of what Jean Paul Richter denominates 'the cold Mont Blanc of aristocratic life,' but they were just as heartless and selfish as if they had been born and bred in May Fair. They were talking with great animation.

Alice Dorien and Charles Cranfield were the friends of half the persons in the room, and the intimate acquaintance of the rest. Alice Dorien and Charles Cranfield had been engaged for three months; the wedding day had been fixed; lawyers and milliners had done their best in their behalf, and now—the engagement was suddenly, strangely, inexplicably broken off, and Alice Dorien and Charles Cranfield 'desired to be better strangers!' No wonder, then, that words flowed free and fast; no wonder that the whist-tables were unoccupied, and that the chessmen stood in undisturbed possession of their snug quiet squares. One very deaf old bachelor, indeed sole fly had hold on a pack of cards, and ostentatiously and repeatedly shuffled them; but when he found that no notice was taken of his manœuvre, he resigned himself to the absence of sympathy, drew his chair to the card-table, and speedily became absorbed in the 'pleasing perplexities' of Patience.

Had any ostensible reason been assigned for the quarrel of the lovers—had they differed in opinion about pin-money, pug-dogs, or the Polka, the subject would have gradually worn itself dry, and the four aces would have come in for their customary share of attention; but the mystery was as puzzling to solve as the deepest of conundrums or most contradictory of charades. Alice Dorien and Charles Cranfield were both remarkable for placidity and evenness of temper: they never quarrelled with other people; why, then, did they quarrel with each other?

'It could not be that there was any difficulty about the marriage settlement,' said the lady of the house, seizing upon the most popular cause of broken engagements; 'It was drawn by Mr. M'Tavish, of Chancery Lane and signed and witnessed last Thursday. I had this fact from undoubted authority. Mr. M'Tavish's nephew by marriage is intimate with a gentleman who is paying his addresses to my first cousin.

'What could an engagement possibly go off about, if it did not go off about money matters?' said a wrinkled, eager-looking old man who had been privately sketched by an intimate friend in the character of Arthur Gride in Nicholas Nickleby!

'Perhaps it went off about some love dispute,' said a very young girl hesitatingly; 'perhaps Mr. Cranfield was jealous, and thought that Miss Dorien showed some preference for a favoured rival.'

'Why,' said her father, a plan downright-looking man, 'I must say that I never saw anything in Miss Dorien's manner that could excite a lover's jealousy; I think she was a model to all young ladies in the prudence and propriety of her deportment.'

'Did you never, Mr. 'ameson,' said a lady next him, 'hear a song which sets forth how a young lady may contrive to

'Peep through the sticks of her Indian fan,
And flirt on a quiet plan?'

'Well,' said Mrs. Hatfield, 'quiet coquetry is my abhorrence; I like a flirtation I acknowledge, but I like it to be carried on in an honest, open, undisguised way.'

Mrs. Hatfield had propounded such a self-evident fact, that her guest could not do otherwise than express an unqualified assent to it. 'But,' said Miss Jameson, who appeared to take a deep interest in the subject, 'nobody can tell on which side the engagement was broken off. Why do you not speak, Mary Moreton? you are an intimate friend of Alice Dorien's and I dare say can tell us more about the affair than any one else.'

Mary Moreton had not hitherto mingled in the conversation for two reasons—she really liked Alice, and therefore had no pleasure in talking over the details of her desertion; and she had for some time been carrying on a covert attack on the heart of the deaf old bachelor, who was a man of considerable property; she had therefore drawn her chair in loving propinquity to his own, and was watching in apparently deep interest the progress of his first game of Patience. 'I am enabled,' she said, 'to assure you that the fault was entirely on the side of Mr. Cranfield. Alice Dorien has always conducted herself in the most exemplary manner, and she cannot recall to her mind even the shadow of a dispute with her lover. Yesterday morning Mr. Dorien received a short note from Mr Cranfield, saying that he was convinced the dispositions and tastes of Miss Dorien and himself were so dissimilar that nothing but unhappiness could be expected in an union, and that he therefore considered that for the sake of both parties it was better to part for ever.'

And Mary Moreton, having delivered her short speech, turned round to the card-table just in time to condole with the deaf old bachelor on the loss of his game of Patience.

'I never could have supposed such a thing of Cranfield,' said Mr. Jameson. 'I should have imagined him much too well principled to have done anything without a good reason.'

'Perhaps there may have been a good reason for his conduct,' said Mrs. Hatfield. 'I have heard of matches going off because insanity has been discovered in a family. I always thought there was something very particular in Alice Dorien's eyes.'

'Particular brightness and beauty, I allow,' said Mr. Jameson.

'After all,' said the old man who resembled Arthur Gride, 'it appears to me that none of you have hit on the real reason which has caused the marriage to go off.'

'What is it?' exclaimed a general chorus, all evidently hoping that a ray of light was about to penetrate the dim obscurity of Mr. Cranfield's inconstancy.

'The young women of the present day,' said the old miser, 'are noted for their extravagance; many a worthy man has been ruined by the expenditure of his wife. Doubtless, Mr. Cranfield saw evidence of a wasteful disposition in Miss Dorien, and wisely thought that he would escape the danger of peeping through prison bars for the greater part of his natural life.'

A silence ensued; little of kindness or good feeling existed in the party; but even they could not find out the remotest cause for accusing Alice Dorien of extravagance. She had been reluctantly, 'that Alice Dorien managed her father's house prudently and economically; I think she understands the value of money.'

'And she dresses with a good deal of taste and very little expense,' added little Miss Jameson.

Mary Moreton, who had just enticed the deaf old bachelor into a game of Piquet, gave brief but decided evidence, between the deals, that Alice Dorien was an excellent accountant and admirable manager: and the miser's conjecture having thus completely fallen to the ground, nobody seemed disposed to hazard a new one and the company soon separated. Some of them dreamed that night about faithless lovers and forsaken maids; the deaf old bachelor dreamed of piques, repiques, and cartrumpets; and Mary Moreton dreamed of playing a long protracted game of Patience, which she won at last, the stake for which she layed being a plain gold ring!

Clever conjectures, like many other things in this world, do not always meet at the time with the appreciation they deserve; everybody had repelled the idea that Cranfield could possibly have broken off his engagement on account of Alice Dorien's extravagance, but yet such was indeed the case; such was the solution of the mystery; such was the 'blue chamber' to which the uninitiated had hitherto been denied a free admission. Cranfield, from a very early period of life, had felt a perfect horror of extravagant women; he was in the law, and his small patrimonial fortune and moderate professional gains only amounted to an income which, prudently managed, would secure every comfort, but which the hand of wastefulness would soon scatter and annihilate.

Usually speaking, men in the middle class of life do not entertain any particular apprehension of extravagant wives, because, in that line of society, extravagance is by no means a common vice, and many a man has passed through life blessed with a mother who pipes herself on the smallness of her weekly bills; a wife who, although, like Mrs. Gilpin, 'on pleasure bent,' like her, possesses 'a frugal mind;' and daughters who turn their dresses, revive their ribbons, and walk on foot to little friendly parties; till, satisfied with the prudent management of his own 'womankind,' he quite forgets that there are any families extant where it appears to be the sole part of the wife to squander, and that of the husband to withhold. Such, however, had not been the blissful ignorance of Cranfield; his mother had been a pretty, elegant, sweet tempered girl, who had suffered under the misfortune of being adopted by a rich, fashionable aunt with a large life-income. At the death of her aunt she became the wife of a man of moderate property, quite ignorant of the duties that she was undertaking, quite unconscious of the kind of life on which she was entering; she was thoroughly oblivious of the simplest doctrines of ways and means; in short, she laboured under a kind of monomania which made her believe that an income of eight hundred a year was fully competent to provide carriages, parties, watering-place visits, an elegant house, full of well-trained servants, jewellery, millinery, and various other necessaries of life. She acted on this principle till she drove her husband to the perilous step of selling out part of his capital, a financial operation which she was not in the slightest degree able to comprehend. She died when her son was twenty years of age, her husband soon followed her to the grave, and Cranfield's birthright of eight hundred a year was reduced to less than a fourth of that sum. He had been too fondly attached to his gentle and affectionate mother to deem her a peculiar example of folly and prodigality; he made up his mind that extravagance was the besetting sin of women, and when his legal gains, conjoined with the interest of his little independence, enabled him to begin 'a search for a wife,' he felt that he should be almost as difficult to be suited as Coelebs in a similar quest. When he was introduced to Alice Dorien, he was not only delighted with her accomplishments and amiability, but thoroughly satisfied with the prudence of her character. I have shown that even her particular friends could not utter a depreciating word when her abilities for thrift and management were canvassed in their presence; and Cranfield, who thoroughly agreed with Dr. Fordyce that 'economy in a wife is the surest way to rivet the affections of a husband,' proposed, was accepted, and revelled in happy anticipations of carefully disbursed sovereigns, and regularly receipted weekly bills. Alice's little fortune was secured to herself; her modest and tasteful trousseau was provided, the pretty presents of her friends and relations were received and admired, and so happy was she that she forgot to lament over one solitary cause of dissatisfaction.

Alice had a distant kinswoman—a rich old lady, who had given her many wax-dolls and picture books in her childhood, and work boxes and annuals in her girlhood, but who had never taken notice of her for the last two years, because Alice had thought proper to refuse a grey-haired, ill-tempered invalid, thrice her own age, who, in consequence of possessing a town and country house and two carriages, had obtained the favor and recommendation of the aforesaid old lady. Alice had written to her, telling her of her intended marriage, and hoping for a kind answer, or perhaps (for human nature will be human nature still) hoping for a present, but neither letter nor present arrived. A week, however, before the day appointed for the wedding, Mrs. Rebecca Dorien, either inspired by benevolence or osteptation (for charity's sake we will hope the former), sent a few lines of congratulation to the bride elect, accompanied by an enclosure of a fifty pound note, requesting that she would expend it in the purchase of any wedding present most agreeable to her own taste. Cranfield anxiously waited to notice how Alice would employ this unexpected donation. Alice had hitherto been an economist; but then her father's income was small and the money allotted for her trousseau very moderate; it remained to be seen how she would act when a sum that was entirely placed at her command. I would not have my readers suppose that Cranfield, with all his veneration for pounds, shillings and pence, expected his affianced one to purchase her wedding gift out the savings' bank; but he certainly expected that it would be laid out in something of tangible value, something that might descend to a future generation as a mark of Mrs. Rebecca Dorien's solitary act of generosity to her young kinswoman. Two days elapsed; Alice had mentioned nothing relative to the fifty pounds, and Cranfield at length resolved to inquire whether she had expended it.

'I laid it out this morning,' replied Alice, with more uncertainty and timidity of manner than was usual to her; for, although perfectly modest, she was generally collected and self-possessed.

'And you laid it out in something very elegant and ingenious, I have no doubt,' said Cranfield gallantly.

'In something very elegant and ingenious?' echoed Alice, looking rather embarrassed.

'Ma'! I not hope to have the pleasure of seeing your purchase?' asked her lover.

Alice left the room, and after wearying Cranfield's patience by her protracted stay, she returned, bearing with her a sheet of tissue paper, from whence she drew two of the most exquisitely embroidered cambric handkerchiefs that had ever figured in a cumation shop! The accurately raised satin-stich leaves, the delicate eyelet-holes, the highly-wrought tendrils—all the Moravians themselves were unequal to such an undertaking—it must have been the work of the fairies! So would a lady spectator have said; but men are singularly indifferent to the niceties of satin-stitch and eyelet-holes; and Cranfield, so far from giving way to any raptures on the beauties of these works of art, exclaimed with a look of mingled dismay and derision, 'And do you actually mean to say that you gave a fifty-pound note in exchange for these two pieces of tortured cambric, which would have been dear at as many shillings?'

Alice faltered forth an affirmative, and Cranfield was about keenly to denounce her folly and extravagance, when morning visitors were announced, and the disenchanted lover hastily returned to his apartments, feeling truly grateful that he was the solitary possessor of them. It would have been impossible for Alice to have laid out fifty pounds more to the dissatisfaction of her admirer; he spoke truly and candidly, not under the influence of momentary irritation, when he said that he considered fine needle-work as nothing better than a means of torturing cambric. Then, too, he reflected that the flimsy fabrics, scarcely more substantial than the bank-note which had been exchanged for them, would not long remain even as they were; they would be surrendered to the tender mercies of the laundress, dropped on staircases at crowded parties, and, perhaps, horror of horrors! replaced from his own limited income. Yes, it was clear that extravagance was the natural characteristic of Alice; it had lain dormant for want of circumstances calculated to develope it, but it had now burst forth with additional force from having been so long kept under restraint; doubtless the mornings of Alice's married life would be spent at Howell and James's, and her evenings in the gay scenes where she might exhibit her ruinous purchases.—Cranfield, to do him justice, was benevolent and kind-hearted, and his economical habits had never prevented him from relieving the wants of the poor to the full extent of his means. Had Alice, seduced by an Utopian advertisement, bestowed her fifty pounds on a newly founded charitable asylum; or had she even in the effervescence of her youthful credulity, given it to a begging-letter imposture, Cranfield would have admired her generosity, although he might have wished to have seen it exercised on a smaller scale; but could anything be more utterly, more contemptibly selfish than the purchase she had made? Othello himself was not more berated by the fatal voice of a handkerchief than was Cranfield; his dreams that night constantly depicted to him Alice employed in the act of dissolving pearls in vinegar, and lighting tapers with bank-notes, and in the morning he resolved on sending to Mr. Dorien the letter of which the substance was related by Mary Moreton at Mrs. Hatfield's party.

Mr Dorien, fond of his daughter, and proud of her, lavished divers complimentary epithets on Cranfield, and said that 'his insolent letter was not worth the honour of a reply,' and that 'it would be best to treat him with silent contempt.' Alice Dorien shed bitter tears in private, but she had much quiet self control; she exerted herself to seem cheerful and composed before her father and friends, and in a few weeks the sudden and dangerous illness of her kind father gave her a legitimate cause for sorrow, and she felt that it would be lawful to appear publicly with red eyes without giving her own little world room to assert that her heart was breaking under the infliction of her willow garland.

Two years had elapsed since these events; Alice Dorien had lost her father after an illness of some months' duration, through which she had attended on him with the most patient and unremitting devotion. After his death, which did not affect her pecuniary resources, she complied with the request of some relatives, that she would take up her abode in the retired and beautiful country village where they resided.

Cranfield still remained unmarried, yet he was very tired of his single blessedness, and had made several ineffectual attempts to fall in love, but none of the objects of his pursuit presented such a combination of attractions as Alice Dorien had done.—Economical house-wives did not touch the piano, accurate accountants did not care for picture galleries, and the students of cookery books were quite at fault in talking of the modern poets and novelists. Accomplished, elegant girls were as plentiful as roses in summer; but although all of them were evidently capable of spending an income, none of them seemed properly versed in the way of economising it. When Cranfield heard of the death of M. Dorien, he fully imagined that Alice, after giving a few months to seclusion, would start upon fashionable, spending the capital of her little fortune in a twelvemonth, and either ensnaring some wealthy dolt at the end of it, or retiring into obscurity, perhaps as the pensioner of the rich spinster whose fifty pound present had developed the latent extravagance of her nature.

About a year and a half after M. Dorien's death, Cranfield met with an old friend of his childhood, whom he had not seen for many years, and who it appeared was residing with his family in the same village as Alice Dorien. Cranfield inquired after her, but merely as he would have done of a common acquaintance, and his friend (an old married man, and therefore an impartial judge) spoke of her in the highest terms; her goodness, steadiness, consistency of character, self-denial, and kindness to the poor rendered her, he said, a pattern to all young women. Cranfield heard this character in silence surprise; such indeed was the Alice Dorien of former days, but the embroidered handkerchiefs—those tremendous, although tiny ensigns of prodigality, seemed perpetually to unfold themselves and wave before his startled sight; true, they appeared to be a solitary instance of extravagance, but then should not this transgression have been followed by repentance? Why had not Alice written to him, confessed her fault, and taken the shame with joy?'

About this time, Cranfield received a letter from a friend of his own age, a young clergyman who had lately become a married man, and was all anxiety to introduce to Cranfield the model of feminine perfection in the person of his wife. 'She had not wealth, or position in society,' he wrote: 'she occupied the station of an humble companion when I first met with her; but my income is sufficient for every moderate comfort of life, and my dear Isabel is a paragon of good management and frugality; come and stay a few days with me, and judge for yourself of the attractions of my pretty vicarage and delightful wife.' Cranfield accepted the invitation; he was desirous of again seeing Darnley, and felt an instinctive persuasion that he should like his chosen Isabel. His expectations were fully realized; Isabel was not only lady-like, sensible, and prudent, but although far inferior to Alice in personal charms, there was something in her manner and deportment which seemed to recall the latter to his mind.

Cranfield, since the adventure of the embroidered handkerchiefs, had felt an increased dislike for the 'busy idleness' of fancy work. Isabel, during the first three days of his visit, was engaged in working for a poor family, and her employment met with his cordial approbation; but the homely garments were at length finished and sent away, and Isabel produced an elegant little work-box, and drew from it a delicately filmy and elaborately ornamented piece of cambric. Cranfield looked at it; the satin-stich leaves and minature eyelet-holes awakened painful associations in his mind. Isabella was working a handkerchief very similar to those purchased by the imprudent Alice.

'Perhaps, Mr. Cranfield,' said Isabel, 'you will think that I am wasting my time in this minute and tedious work (Cranfield allowed her supposition to pass uncontradicted), but to embroider a handkerchief must always be a tempting occupation to me since I connect the idea of it with the most interesting period of my life.'

'How so?' inquired Cranfield listlessly, supposing that Isabel was about to tell him of the brilliant success of some of her exquisite needle-work at a charity bazaar.

(To be continued.)

The population of Chicago is now estimated at 220,000. In the spring of 1831, there were but twelve families residing on the site now occupied by the city.

THE FENIAN FIRE.

The above is no myth, as the so called Greek fire was thought by many to be.—On the contrary, it is highly probable that the Greek fire known to have been used on several occasions in the late American war, and the formidable preparation which has obtained the name of Fenian fire, are of similar composition. It is not unlikely that some rabid American Fenian having ascertained what were the principal ingredients of the Greek fire manufactured this compound and introduced it to his brother Fenians as a fit mode of warfare to be adopted by themselves. It is a solution of phosphorous in bisephide of carbon. The peculiar properties of the former are well known, while those of the latter, as being a comparatively recent chemical preparation, are not generally understood. The bisulphide of carbon is a highly inflamable liquid, colorless and almost transparent, giving off fumes of sulphurous acid when burnt. It volatilizes very rapidly at ordinary temperatures, and when its vapour is mixed with air and a light applied it inflames with a slight explosion. Its vapour is poisonous.—The phosphorus dissolves readily in the bisulphide of carbon at the temperature of the latter is slightly raised. A few weeks ago the Liverpool detectives seized, as they were being removed from a house in that town, three boxes, each containing fifteen jars or cans of phosphorus. In each jar were twenty sticks of phosphorus, each stick being at least 6 inches long and 2 inches in circumference. Several bottles of the compound of phosphorus and bisulphide of carbon have also being seized, as well as some bottles of the latter without the phosphorus dissolved in it. These bottles were all of the same size and shape, were quite full, and held about three pints; had short necks and small mouths, and were made of green glass, probably having been manufactured for the purpose, as their shape was somewhat peculiar. Several experiments have been made at different time to test the properties of the compound. On one occasion one of the bottles was thrown against the centre of a high wall. A loud explosion followed, and the concussion and exposure of the fluid by the bottle breaking were sufficient to ignite its contents and a flaming fluid streamed down the wall, evolving dense fumes of an irritating poisonous nature. A stream of water from the large hose, which had previously been placed in readiness, was immediately directed against it, but some gallons of water had to be poured upon the wall before the flame was extinguished; and even some hours afterwards, when the day was darkening, a glimmering light was observed on the wall where the fluid had been, doubtless giving off by the phosphorus, which had remained adherent, so highly charged with that substance was the fluid. It was further found that the compound ignites most rapidly when used in small quantities, spread over a large surface, and freely exposed to air; therefore, when poured upon cotton, tow, and similar materials, it ignited instantaneously.—The Lancet.

IS STEPHENS A HUMBUG.

In our telegraphic news from Ireland we have the interesting announcement that General Millen, President of the Fenian Military Council of Ireland, has been denouncing Chief Organizer Stephens as a 'humbug' and 'rascal.' It seems, therefore that the Fenians in Ireland have even less confidence in Stephens than have those of the United States. In Absolom Stephens own illustration as to whether he is a humbug and a rascal or not. In his speeches here he said, substantially, 'If I do not open the war in Ireland before the close of the present year, call me a humbug and a rascal.' He will be measured here by his own standard. If the telegraph shall bring us the news that Stephens commenced the war business to-day—the last day of the allotted time—the Chief Organizer will receive all due credit for patriotism and honesty. But if the old year should go out without the fulfilment of the promise, of course the appellation of 'humbug and rascal' will be likely to find an object. It has been hinted—more than hinted—that the Chief Organizer is not in Ireland, but that he is in New York under an assumed name, and that he lives in luxurious retirement up town, on the proceeds of his industrious labors for the cause of Irish liberty. It has been reported also—by malicious persons, no doubt—that the Chief Organizer has all along been devoting his time to organizing a nice bank account. Such imputations, however, are the lot of all distinguished patriots. In the time of the American Revolution there were Americans who accused Washington of complicity with the British, and it is not strange that there should now be men who denounce Stephens. All this is wrong. The Fenians should wait until twelve o'clock to-night—the end of the year—and then if Stephens shall have failed to come to the scratch it will be time enough to denounce him as a 'humbug' and a 'rascal.'—*N.Y. A FISH STORY.

About the strangest thing we ever heard of occurred here on last Friday, 2nd inst. Mr. Schoelhurst, a well-known citizen who lives in a small frame house near the depot, went fishing to the light-house dock with a couple of friends. The luck did not seem very good, as but one black bass and a few perch were all that had been captured, and the interest in the sport naturally began to flag. While Mr. Schoelhurst was examining his watch, a very fine one, to which a black ribbon and seal were attached, his line being left carelessly in the water, a sudden heavy jerk that nearly took the fish pole from his hand, so startled him that in trying to grasp it with the other hand, in his excitement he somehow let go of his watch, which struck his knee and bounded into the water, his line (though a very strong one), parted at the same instant with a snap. Regret, though naturally indulged in to some extent, were useless, as the party continued fishing a couple of hours after the accident, and then rowed homeward, with a light string of fish, Mr. Schoelhurst's ill luck having followed him so persistenly that he had actually caught nothing. When nearly back to the starting point they were overtaken by a fishing boat, and being ashamed of exhibiting their "catch" to their friends, as unlucky fishermen always are, they concluded to buy a few fish to add to those honestly caught, agreeing not to tell tales on each other as to the manner they were obtained—Mr. Schoelhurst purchasing an eight pound black bass and three small ones. As he was carrying the fish home he thought he saw something sticking in its gills, which on closer inspection proved to be a fish-hook that very much resembled the one he had lost in the afternoon, and it was with a kind of savage joy that he anticipated eating the prime cause of his ill luck; but strange of all, upon cutting the fish open he found his watch, which had not even stopped ticking.—Erie (Pa.) Dispatch.

The Confederation Delegates.

The London Canadian News of Dec. 13 says:—The several delegates from Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick appointed to arrange the terms of union of those provinces in one confederation, have organized themselves into a conference. The conference, as we have already stated, is composed of the following gentlemen:—The Hon. Messrs. Macdonald, Cartier Galt, M'Dougall, Howland, and Langevin, from Canada; the Hon. Messrs. Tupper, Henry, Ritchie, M'Cully and Archibald, from Nova Scotia; and the Hon. Messrs. Mitchell, Wilmot, Tilley, Fisher, and Johnston. They commenced their meetings on Tuesday, the 4th inst.; the Hon. John A. Macdonald, of Canada being chairman, and Colonel Hewitt Bernard, the secretary of the conference. The sittings of the delegates take place daily at the Westminster Palace Hotel. We have reason to know that, notwithstanding a few divergent opinions on some of the minor points of detail, the utmost harmony prevails, and there is not now a shadow of doubt that the conference will arrive at a conclusion eminently satisfactory not only to the British North American provinces, but also to the mother country. Confederation may now, in short, be regarded as an infant accomplished.

AMERICA IN MINIATURE.—A great national park is to be established in Washington. A correspondent says that it is proposed to make the park a "working model" of the United States; "to delineate, if not to reproduce in minature, the topography of the continent; to set Huron and Ontario in reduced scale upon a living map some two miles long, not in water colors, but in the element itself; to lead a tiny Mississippi, from its baby nursery in the Rocky Mountains, of real rock, trough a little continent to a small Gulf of Mexico. The St. Lawrence and the Colorado, and all other great rivers are to be represented by mimic streams; and without intending any allusion to the exclusion of the States lately in rebellion, all the States and Territories are to be represented, preserving their relative position and proportion It is proposed that museums shall be erected upon each of these little representative tracts, and that the States and citizens shall be invited to contribute to their cabinets specimens of the natural and artificial productions of the States represented."

FENIANS.—The Stephens branch of the Fenian Brotherhood has had a grand burst-up. The Chief Organizer, who, it seems, has been lurking in New York, while his dupes believed he was on Irish soil, ready to head a glorious campaign against British power, has been denounced by the Fenian rueles as an "exploded humbug," and has retired from the management. A "General" Gleeson has been named as his successor, to endeavour to continue the delusion a little longer, but the shame has been thoroughly exposed, and any further efforts to draw money into the exchequer must more futile. The Fenian circles of the Roberts denomination will be apt now to take a hint from the action of the Stephens circles, and there can be but one result,—the stammering of President Roberts also as an "exploded humbug." Fenianism, both in Ireland and America, is on its last legs, and the world will have a happy riddance, when this monstrous progeny of selfish craft and fanatical gullibility is consigned to its grave.—Witness.

MARRIED BY MISTAKE.—It is said that a couple in Detroit, Mich., were married by mistake the other evening. Two couples went to the church, one to get married the other to act as groomsman and bridesmaid. They all stood up before the altar, and the officiating clergyman supposed that both couples were to be married, requested the gentleman to join hands with their respective ladies, which was done, and it a very short space of time the four were made two. The situation being fully realized by the latter couple, they concluded to except what they could not very well help.

The following question is said to have created tremendous excitement before the Hord-crable Debating Institution:—What is the difference between there being conscience enough in all women, and women enough in all conscience? After three weeks' discussion, the president decided there was a difference, but wherein it consisted he was quite uncertain.

Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railwsy and Mining Company.

The good people of Cobourg are at work again. They have completed arrangements with American capitalists, and are now surveying the new line to Marmora. The following items we copy from the Sun:—

We have now much pleasure in stating that a bargain has been made with the American Capitalists. The entire stock of the Marmora company was $600,000. The Pittsburg company have paid the bal. disc. sum of $59,000 in cash and subscribed for $430,000 of stock. Mr. Barstad of Quebec takes $140,000. The Corporation of Cobourg is also relieved from the payment of the $50,000 of debentures deposited a year ago in the Court of Chancery by the town authorities in accordance with the recent act.—The entire value of the road was fixed by one act at one hundred thousand dollars, the whole of which has been assumed by the American Capitalists and will be paid in due course. As a result of these negotiations, the Cobourg and Peterboro Railway Company, and the Marmora Company, have, in accordance with the provisions of a recent act, been amalgamated, and a new company formed, called "The Cobourg Peterborough and Marmora Railway and Mining Company."

When the American Capitalists arrived here on the 28th December last, a meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the Town Trust was held at which it was agreed to reduce the wharfage on iron ore to ten cents per gross ton of 2240 lbs., and binding their successors in office to keep the rate at the figures for the next seven years. At a subsequent meeting, the time was enlarged to ten years.

The first work to be done consequent on the new arrangement was the survey of the line of railroad to be constructed from the mines to the Trent river at the place known as the Narrows. Messrs. J. H. Dumble, W. Burk, and John Dauntry with an able staff of assistants have already undertaken this work and are now engaged in it.

The company have by act of Parliament authority to run branch lines into the surrounding townships were minerals exist, and it is impossible now to estimate, perhaps to overestimate the amount of trade which may thus be opened up, and for which under the new arrangement, Cobourg will be the natural outlet.

Nothing has been done thus far in connection with the revival of our connection with the town of Peterboro'. That will probably remain in abeyance, but it is hardly possible if complete success attends the other scheme, that an effort will not be made to complete the Bridge over Rice Lake and renew our trade with Keene and Peterboro', although it may be some time before that is accomplished. If the people of Otonabee and Peterboro desire a speedy re-union, they will, we fancy, have to assist themselves to to bring this about.

FENIANS.

The Fenians that were not tried some time ago are now before the courts.—Those that were heretofore convicted have had their death penalty commuted to confinement for twenty years, and it is altogether likely that will be the fate of the whole. In consequence of this being the generally received opinion, the trials do not create so much interest as they did when McMahon and Lynch were tried. The result of the trials will not be satisfactory to the general community at the present as if those convicted had received their due. Yet, on the whole, after calm and dispassionate consideration in the end the public will be better pleased with the action the Imperial Government has taken than with the shedding of their blood, no matter how guilty they may have been. It has been asserted that if they got off the volunteers would throw down their arms. We don't believe that they will do any such thing. The loyalty and patriotism of our volunteers are not of so whimsical a kind that they will be put off or on for a single action. Besides we do not believe that they are so fond of blood that they would wish to see the blood of so many poor drunken dupes poured out. They no doubt feel that the blood of their brethren in arms was shed at Ridgeway without cause, and that blood still cries for vengeance, but vengeance will be satisfied in the twenty years incarceration of the criminals.

Fenianism is but a thing of a day. It was cruel, insatiable and devilish, in fact of Satan, and must come to nought, and that in amongst themselves; Stephens has sold them. Their hopes are not attainable, their cause is not of God, but of the evil one, their object is not liberty, but oppression, and would, it is believed, end in persecution and massacre. How could such a people prosper? Ere the green flag would float over Ireland one year, the nations would have to interfere for the sake of humanity. Fenianism never will prosper.

Trouble Ahead for the United States.

It does appear difficult to teach our neighbors across the lakes a little reason. So wild are they over their little party squabbles that it is well if they do not induce greater troubles than even the past. Instead of setting to work to heal the breach between the North and South, every year, almost every day, is making it wider. They now appear inclined to impeach President Johnson with a view to deposing him. On January the 8th Mr. Loan, in the House of Representatives, read a speech arraigning the President for acts of his administration, and suggesting that he was privy to the assassination of President Lincoln, and setting forth that the price he was to pay for it, was treachery to the Republic and fidelity to the party of treason. How this may terminate few can tell.

Municipal Elections.

MINDEN.—The poll on the 7th instant, resulted in the election of S. S. Peck, Esq., as Reeve, and Messrs. Baker, MacDougal, J. Sanderson and Mitchell, as Councillors.

SMITH.—Francis Peck, Esq., Reeve, and Messrs. Lott, Otto, Logan and Newell, Councillors.

DYSART.—John Lucas, Esq., Reeve.

STANHOPE.—James Melville, Esq., Reeve, and Messrs. Fitzsimonds, Beattie, Brown and Jones, Councillors.

ASPHODEL.—At the late election held to test the strength of those who aspired to municipal honors, P. M. Grover was elected Reeve by a majority of 17. Walter Scott, jr., was elected Deputy Reeve. The successful aspirants for Councilmen are—J. A. Buck, James Stevenson and John Welsh.—According to agreement, therefore, the old Council has only to appoint these men, which may have been done, for aught we know, ere this.

GALWAY.—The old Council has appointed Mr. Probert, Reeve; and we learn that they also re appointed the old men as Councillors.

There has appeared a letter in the Montreal Gazette, over the signature of "A Citizen of Irish origin," which lays the grave charge against the St. Patrick's Society, of Montreal, of being a Fenian society. It appears that at a late concert of this Society, the National Anthem was omitted in the programme, and was only played while the company was retiring, and that several persons hissed during the performance. Several cheers were also given for "Old Ireland," "The Ladies," "The Mayor," &c., but none for "The Queen," or "Governor General." The Hall, also, was decorated with disloyal mottoes. Mr. McGee did not attend it.

Russia and Rome.

The Cabinet of St. Petersburgh has officially announced a rupture with Rome, and declared itself freed from all ecclesiastical conventions, which had hitherto bound it with regard to its Russian Catholic subjects. Those concordats are now announced to be null and void.

Municipal.

The members elect for Councillors for 1867, meet on Monday next at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of organizing, and afterwards they may proceed to any necessary business. At this meeting in towns, the Council has to determine the order of each member's retiring from office, and this is to be by ballot. The clause referring to this is as follows:—"At the first meeting of the Council of every city and town, elected after the passing of this Act, it shall be determined by ballot, under the direction of the Clerk, which of the members shall retire in the first, second and third year, respectively, and the term of office of each Councillor or Alderman shall cease according to the result of such ballot."

Correction.

In giving a report of the prisoners that had been in the Jail for 1866, we made a mistake in taking the entries as referring to 1866 only. It appears that under the heading of "number of times committed," the entries referred to the individual committed, not to time, and hence it should read:—

Number committed 1st time		52
"	2nd "	5
"	3rd "	2
"	4thener "	9

We hopeI to be able to give the whole and daily cost of the Jail for the year 1866, but on application found that those items are not made out.

Dreadful Accident.

A dreadful accident occurred in Cobourg, resulting in the death of Mrs. Cockburn, mother of the Hon. John Cockburn, Solicitor General West. As Mrs. Cockburn was writing a letter and while standing up to fold it, her dress took fire from a grate and before any effectual assistance could be rendered, her body was so badly burned that all hopes of her recovery were abandoned. She lingered in great agony till Tuesday evening about seven o'clock, when death ended her sufferings. Mr. George E. Cassels, her son-in-law, a whose house she was at the time, was so badly burned in trying to extinguish the flames that he is confined to his bed.

Minden.

We are pleased to find that the good people of Minden are still living and able to enjoy the festive seasons as they return. A communication in another column will be read with interest by all by whom the Examiner is received, as it shows that the rocks and stones of the back country have not wholly petrified the hearts of the good people of that section. They do not forget the little ones yet. Many joyful seasons may they have.

Insure Your Property.

All parties not feeling secure in reference to the safety of their property would do well to call on Mr. Jas. A. Hall and get it insured. He is agent for some of the best companies. Although to do so will not save it from fire, yet to know that he has something to enable him to rebuild, will quiet his mind in case of fire.

Fire.

On Tuesday night a small dwelling occupied by Mr. Barchard, situated a little south of Capt. Rubidge's residence, was consumed by fire; cause, accidental.

Teachers desirous of getting examined, will do well to remember that there will be an adjourned meeting of the Senior Board of Instruction, for this County, at Bobcaygeon, on the 25th inst. In all probability in the School House in the Village, if it can be obtained.

It becomes our painful duty to chronicle the decease of Col. S. Strickland, another of the old settlers of this part of the County.—Mr. Strickland has been a resident of Canada for 42 years, during the early part of which period he, no doubt, witnessed some of the difficulties of new settlements. He, however, lived long enough to also witness the clearing up and improving of the County, at which he did considerable, and now, the place that was, at the time he settled here, a wilderness is a fruitful field. Mr. Strickland was highly respected by all who knew him, and leaves a large family connection and numerous friends to mourn his decease.

"THE VOLUNTEER'S REVIEW."—We have received the first number of the Volunteer's Review and Military and Naval Gazette, a paper published in Ottawa, having for its object a system of naval defence for British America, and to afford through its columns a medium for the discussion of questions of interest to the military force of the Province. It is neatly printed, contains 16 pages of reading matter, and gives evidence of considerable ability. It will, no doubt, be patronized largely by the military force of the country. It has our best wishes for its success.

The Cobourg people are considerably elated on account of their success in obtaining co-operation towards building a branch Railroad in connection with their own road to Marmora. We are also glad that success has crowned their efforts. Cobourg has spent thousands on a road that, at present, pays nothing. We trust that this new enterprise will amply repay their toil and cost. Their energy, enterprise and indomitable perseverance deserve to be repaid by an abundant prosperity for Cobourg.

Statement of Revenue and Expenditure of the Province of Canada for the month ended 31st December, 1866.

Revenue:—Customs		$283,519 88
	Excise	138,415 78
	Inl. Stamp Duty	14,156 78
	Post Office	15,131 27
	Crown Lands	200,787 29
	Miscellaneous	146,097 84
	Total	$798,108 84
Expenditure		$461,282 77

Still we may have a deficit at the end of the year; strange things can take place before the end of the fiscal year.

Head Centre Stephens, it is said, has resigned his position, and Gen. Gleeson is appointed in his stead. Stephens is reported to be in New York. One thing is certain, he has not gone to Ireland to commence the war for the liberation of his country. His wife is in Ireland and dresses as fine as any lady, at the expense of poor Irish dupes.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

LINDSAY.—Mr. Lacroix is elected Mayor; Mr. Needler, Reeve; and Mr. Lemon, Deputy Reeve, for 1867.

THE FENIAN PRISONERS.—The sentence of death against the Fenian prisoners in Toronto has been commuted to 20 years in the Provincial Penitentiary.

The total stock of wheat in store in New York on the 7th inst., is reported as 1,741,629 bushels; of corn, 2,822,307 bushels; oats, 2,451,492 bushels.

The Quebec and Ottawa papers are now discussing the probabilities and improbabilities of making Quebec the seat of Government under Confederation.

The Brockville Recorder records three fires in Brockville the first on Saturday night, second Monday morning, and the third on Wednesday morning last.

A cable dispatch of the 7th ult., represents the situation in Spain as serious. The Spanish government was taking great military precautions against a threatened outbreak.

An English letter says:—The Hon. John A. Macdonald has gone over to the Eternal City to spend the holidays. Gossip says the Attorney-General West is fishing for a baronetcy.

NEW YEAR'S GIFT.—On New Year's eve, a deputation of ladies and gentlemen of Port Hope waited on the Rev. Dr. Short, Rector of that place, with an address and $221.60 as a new year's gift.

LONDON, Jan. 15, evening.—The ice on the lake in Legent Park broke through today while crowded with skaters—over two hundred persons were precipitated into the water, and thirty were drowned.

THE EFFECT OF AN ICE JAM.—A jam of ice in the river at Belleville has so dammed the water in the river that a part of the town is inundated, several cellars well filled, and numerous families forced from the lower to the higher regions of their dwellings.

The Directors of the Ontario Bank have purchased the building lately occupied by the agency of the Bank of Upper Canada, Port Hope, and Mr. John Smart, late agent of the Bank of Upper Canada, has been appointed agent of the new branch.

During the evacuation of Rome by the French soldiers, a correspondent says that several Italian beauties were ready to go with them, and they were permitted to go to the station, where they were placed in a coach by themselves, but just as the train started some hard-hearted official uncoupled the coach and left the dears behind.

At a meeting of some of the leading citizens of the Red River Settlement, held on the 8th December, resolutions were passed in favor of Confederation with the other British North American Provinces, and a committee appointed to draft a memorial for public signature, to be forwarded to the Imperial Government, setting forth their views.

Mr. Kennedy the Scottish Vocalist is doing a great business in New York. A New York paper says:—"Mr. Kennedy gives the last of his present series of delightful entertainments at Steinway Hall this evening.—The crowded and intelligent audiences Mr. Kennedy attracted on previous nights, gave him good and substantial assurance of the high place he has won in the regard of the lovers of Scottish singing in New York.

The Chronicle says the negotiations are going on between the Government and the authorities of the Laval University, for the purchase of the University building. The price asked is $800,000. The transaction has given rise to the speculation that the intended purchase is not with a view merely to getting buildings for the Local Government, but that there is an idea of making Quebec, instead of Ottawa, the capital. The Canadien discredits the story in the Chronicle of the Conservation.

The Auditor-General, Mr. Langton, gives the following statement of Provincial notes, in circulation on Jan. 2d, 1867, and specie held against them at Montreal and Toronto, according to the return of the Commissioners under the Provincial Note Act: Provincial Notes in circulation, payable at Montreal $1,975,307; payable at Toronto, $1,146,693; specie held at Montreal, $438,000; at Toronto, $292,000. Debentures held by the Receiver General under the Provincial note act, three million dollars.

AN ASYLUM FOR THE POPE.—Rumour has it some time ago that the Island of Malta had been offered to the Pope as an asylum, in the event of his Holiness having to leave Rome; some doubted it however. But now, it appears to have had some foundation, as there has been some communication between the French Government and Lord Stanley upon the subject. The French Emperor believes it would be a reproach to Catholic Europe that the Pope should have to obtain an asylum from a Protestant Potentate, and the odium would particularly fall on France as the withdrawal of the French troops would be considered the immediate cause of his flight. It is now rumoured that although the offer is not withdrawn, it is intimated to his Holiness that it is hoped he will not accept of it. The Emperor still claims to be the protector of the Holy Father.

Mr. McGee has a letter in the Gazette this morning, in which he states that, having received from the Globe the name of its Montreal correspondent, an "Englishman," he is unable to trace him out. The name furnished was that of "James Pearce, 41 Dorchester street west, Montreal." There is no such name in the Directory, and not only so, but, on driving to 41 Dorchester street, he found a little wooden shanty occupied by Thomas Cross, laborer. No such person as James Pearce resided there; or was known there, or in the neighborhood. It it turn out that the "Englishman" cannot be found by the Globe, any more than by Mr. McGee, the fierce controversey on the subject, which has raged during the past month between the Minister of Agriculture and the late President of the Council, will have been a case of "great cry and little wool." Mr. McGee insists that Mr. Brown, in order to clear himself of complicity in the matter, shall place the original letter of the "Englishman," and that in which he gives a false name and address, into the hands of a Montreal detective.—Witness, 12th inst.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Saturday last, Archibald McArthur, of South Bay, Fenelon, got his arm caught in the gearing of a sawing machine, lacerating it in such a manner that on Dr. Martin being called in he considered amputation below the elbow necessary. That gentleman, assisted by Dr. Bonnells successfully performed the operation. The patient is now doing well.—Victoria Warder.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, Jan. 14, 1867.

The Council met agreeable to adjournment.

Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Wrighton, Stevenson, Doherty, Ewing, Ormond, Millar, Cox, Hamilton and Chamberlen.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and after some discussion were confirmed.

Petitions were read from Mrs. Doris and Leon Carsse, asking for remission of their taxes; the former as a widow, and the latter as under age.

From Wm. Hogan and Mrs. Cardiff, asking for assistance from the Council. The last petition and that of Mrs. Doris were referred to the Mayor for action; that of Leon Carsse and Mr. Hogan were laid on the table.

Mr. Ormond, as Chairman of the Committee on Finance and Assessment, read and submitted the following as the final report No. 13, of said Committe:—Your Committee on Finance and Assessment in making their thirteenth report for the year 1866, beg to submit the following, not only for the information of the Council but also for the information of the rate-payers generally, a report of the Receipts and Expenditure of the whole year placed under their different heading, as correctly as can be ascertained, which is as follows:—

Your Commitee were anxious that a full statement of receipts and expenditures for the year should be submitted to the Council, from the circumstance that three out of four of the Finance Committee having determined to retire from the Council, they thought it the more requisite that every publicity should be given during their year of office. Your Committee have done all in their power to leave as small a debit as possible to their successors, as circumstances would enable them to do, and they consider that with the money (about $3,000) now in the hands of the Treasurer, the deficiency will be but small.

From the Report of the Auditors, there appears to have been a deficiency at the commencement of the year, of $3,294. Your Committee consider that amount should be reduced $1,500 for the Harvey Road; that sum has not been assessed, consequently remains for their successors to collect, it it should be required.

Your Committee would further state that their are accounts for law expenses for the year, and also two or three other small accounts, which were not brought in and entered in time to be included in this Report.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) CHAS. ORMOND,
Chairman.

The Report was received and adopted.

Mr. Chamberlen, as Chairman of the Special Committee, appointed to report upon the Communication of the Warden, in reference to the Bridge across the Otonabee River, read and submitted the following Report, which was received and adopted:—

The Committe to whom was referred the letter from the Warden of the County and the County Clerk, beg leave to report that they have diligently enquired it to the matter recommended by the Road and Bridge Committee, of the County Council, but can not find any document by which they can arrive at the just proportion which the Town should pay for the repairs of the Otonabee ridge. They find that the Government built the bridge, without any cost whatever to the County, with the intention of collecting toll when finished: but, from some cause and upon certain conditions, the Bridge was given to the Council free.

All of which your Committee respectfully submit.

Moved by Mr. Ormond, seconded by Mr. Millar,—That the resolution passed at the last meeting of the Council, by a majority of the members, in reference to abatement of Mr. Chisholm's assessment be hereby rescinded, in accordance with the advice obtained from Mr Dennistoun on the matter.

In amendment it was moved by Mr. Cox, seconded by Mr. Ewing,—That the Council do now adjourn.

The amendment was put and carried and the Council adjourned.

Minden Sunday School Party.

The Church of England Sunday School children, of Minden Village, with minister, teachers and friends met to enjoy mutual pleasure on Wednesday evening, 2nd January. The Rev Fred'k Burt Solomon Eastman, S. S. Peck, H Andrew, Esqrs., and their ladies had made ample arrangements for the gratification of the youthful members of the Church, including a Christmas Tree, bearing from its pending branches many a fruit to please a child's eye and heart. The ladies had also decorated the common schoolroom with evergreens, &c, adding to the delights of the evening. Mr. H Andrew and Mr. E. Peck churchwardens, were both there, with instrumental music to cheer and vary the festive scenes. At 6 o'clock the ball began. The bright-eyed ecstant juveniles were filling their places, friends were busy, as the well-spread lengthening tables testified, Sunday School hymns were sung until the call for tea was heard when 30 children were regaled by the kind preparations of open-hearted friends. "Grace" was sung, and all being well satisfied the little ones took a short recess.—Then, they seated on the one side of the room the adults sat down to be pleased in their turn. Now came the time for mental and vocal exercises wisely, anxious parents and teachers listened now to a tiny one reciting her piece, then to the boy of some 10 summers in his turn.—Mrs Benjamin Eastman rehearsed, famously, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," Mr Peck giving interludes by special request on the violin. A very good "recitative," from which many a good hint could be learned, was spoken and sung, Mr Peck accompanying. The hours of the evening bids well inscribed away, more serious emotions engaged the attention. Mr S Eastman, in a few words addressed the scholars, Mr S. S Peck and Mr H. Andrew also. Then came the demolition of the Christmas Tree—each child, from a teacher's hand, receiving a present from the tree at the call of his name from the clergyman's list. Mr S S Peck now took the chair, and singing was heard from the elder children. Rev. Mr. Burt gave the final address. "Three cheers were given for the Queen," and all were calmed by the singing of the children's evening hymn, Mr H. Andrews leading as the Harmonicon. The parting blessing was given and all prepared for home, nothing having occurred to mar the joys of the evening.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I think such despicable and base conduct as is openly, and with the most unblushing effrontery, practised by certain parties in connection with the Museum at Niagara Falls, should be often exposed, that the public may discountenance them. I read you article in last week's paper, copied from the Globe, headed another base outrage at the Falls, and am anxious that my additional testimony to the entire truth of this most atrocious system of swindling, by lying, should be made public. My wife and self visited the Falls in March, 1865, and experienced an exactly similar treatment to that which Mr Weir and wife received, and for which there is no redress. I hope the public will take warning and expose such atrocities as much as possible.

I am, sir,
Yours,
EDWARD E CHAMBERLAIN.

Smith, C. W., Jan. 14th, 1867

The Papal Government at Rome, though on its last legs, evinces no abatement of its intolerant, persecuting spirit. A cable telegram from Rome states that an interdict has been laid by the Papal authorities on the continuance of religious services in the Scotch Protestant church in that city. It is said they threaten to put a stop also to the services held in the American chapel. Will the Christian nations of England and America submit to this violation of the religious rights of their citizens?—Witness.

Brigham Young has been blowing up two or three of his congregation, for their habit of whining at their lot. He says they expect too much from the saints. For his part, he would sooner pack off all his wives and go to heaven alone, than take such a whining crew with him.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY

IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, a corroborative of the general approval given to DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

Prescott, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,

ALFRED HOOKER.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful sickness occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

"The Ottawa Citizen,"

Published Daily and Weekly at Ottawa.

I. B. TAYLOR, PROPRIETOR.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1867.

THE "OTTAWA CITIZEN," is the oldest newspaper extant in the Ottawa Valley—in a few weeks it will enter upon the nineteenth year of its existence. The time has therefore arrived when the Proprietor may appropriately offer a few remarks concerning the past and respecting the future. The Bytown Packet, the pre-cursor of the Citizen was first issued in the year 1845, and was continued until 1851, when its name was changed to the Ottawa Citizen. The Citizen has, therefore, under the two names, been published continuously for twenty-two years. Until May, 1855, the Citizen was issued as a Semi-weekly and Weekly Journal, when a change of proprietorship taking place, its publication as a Daily Newspaper, with a Weekly Edition also was commenced. The connection formed twenty-two years ago by the Packet with readers and advertisers in all parts of the Ottawa Valley and Central Canada, has been preserved. With the growth and expansion of both population and resources of the Valley, the circulation and influence of the Citizen has gradually increased, and now to the extent of the issues of both the Daily and Weekly editions in the Metropolis and surrounding districts is such as to give much gratification to the Proprietor, while it affords the amplest of opportunities to advertisers that their notices will be brought fully before the people. The aim of the Proprietor has been to make of the Citizen, a reliable and faithful medium of general news, and a steady advocate of correct political principles. He has spared no reasonable expense to provide for the readers of the Citizen the earliest and most reliable intelligence of public events. The Telegraph lines have been unsparingly used to convey an epitome of news from the principle cities in the Province and for the transmission of Reports of important Public Meeting and Demonstrations from the pens of the Citizen's own editorial staff. At the time of the Fenian raids in June last, the Proprietor despatched from his own office two special correspondents, to the scene of danger, one East and one West with instructions to spare no expense in the preparation of reliable intelligence; other correspondents, too were engaged at different points; and it may be permitted in him to doubt whether any newspaper in the Province was better prepared to furnish the public with news from the Seat of War. A prominent feature in the Citizen is the publication every morning of Midnight Despatches per Atlantic Cable, and of other despatches, by the Montreal Line from all parts of the Provinces, wherever occurrences worthy of note take place. The arrangements of the Citizen for the procurement and publication of the Latest Intelligence are such as to place it in the van of Provincial newspapers for enterprise and industry. The Proprietor will aim to maintain the reputation acquired, and will unsparingly meet all possible expenditure with that end in view.

Since the information of the Coalition Ministry there have been but few party issues in the political world, and the political complexion of even the most extreme of parties in Canada has been eclipsed under the influence of the preparatory measures for Confederation. Political issues have been lost sight of, and the political Lions and Lambs have lain together to the same fold. The year 1867, however, will, no doubt witness a revival of political issues—After the consummation of Confederation, new party lines will be drawn and new and great questions of public policy come before Parliament and the people. To meet these contingencies and issues when they arise, it is the duty of the faithful journalist to make diligent preparation. The aim of the Proprietor of the Citizen will be to meet the new state of things with thorough independence of action freedom from party bias. His efforts in the past are a sufficient guarantee, that, in future, no exertion or expense will be spared to make of the Citizen a faithful public journal, and a reliable medium for general intelligence.

'MONTREAL WITNESS'

FOR 1867.

Daily Witness ..... $3 per an.
Montreal Witness (Semi weekly)..... $2 per an.
Weekly Witness ..... $1 per an.
Canadian Messenger..... 25c per an.

All strictly in advance, and the papers stop unless subscription be renewed.

On the 31st December, 1866, the Montreal Witness will have completed its twenty-first year, a period sufficient to render its character and objects generally known.

The Witness is devoted in the best interests of the people of Canada, temporal and eternal. It fearlessly grapples with oppression, infidelity, intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and public evils of every kind. It is connected with no party or denomination, and consequently has no support except from the public, on whom alone it relies. Its numerous editions are probably the cheapest papers on this continent; and, though in the circulation they have obtained is large, we think it might be, and hope it will be, much larger throughout the Provinces. To this end we rely on the kind aid of the friends of evangelical religion and whole some literature everywhere, who, we hope, will help us in the future, as many of them have done in the past.

Canada is passing through a crisis in its history, the United States are still convulsed with the struggle for justice and equal rights; the mass of Europe is undergoing great changes—Italy is claiming home, and Russia, pacific menaces Turkey;—in a word, the times are full of interest, and the Witness gives special attention to the news of the day. It has also an extensive department for Commercial Intelligence and Prices Current, &c., &c., upon which great care is bestowed.

The Messenger is devoted exclusively to Temperance, Education, Agriculture, Science, Art, &c., and consequently goes free through the Post-office.

Any Minister, Post-master, or School-teacher remitting for eight subscribers to any edition, will be entitled to a gratis copy. For a remittance, amounting to eight dollars, a copy of the Weekly or four copies of the Messenger will be sent gratis.

Subscriptions may commence at any time; and as the best season of the year for obtaining new subscribers is probably just after harvest, we hope everyone to have many lists sent in.

All orders, advertisements, and communications to be addressed (post-paid) to

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, safe and nearly painless method

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay required, until the cure is complete. The instant a cancer is discovered, it should be cured as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is no danger in any case, as everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eyelid or elsewhere, or small wart or a sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No fee required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Peterborough, November 21, 1866. 47

"I shall never forget," said a lady one day to me, "my first, and I think I may justly say, my last theft." I entreated her to tell me the circumstances, which she did; and I will try to tell them to you as nearly in her own language as my memory will allow.

When I was between seven and eight years old, I went to a day-school in the neighbourhood; and nearly every morning, on my way there, I used to step in at Mrs. Bennett's, to see her little girl, Lizzie, the dearest little thing that I ever knew, about three years old.

One morning I found Mrs. Bennett making a dress for Lizzie of the most beautiful calico. I thought it the prettiest that I had ever seen. I had read of fairies, princes, and gems, and I thought it must have taken six of each of them to have composed and created such a lovely fabric. I wished I had a piece of it to put in a patch-work quilt which I was making; but did not like to ask for any.

Oh, how pretty it was! The longing grew intense. Mrs. Bennett's back was turned. I picked up a three-cornered piece from the floor, and hid it in my bosom.

In two or three minutes I was on my way to school, every now and then looking at my beautiful calico, and thinking how cleverly I had managed to get it. But all at once it struck me that I had stolen it! and I began to feel unhappy. At school I couldn't attend to my lessons; there seemed to be great lumps in my throat, and the tri-cornered piece of calico in my bosom felt as if it were piercing me with every point.

My teacher asked me if I felt sick. I was going to reply "Yes," but fortunately I thought in time: "No, I will not tell a lie, besides stealing." So I answered that I felt very well.

She very kindly told me to go out in the playground for a little while. Oh, how I wished she had not been so kind. I said to myself, "If she only knew what a wicked girl I am, would she speak to me again?"

I went out, and determined to get rid of the calico; but where was I to put it?—Everybody would be sure to see it. I spied a hole in a post, and thought that that would do for a hiding-place. I squeezed it in, and fancied that I felt happier; but the bright and beautiful colors haunted me yet. The children would see it. I must find some more secure place. I got it again, and tried to chew and swallow it. But it would not do. Oh, how wretched I was beginning to feel!

On my way from school, I had to cross a bridge over a running stream of water, and there I thought I could get rid of it. I threw it over, and watched it slowly floating along. Now it whirled in a little eddy; and now came swimming back again.

Would it never float out of sight? and if it did, where would it go? Wouldn't it be sure to float right in front of some one who would know that it was Mrs. Bennett's calico, and that I had stolen it?

While I leaned over the bridge, and watched it with all the agony of childish remorse, it caught against the root of a bush which grew upon the bank. Yes, there it stuck, where every one would see it. I was sure they couldn't and wouldn't see anything else. I heard wagon-wheels coming—coming toward the bridge.

I felt certain that Mrs Bennett was in that wagon, and all my uncles, and aunts, and playmates, and every one that knew me. They would all see the calico, and know I had been stealing. I climbed over the bridge, at the risk of breaking my neck, crept down the bank, and hid until the wagon had passed.

When all was quiet, I came out of my hiding-place and tried to reach the calico; but my arm was too short. I took of my shoes and stockings. Oh, if any one should see me now! With a desperate effort I reached the calico. But what should I do with it, now I had got it? While putting on my shoes and stockings, I determined what to do. I ran along toward home. I reached Mrs. Bennett's. She was sitting near the open window. I opened the gate, went up to the window, threw in the piece of calico, and was running away, when she called after me:

'Sarah, my dear child, what ails you?" I hardly dared to turn back; but she called again. I went in slowly.

"Why, Sarah, what is the matter with you? you look quite pale. What did you throw the piece of calico in the window for?"

"I stole it," said I, desperately expecting that she would look horrified, and tell me never to come into her house any more; that she couldn't have such a wicked girl play with her dear little Lizzie. She put down her work, laid hold of my hand, drew me toward her, put her arm around me, and said pityingly, "My poor child!"

I had not shed a tear all the day, but my head felt as if it would split, and my throat ached. Those three words opened the flood-gates of my poor little heart. I leaned my head on her bosom, and burst into tears. "Sarah, dear," she said, as she held me close to her, "tell me all about it."

I did tell her, and my heart grew lighter and lighter. When I had finished, she said, "I am sure I need not say a word to add to your sorrow; you have suffered enough to-day, and I don't think you will ever be tempted to be dishonest again.—Take some of these pieces of calico, and put them in your patch-work, and whenever you see them, remember this day.

My children sleep under the quilt now, and it is an unfailing monitor.—A Mother.

Never Tell a Lie.

How simply and beautifully has Abd-el Kader, of Ghilon, impressed us with the love of truth, in a story of his childhood! After stating the vision which made him entreat of his mother to go to Bagdad, and devote himself to God, he thus proceeds:

I informed her of what I had seen, and she wept: Then, taking out eighty dinars, she told me, as I had a brother, half of that was all my inheritance; she made me swear, when she gave it to me, never to tell a lie, and afterward bade me farewell, exclaiming, "Go, my son; I consign you to God; we shall not meet until the day of judgment."

I went on well till I came near Hamadai, when our Kafilah was plundered by sixty horsemen. One fellow asked me what I had got.

"Forty dinars," said I, "are sewed under my garments."

The fellow laughed, thinking, no doubt, I was joking with him.

"What have you got?" said another.

I gave him the same answer. When they were dividing the spoil, I was called to an eminence where the chief stood.

"What property have you got, my little fellow?" said he.

"I have told two of your people already," said I. "I have forty dinars sewed in my garments."

He ordered them to be ripped open, and found my money.

"And how came you," said he in surprise, to declare so openly what had been so carefully concealed?"

"Because," I replied, "I will not be false to my mother, to whom I promised I will never tell a lie."

such a sense of duty to thy mother at thy years and I am accessible at any age, of the duty I owe to God? Give me thy hand, innocent boy," he continued, "that I may swear repentance upon it."

He did so. His followers were struck with the scene.

"You have been our leader in guilt," said they to their chief; "be the same in the path of virtue."

And they instantly, at his order, made restitution of the spoil, and vowed repentance on his hand.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats, coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system. at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Pints, $1.

SEWING MACHINES!

GRAHAM & STRATTON

Have been appointed Agents for the County of Peterborough, for the sale of

C. IRWIN & CO'S

Sewing Machines.

These Machines have taken first prizes at the Provincial Exhibitions at Kingston, Hamilton and London; and also a first prize and diploma at the Provincial Exhibition at Montreal, 1865.

C. I. & Co. have got the reputation for making the

Best Shuttle Sewing Machines

In Canada; as they have been for the last 12 years in the Sewing Machine business, and connected with the first class manufacturers in the United States, they claim to be thoroughly acquainted with the manufacture and adjusting, and the operating of the best Machines heretofore offered to the public.

These Machines are offered to Tailors, Dressmakers, Milliners, Manufacturers of light Leather work, and to those desirous of introducing into their families a Machine which will give perfect satisfaction upon light or heavy, coarse or fine work, using with equal ease cotton, silk, or linen thread, and having all the attachments required for hemming, felling gathering, tucking, cording, ruffling, braiding, binding, frilling, as well as for plain stitching.

☞ Every Machine is warranted for one year if used with proper care.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume sick-bed, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so"—"Exactly I"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "owley" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or in study oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins equare and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"• • • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"• • • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"• • • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"• • • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union House School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. KELLY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts per bottle.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do.
It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are compound of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, allowing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Poetry.

MUSIC AND MEMORY.

Yes! it was after long long years,
I sought my home of youth;
And almost blinded by my tears,
Found that fair shrine of truth.

I wept o'er all the past—I wept
To think how time had sped,
While my dim soul had idly crept
Like a worm amid the dead.

Now on a weed—now on a flower—
And pausing but to taste
The perfumed poison of each hour,
Amid the wide world's waste.

The memories that thus returned
Soothed not my bursting heart,
For bitter recollections turned
Each to a venomed dart.

And Conscience like a spectre guest,
Darkened the sultry air,
Hiding the shrines of peace and rest
That once I worshipped there.

With shame and sorrow on my brow,
I bowed before my home;
As well, perhaps, my tears might flow
As on a rock the foam!

There was not one to see my grief,
Or my despair to trace;
As with a gesture wild and brief,
I left my dwelling place.

I dared not cross that threshold pure,
Where saint-like feet had trod;
For those who shadowed last that floor,
I knew were with their God.

But, as reluctantly I turned
With lingering steps along,
My startled heart within me burned:
I heard an ancient song—

A wild and mournful strain, once sung
By lips that now were cold;
As in my gushing tears up-sprung
From feelings fount of old.

Each tone that through the twilight came,
Seemed fraught with angel force,
To heal the blistering wounds of shame,
And quench my soul's remorse.

Welcome that sad and plaintive air;
It summoned me from earth,
And promised to my heart's despair
A new and glorious birth.

ALICE DORIEN,

OR THE EMBROIDERED HANDKERCHIEFS.

BY MRS ABDY.

'I feel much inclined to tell you the story, said Isabel, 'for it is a pleasing though a sad one.'

Somewhat released by hearing that it was to be a sad one, Cranfield expressed his thankfulness and Isabel proceeded.

'Family troubles and [illegible] had little interest for a stranger, and I will therefore briefly say that the death of my father left my mother and myself entirely dependent on a small income ceasing with her life, quite insufficient for even the moderate wants of two persons. My mother's health became impaired; she wrote to a [illegible] requesting his assistance; he enclosed her a bank-note of small value, and hinted that it would be desirable if I were to seek for some means of maintaining myself. This I could not persuade myself to think on, when I recollected the rapidly declining health of my dear mother; besides, my accomplishments were on a very moderate scale, and I trembled at the idea of coming into competition with the advertising nonentities of the Times. However, even before my uncle's letter arrived, I had thought of a mode by which I might improve our slender finances. I was very skilful in fancy work, I knew that embroidered handkerchiefs were much prized by the belles of fashion, and I resolved to work several, not doubting that I should be able to dispose of them at a high price [illegible] I had scarcely, however, completed my second handkerchief when I was called to the trial of parting from my dear mother. Unwillingly I wrote to my uncle; it was necessary to conciliate his good offices. I was not only penniless but very much in debt. He returned me an answer written in a tolerably kind spirit, and enclosed me a cheque on his banker, which he said would be amply sufficient to pay for funeral expenses and mourning; of other debts he knew that I could have none, my mother's annuity and his own recent present having been sufficient to defray all the charges of sickness. He desired that I should arrange all my affairs and come to his house in the country without loss of time, as he foresaw that he might have a speedy opportunity of placing me as a companion with a lady of wealth and respectability. Alas! the cheque that my uncle evidently deemed so liberal, was quite insufficient for the demands caused by long illness; it scarcely defrayed the funeral expenses. My mourning, the [illegible] due to our medical attendant, and the accumulated rent of our small apartments, rose before me in a fearful phalanx. At length I joyfully recollected the handkerchiefs, and took my way to a celebrated warehouse, fully satisfied that I should dispose of them for a large sum. I will not weary you by an account of my disappointment at this and similar establishments; suffice it that I bent my weary steps homewards, still in possession of my handkerchiefs, and with an aching heart and sorrowful countenance. I had nearly reached my own door, when I unexpectedly encountered a favorite schoolfriend, of whom I had lost sight of for several years. Alice Dorien accosted me with the kindest sympathy, my deep mourning had led her to anticipate my loss; she accompanied me home, and I decided to her all my trials and difficulties. She looked at the handkerchiefs, and sat some little time in apparent deliberation. 'Will you trust me with them?' she said at length.—'Perhaps I can secure you a purchaser.' 'Most willingly,' I said, and deposited them in her care. After her departure, my spirits felt a little revived, yet I did not venture to be too sanguine. I imagined that Alice Dorien had probably wealthy friends but he sum which would extricate me from my embarrassments was so considerable that I feared she might not speedily meet with any one disposed to expend so much on articles of mere trifling ornament. The next morning however, my doubts and fears came to an end; dear Alice remitted me a bank-note of fifty pounds as the value of my handkerchiefs!'

'Noble, generous girl!' exclaimed Cranfield, involuntarily.

'After writing to her my earnest thanks,' continued Isabel, 'I defrayed every debt that I owed, and repaired to my uncle's house well dressed, and in possession of a trifle for [illegible] expenses. He received me with kindness and in a few weeks placed me in the situation to which he had alluded in his letter. The lady in question was a maiden lady of his own, and was indeed, as he had represented her to be, wealthy and respectable. I cannot say much more in her favour; however, she did not, like some patronesses, sentence me to solitary confinement while she enjoyed the pleasures of society, but allowed me to mix with her guests. Among them was my beloved Darnley; he sought my heart and gained it, and our marriage was honoured with the full consent of my uncle, coupled with a hint that he did not mean to forget me in his will. My early cares thus merged in my present happiness, can you wonder that I associate familiar and delightful images with the sight of an embroidered cambric handkerchief?'

'And Alice Dorien,' asked Cranfield, 'what do you hear of her present situation?'

'I have never seen her,' replied Isabel, 'since the solitary interview which I have detailed to you, but I have exchanged several letters with her. She, like me, has suffered from the loss of a parent, but she is in easy circumstances, is resident in a beautiful village, and beloved and respected by all who know her. I heard a report that she had been deserted by a contracted lover, who professed to say that her disposition was not congenial with his own; but I own that I am sceptical on this point. I can scarcely believe that any man would be weak and worthless enough to cast such a treasure from him.'

'Do not doubt it longer,' exclaimed Cranfield, in uncontrollable agitation; 'you see before you the false lover of Alice Dorien; and the generous deed to which you have so touchingly referred, was the cause of our separation.'

Darnley, who had entered the room just in time to hear this speech of his friend, stood transfixed with astonishment, and Isabel dropped her needle, and evidently considered that her visitor's senses were disordered. Cranfield was determined to make no half-confidences; rapidly and energetically he poured forth the whole history of his desertion of Alice Dorien. Isabel was deeply affected; she now for the first time became sensible of the extent of her obligation to her generous friend; she had imagined that Alice had successfully disposed of the handkerchiefs to some favored daughter of affluence; she little imagined that Alice, from her [illegible] means, had contributed so munificent a sum; still less did she imagine that the noble girl had paid for them the far more costly price of her prospects of wedded happiness

'You have deeply and bitterly wronged dear Alice Dorien,' Isabel said; 'but take comfort—reparation is in your power.'

'And to promote it,' said Darnley, with a smile, 'I am quite ready to" speed the parting guest." Cranfield, you must seek out the residence of Alice, and make your peace with her; can you not invent an excuse for visiting your friends who live in the same village?'

Cranfield remembered that his friend, in the postscript to a letter which he had received from him on business, had given him a general invitation to his house, which he forthwith resolved to convert into a particular one.

The succeeding evening he arrived, an unexpected guest, at one of the best houses in Alice Dorien's very pretty village; astonished his friend, alarmed his fair wife, electrified the cook, and awakened divers hopes in the minds of the three unmarried daughters of the family. These hopes, however, were very soon annihilated; for on the ensuing morning Cranfield inquired his way to the cottage of Alice, declining all companionship in his visit to her. Alice was sitting in a neat pretty little parlour, full of the tokens of elegant and busy occupation; books work, writing, drawing materials, an open piano—all betokened that if Alice still suffered from the troubles of love, it was not more in idleness. Disappointments of the heart render some people slothful and indolent, but dispose others to increased activity and energy; you may wear your willow, like your rue, 'with a difference.' Alice looked excessively surprised when Cranfield was announced; but in a moment she regained her self-possession, and received him with freezing politeness. Cranfield, however, was not disposed to lose a moment in his vindication of himself; the names of Darnley and Isabel were instantly pronounced, and prepared her for what was to follow.

'And now, dearest Alice,' said Cranfield, after forgiveness had been accorded to him, 'tell me why you did not vindicate yourself from the suspicion of extravagance? Why did you not at once tell me your reason for purchasing the embroidered handkerchiefs which have been the cause of so much disquietude between us?'

'You allowed me no time to do,' replied Alice, with a smile. 'I did not wish to become the immediate chronicler of my own charitable deed; but had we not been suddenly interrupted by visitors, you would probably have uttered some very severe strictures on my prodigality, which I should have been able immediately to refute; you did not however, give me any opportunity of doing so; your letter, rejecting my hand, contained no specific accusation against me; you merely spoke of general incompatibility of habits and tastes; no instance of dissimilarity was particularized; what more, then, could I do than clear your desertion with all the fortitude I could command? It would have been degrading alike to the dignity and delicacy of woman, if I had come forward and requested to be furnished with a categorical list of all my failings and short-comings.

Cranfield agreed to everything she said, and blamed himself so bitterly, and asserted so positively that he was quite unworthy of such a treasure as Alice, that it was really moving to listen to his self-deprecation. This deep humility, however, did not hinder him from urging that Alice would name an early day, from whence the aforesaid undeserved bliss was to date; and Alice, after a little hesitation, complied with his request.

'Well,' said Mrs. Hatfield to Mary Moreton, as they returned from paying a wedding visit to Mr. and Mrs. Cranfield, 'I should like to know by what legerdemain the cards have been shuffled into their proper places again—our friend Alice seems to be as happy and contented a bride as if her engagement with Cranfield had never been broken off.

Mary Moreton, who was not quite so good tempered as she had been two years before, having failed in her attack on the deaf old bachelor, replied in rather a sphenetic tone, 'I am very much surprised at Alice's want of spirit; broken vows may be cemented, like broken china; but it will require a vast amount of care to prevent a second fracture. Then Cranfield has the character of being a good deal too fond of money; the house and appointment assumed all in a very ordinary style, and Alice was a very plainly-attired bride.'

'Expecting the beautiful embroidered handkerchief that she held in her hand,' said Mrs Hatfield, 'did you not remark it, Mary?' I was delighted with the elegance of the work; depend upon it that it was Cranfield's gift to her; she never would have purchased it for herself.'

'That may be the case,' replied Mary; 'when miserly people make gifts, they are always unnecessarily profuse; such a handkerchief appears to me quite out of keeping with the usual style of Alice's requirements.'

The newly-married couple soon after dined with Mrs Hatfield, and Alice bore another handkerchief in her hand, quite as magnificent as the former one. Her friends soon grew tired of admiring the twin-handkerchiefs, and saying that they were much out of place in her modest wardrobe; but she never failed to rejoice that she possessed them. Cranfield was very dull in understanding the mysteries of dress, he constantly confused glace-silk with satin, lace with blonde, and muslin with barege; but 'one particular species of vanity' was always sure to interest—he never omitted to recognise and to welcome his wife's Embroidered Handkerchief!

The Poor Author who Cheated his Appetite.

In Leipsic lived a poor young man who supported himself as best he could by writing for the public press. Sometimes he earned so little that he was almost starving and never did he succeed in getting even a tolerable living. One cold stormy night he sat in his garret writing, rolled up in an old cloak to try to keep some heat in his shivering body. His work had to be sent in early the following morning, when he hoped to be paid for it in time to get some breakfast, and in this hope he wrote on, although neither dinner nor supper had strengthened him.

Presently a pang of hunger shot across his inner man, and caused his pen to rest for a moment.

"Be con ent, stomach," he cried; "let me but finish, and thou shalt have some bread."

Again he wrote on for some time, but another twinge made him suddenly pause

"Good stomach," he said, "be at ease; I shall soon have finished, and then shalt have some juicy beefsteak to recruit the."

With a grimace he took up his pen, and continued his writing until the sharp gnawing of hunger became almost intolerable.

"What," he cried, "canst thou not be quiet, O trouble some stomach? Have I not promised thee that thou shalt be fed? Take comfort, I am nearly at the last page, and after that is written thou shalt have a chicken and tomato sauce."

Again his busy pen flew over the pages until he arrived at the last word, when, flinging it on the table, he made a bound into bed, exclaiming, "Ha, stomach, thou art cheated! Not a bit shalt thou have, thou greedy thing!" and, rolling his cloak about him, he soon forgot his hunger in sleep.

The Hundredth Generation.

—For the benefit of those who discuss the subjects of population, war, pestilence, famine, &c., it may be as well to mention that the number of human beings living at the end of the hundredth generation, commencing with a single pair, doubling at each generation (say in thirty years,) and allowing for each man, woman and child, and average space of four feet in height, and one foot square, would form a vertical column, having for its base the whole surface of the earth and water spread out into a plane, and for its height 3,674 times the sun's distance from the earth! The number of human strata thus piled one on the other would amount to $460,790,000,000,000.—[Sir John Herschel.

It is not to be wondered at that authors are sometimes a little irritable. It is not surprising that in their exasperation at the critics, they are sometimes tempted to take a hint from the poet in the Spanish fable, whose manuscripts were devoured by mice, till at length he put some corrosive sublimate into his ink and was never troubled again.

A singular innovation was made at a funeral in Paris the other day. Instead of a laudatory discourse in honor of the individual interred, one of his friends read extracts from a newspaper article in his praise.

THOUGH an honest discharge of one's duty may for the time, offend those it opposes, yet it will at last be justified and admired even by the very men who suffer from it.

THE ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

The natural history of the Indian Peninsula, especially of the animal and vegetable world, affords subjects deserving the attention of all educated men who have leisure time upon their hands and opportunities for investigation. There is a vast field of inquiry here open to all. The early history of the human race—of man in pre-historic times—is a subject now exciting considerable interest amongst the scientific world.—India has already made some contributions to the general stock of knowledge on the matter, but a great deal more still remains to be done. If the old belief, that Asia was the cradle of the human race, is true—and there seems to be no good reason for doubting it—then we ought to find some evidence of it in the remains of man's handiwork in the countries adjacent to that of his supposed origin. Now, India is proved to be covered with the burial places of a people who were unknown to the Hindoos, who lived and died probably long before the commencement of Hindoo Chronology. We know that such a race must have existed, because we find their burial grounds scattered over the length and breadth of the land. Their iron spear heads, their hunting knives, and even the ashes of their dead are still recognisable amid the debris of the cairns which have been examined, yet this is about all that we do know of them. As to the time in which they lived all history is silent. Similar remains have been found, in almost every country of the civilised world. It is certain, however, that man existed for some time upon the earth, before he discovered the uses of iron ore.—It has been clearly proved by geologists that the first implements of offence and defence, constructed by man, were of a material which he must have found ready to his hand—hard stone, flint, bone &c.; that after a time, metallic substance, which required only a low heat to melt them were employed in the making of their weapons; this period being represented by what Sir C. Lyell speaks of as the "age of bronze." So that, in fact, the cairns and country, belong to a period much more advanced than that of which we have evidence, of man's existence in other countries. A proof of the antiquity of man in the country, was given some few years ago by Mr. Theobalds, of the Geological Survey, who discovered in India a number of polished stone implements, hatchets, arrow heads, &c., which were supposed to belong to the latter period when men could afford the leisure to smooth and polish the hard substances they employed as weapons. Within the last month or two, an important discovery has been made in our own Presidency, which goes to show that, in these primitive times, the human race had overrun a good part of India. Messrs King and Foote, of the Geological Survey, we understood, have found "stone implements" of a rough and evidently primitive kind, over a wide tract of country. These implements are mostly of the arrow-head pattern, though some are hatchet-shaped, and they are made out of the hardest material this part of the country affords, namely, quartzite. Many of them are so roughly hewn, that unsuspecting observers might very naturally come to the conclusion of Topsy, that they "growed," in the shape and form in which they now appear. These implements have been found not only on the surface and in water channels, but overlain to a considerable depth by soil and gravel. We have reason to believe that a full account of this discovery will shortly appear in one of our local scientific journals. Some persons may be inclined to ask, "Cui bono?" What does this supposed discovery lead to? Does it go to prove that man has lived longer upon the earth than theologians would of? We answer, it proves nothing as to the actual age at which man first appeared. The discovery is important, in that it corroborates the evidence already collected in Europe, that man did, in his earliest history, make weapons of stone, then of bronze, and then of iron. It proves too that the race was widely distributed, even at those remote days, but how many thousands of years have aged since these rude instruments were fashioned by human hands, nobody can tell.

We must wait patiently, and accumulate more facts before we can be in a position to speculate upon this important question.—Overland Athenæum and Statesman.

ACTS OF LOVE.—Each one of a thousand acts of love costs very little by itself, and yet when viewed altogether, who can estimate their value? What is it that secures for one the name of a kind neighbor? Not the doing of half a dozen great favors in as many years, but the little every day kindness, neither of which seems of much consequence, considered in itself, but their continual repetition sheds a sunlight over the whole neighborhood. It is so, too, in the family. The child whose good offices are always ready when they are wanted—to run up stairs or down—to get chips, or rock the cradle or to run on an errand and right back—and all with a cheerful face and pleasant temper, has a reward already with such good deeds. If a little girl can take her grandfather on her lap, as he comes home on his, she can get his slippers, or put away his book, or gently comb his thin locks, and who ther she thinks of it or not, those acts of kindness that comes from a loving heart are the sunbeams that lighten up a dark and sad world.

Peter says it is folly to tell a man that he must not enlarge his debts when the poor fellow is doing all he can to contract them.

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

O, who so sweetly sleeps or wakes,
Of all the race of men below,
As he who our good paper takes,
Nor lets the printer unpaid go?

THE COUNCIL.

The new Council met on Monday according to law, and after making the necessary declarations of qualification and of office, proceeded by ballot to choose the order in which members in each Ward should retire. There is evidently something wrong (altho' not illegal) in the method of procedure in this act of the Council. It is simple to leave the matter to the council to select who shall retire in one, or who in two years, inasmuch as there is too much room for designing, evil-disposed persons to remove from the council any one who may be feared or obnoxious to a particular party. And it is well that it does not continue. The evil can be borne with being of short continuance: it does not occur again, if it did it would be better either to vote in the first place by ballot, or having elected the men, to proceed as in the selection of Jurors. What reasonable right can one member of a council have to say which of his colleagues, elected in the same manner as himself, shall retire first. We cannot understand why such men as Mr. Cluxton should be voted out in one year, while others having almost nothing at stake remain in two and three years. Or why should Mr. Toole be voted out in one year: a man who has served long in the Council and always stood at the head of the poll against all comers, while men whose labours for the interest of the Town have been few and far between, are voted to remain in Council two years. But as we have said, the evil is now over, and it is well that there is no provisions for its recurrence.

The new Council is now fairly started, and we trust that their efforts will be to abate as many evils as possible, and to do all in their power to curtail undue expenses, with a due regard to the comfort and well-being of every citizen, and the extension of every lawful means of increasing our business facilities.

The roads to and from the Town are not in as good a state as they should be. Complaints are daily being made of the state of the roads to Warsaw and to Norwood. In fact one of the members of the County Council informs us that after the last session of the Council it was almost impossible to get home. This ought not to be so. The trade of the east should be drawn to Peterborough by building good roads or repairing the ones already travelled. The County would aid in the work if the Town Council would come forward and offer to do its share. But, to the disgrace of the Town Council, it is always last to act; in fact sometimes has to be almost forced to action. We trust that the new Council will be ready to meet the County Council in a spirit of fairness, and show a willingness to settle all differences. The County Council, too, should consult with the Town in matters of mutual interest, so as to avoid any appearance of undue prominence in anything that effects both. The Bridge difficulty is not yet settled. The committee appointed by the Town Council to report on matters relating to the Bridge, it is true, reported. But the report recommends nothing, and might as well never have been written. But as the County Council has appointed a special committee to confer with the Town Council on this matter, this vexed question may soon be set at rest.

It is much to be regretted that the Town is separated from the County. There may have been cause for separation once, but there is no cause why they should remain apart. If we remember aright, when Mr. Fortye was arbitrator on behalf of the Town, he recommended that some action be taken to re-unite them, and the last arbitrator, Mr. Edwards, thinks that it would be better if the Town and County were united. The most superficial observer must see this, and it would be well if some action should be taken at once to get an act for that purpose. An endeavor was made by the Town to have a clause to enable Towns to Counties inserted in the present law. None, however, was inserted; it is desirable therefore, that an act be obtained for the purpose, and the sooner the better.

At present there are jealousies that a union would, in some degree remove, and there is the absence of co-operation that would not exist if they were united.

A member of the County Council informs us that the Government at one time put on Royal Engineers for the purpose of reporting on a military road back from the great lakes, and that those Engineers reported favorably of the route between Peterboro' and Norwood. If this be so, and there is no reason to doubt his statement. Might not the joint memorial, or joint action of the Town and County Councils induce the government to build this, or if not build it entirely, bigher material aid for the purpose, by the County and Town assisting. The trade of the east would thus be secured to Peterboro', and the grain of the eastern part of the county would come here instead of going to Cobourg, there being ten miles distance in our favour.

The mineral production of the east of the county will ere long be a large item. It is remarkable that an object is putting forth treasure to while the people of Peterboro' sit twiddling with folded hands till the marble, iron, gold &c., [illegible] of the north and east, should be brought to our doors either by railroads or by a mineralogical upheaving of the north and east country. The trade of the back country is lost, it goes to Lindsay, because of the impossibility of approach to this town, and yet what is being done? Nothing. We depend on the advantages of our situation, and do little; but ere we are aware, Cobourg on the one side and Lindsay on the other may rob us of our birth-right. We trust that our public men will set to work with a will, and endeavor to prevent the trade of the eastern part of the county and also of the northern part from being diverted from its proper course. Now is the best time. Once diverted it is not so easily brought back.

THE WARDEN.

P. M. GROVER, ESQ., CHOSEN CHAIRMAN ELECT.

From our report of proceedings of County Council in another column, it will be seen that P. M. Grover, Esq., Reeve of Asphodel, has been unanimously chosen Warden for this year. Ever since it was known that Mr. Grover was appointed Reeve of Asphodel for 1867, there appeared a growing desire in the minds of the majority of the Reeves and Deputy Reeves to centre on him as the man, and when they all assembled here on Tuesday doubts were set at rest. Mr. Grover well deserves the honor. He has been long a member of the Council and a working member, understands well Municipal matters, and possesses the confidence of his colleagues largely. It seems to have been the desire of the Reeves to divide the honor; this too is reasonable, as by this manner reasonable expectations may be held of occupying the position, which urges to labor and faithfulness, to the end that an energetic councillor may reap the due reward of his labor. In the present instance there is not a dissenting voice heard, and we trust that every member of the County Council will continue to thus merit the favor of his colleagues, and also the approbation of his constituents.

THE NEW COUNCIL.

Have gone to work with a will. It is true, some time has been taken up with Committees, but this is as necessary as regular meetings—in fact all important business is prepared in Committee.

We expect all the business of the Session will be pushed through as soon as possible.

BIBLE SOCIETY.

The time for the annual meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society is again at hand, and will, we believe, take place sometime about the 14th prox. Meantime the usual yearly appeal for contributions will be made to the friends of the Society. As it is desirable that every information possible respecting the Society should reach those who aid in the work, we copy a short sketch of the Parent Society and its operations:—

The Object of the British & Foreign Bible Society is the circulation of the Bible, without note or comment, amongst all the nations of the earth, in their own language. Its Constitution is so framed as to admit of the cordial co-operation of all Christians; and it is heartily supported by the great and good amongst them, from the Queen on the Throne to the humblest subject in her Empire.

The number of Branches in great Britain is about 4,500; in the Colonies about 1,200; of which Upper Canada numbers nearly 400. The Upper Canada Bible Society is the best auxiliary in the British Colonies.

The Number of Versions now circulated by the Parent Society is 213, of which 101 are translations which were never before printed

The Number of Copies of the Scripture circulated by the Parent Society amounts to over 53 millions, in 175 different languages: besides 30 millions more which it had helped to circulate by means of foreign auxiliaries. The Annual Issue of Scriptures by the Parent Society is about 2½ millions of copies; and its Annual Income is from £170000 to £200,000 sterling.

The Upper Canada Bible Society issues about 50,000 copies of the Scriptures yearly. The Annual Income for all purposes is nearly $30,000. During the thirty-seven years of its operation it has circulated very nearly 3700,000 copies of the Bible and Testament.

Operations of the Upper Canada Bible Society. —There are two Auxiliaries connected with the U. C. Society, viz, the London and the Kingston. The number of Branches throughout the country is nearly 400. In addition to the labours of its Agents and of Colporteurs employed by various Branches, the U. C. Society regularly employ four Colporteurs to labour chiefly in newly settled Townships where no Branches have yet been organized. It also aids in the work of circulating the Scriptures among the Ottawa lumbermen, and in the destitute settlements of the Province.

The Peterborough Branch has distributed by sales and gifts during the past year many copies of the Scriptures, these have been carried into all parts of the county by colportage and otherwise. The colporteur employed by this branch is now on a tour to the back townships, carrying the word of God into the lumber shanties and forest homes of the new settlements north of us.

The Society should be liberally sustained and its collectors should be kindly received, for in their unpleasant, yet voluntary task, they have much to overcome, and deserve the sympathy of all who love the good work. They should never be as they sometimes are, treated as though they solicited the money for their own benefit. Let it be ever remembered that the gift is not to man but to God, who loveth a cheerful giver, and who has said "He who soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

Local meetings are to be held this evening in various parts of the county addressed by members and friends of the Society. Let these meetings be well attended, and let the annual meeting, which will this year be held in the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland, (Rev. Mr. McDonald's) be a large one. The past year has been full of interest and much valuable information may be expected in the review which will no doubt be given of its suggestive events.

Wesleyan Missions.

We invite attention to the notice, of the Wesleyan Missionary services in another column. They will be on Sunday and Monday, 27th and 28th inst., in the Methodist Church. Several eminent speakers from a distance will take part in those services.—The Rev. Mr. Cochrane will preach on Sunday, both morning and evening, and addresses will be delivered on Monday evening, commencing at 7 o'clock. We hope all who can, will avail themselves of the opportunity to be present.

A communication, relative to Monaghan Literary Society, has been received, but owing to press of matter will not appear till next week.

C. W. Farmer's Mutual and Stock Insurance Company.

We have received from Mr. Street, the Manager of the above, old and well-established institution, a copy of the Report of the fifteenth annual general meeting of the Association, containing a detailed statement of the amount of business done by the Company, the amount of losses, and a great amount of other information useful to the members and the public at large having property to insure.

The number of policies issued last year was 3,821, being a few below the previous year; but the amount of premiums collected thereon was considerably in excess of that year—the amount of cash premiums received for business done during the year being about $25,000.

The losses number 61—three of which, the report states, the Board, for reasons we presume perfectly good, were obliged to reject; 53 of which had been paid prior to the 22nd of November—the day on which the books were closed. The total amount of losses foots up to $14,696.41—being little over half what they amounted to the year before, and being considerable lower than they have been since 1862. 53 claims had been paid prior to 22nd November, amounting to $14,704, and three had been paid between that date and the day of meeting, and payment ordered by the Board of the other two. The total number of policies in force is 14,670, covering $7,705,729.54, averaging $661.17 to each policy. The cash on hand, cash notes, &c., of the Company amount to over $50,000, being equal to three years losses; besides this, there is a balance of premium notes, making the security to policy holders perfectly good.

We also notice, that during the year, the Company have made the appointment of an Inspector of Agencies and Fire. This office has been filled by Mr. W. A. Cooly, a first class practical business man, for several years identified with the Provincial Agricultural Society, as the Manager of the Exhibition Grounds. The selection is a good one, and must be of benefit to the Company.

We notice that important alterations have been made in the By-laws and Rules of the Company, which will, we think, tend to promote the interest of the Company, and put it in a position to compete with any Company in the country. The rates on 1st and 2nd class brick and stone buildings having been reduced to as low a figure as prudence would admit of.

We notice that the active and intelligent agent of the Company here, Mr. R. W. Errett, figures in the list at No. 3, for 403 applications. This is a good year's business, and shows that the right man is in the right place here at all events.

We must now, for this week, let this matter drop and call attention in another issue to the remaining portions of the report, and, in conclusion, express our pleasure at the sound financial condition of this, one of the oldest Farmers Insurance Companies in Canada, and we can advise farmers, who are uninsured to go to Mr. Errett, whose office is in Scott's Block, Simcoe street, and have their property insured.

In last week's Review, Mr. Wrighton has gone to some trouble to prove that he is a respectable, honorable gentleman. Does he think any one believes it? If he does, he is mistaken. He does not deny that he went in without paying a paltry "yorker," but finding that next morning there was considerable town talk about the matter, he went and paid it. Now, why this talk-about-town, if Mr. Wrighton acted all right? Mr. Wrighton hides behind the plea that he is a fireman. At the time, he was not a fireman in reality. He had been proposed as an honorary member—that was all. The firemen, too, repudiate his act, and in fact any connection with him, being ashamed that any one claiming to be one of them should do as he did. He thinks he has found inconsistency in our remarks before and since the election. We can assure him we are consistent, we always despise meanness, and oppose mean acts, and mean men, when we know them; and our change of mind arises out of our having found out his true character. We are not bound to praise a man longer than his character will warrant us to do. If we speak differently now from what we did a month ago, it is because we think differently. In the fable, the noble lion kept company with the ass only while the donkey had on the lion's skin; as soon as his ears appeared, as he moved, Leo found him out and gave the donkey what he deserved for his presumption. If we appeared to praise Mr. Wrighton, it was before his ears appeared. His abuse we prefer to his praise. We don't court the flattery of rowdies.

Little Lake Cemetery Company.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, met in the Council Chamber, on Monday last, when the following Directors were elected for the present year:—Messrs. R. Denniston, Sheriff Hall, R. Kingan, T. Fortye W. Cluxton, J. W. Gilmour, W. Eastland, R. D. Rogers and W. Lundy.

The Treasurer presented his report which shows a balance in his hands amounting to $180.05.

The following is the Secretary's Report:—

To the Directors and Stockholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company.

GENTLEMEN,—Your Secretary begs leave to report that there has been sold during the year, 13 lots, amounting to $136, and 8 single lots at one dollar each.

There are accounts due to the Company for lots sold, which I think can be collected, amounting to $101.40.

Of the number interred during the year in the Little Lake Cemetery, there has been 38 males and 12 females. Of the above number there died under 10 years, 7; between 10 and 20 years, 4; between 20 and 40 years, 14; between 40 and 60 years, 8; between 60 and 80 years, 3; one 86, and one 94.

Their nationalities were—Canadian, 9; English, 4; Irish, 11; Scotch, 2.

19 died in the Town of Peterborough, 4 in Ashburnham, and 17 in the surrounding country.

The diseases of which they died, so far as they are given are as follows:—Consumption, 8; fits, 1; fever, 2; disease of the throat, 3; dropsy, 3; brain fever, 3; inflammation, 2; childbirth, 2; English cholera, 1; croup, 1; accidental, 2, and 12 of which diseases were not given.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

R. WALTON, Secretary.

Peterboro, January 21, 1867.

Literary Club.

This evening the following subject will be discussed:—"Should any of the Fenians now under sentence of death in Canada be executed?" Leaders, Messrs. Stratton and Fairbairn. Members only admitted.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

January 22nd, 1867.

The following Reeves and Deputy-Reeves, of the respective municipalities of the County, presented themselves and filed their certificates as required by law:—

Asphodel—P. M. Grover, Reeve; Timothy Coughlin, Deputy Reeve.
Belmont and Methuen—Peter Pearce, Reeve.
Dummer—Thos. Geo. Choate, Reeve.
Douro—Geo. Clarke, Reeve.
Otonabee—Wm. Laing, Reeve; Jas. Miller, Deputy Reeve.
Harvey—W. A. Scott, Reeve.
Burleigh, Anstruther and Chandos—John Carroll, Reeve.
Ashburnham—A. C. Dunlop, Reeve.
Monaghan—Geo. Young, Reeve.
Smith—John Walton, Reeve; Isaac Garbutt, Deputy Reeve.
Galway—Thos. Probert, Reeve.
Dysart—John Lucas, Reeve.
Stanhope—James Melville, Reeve.
Minden—S. S. Peck, Reeve.
Snowden and Glamorgan—Francis Peck, Reeve.
Ennismore—Daniel Whalen, Reeve, not present.

At 3 o'clock the court called the Council to order for the election of Warden.

It was moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Scott,—That P. M. Grover be Warden for the present year.—Carried.

Mr. Grover then made and subscribed the declarations of office as Warden, and took his seat.

He then addressed the Council, but we regret that we did not hear it.

The minutes of last day of the last session was then read and confirmed.

On motion of Mr. S. S. Peck, seconded by Mr. Choate, John J. Hall, Esq., was appointed Auditor for 1867. The Warden named Dr. Poole as the other Auditor.

Mr. Pearce addressed the Council on the subject of the state of the Otonabee Bridge, by no means complimenting the Town Council for their action in the matter, and sarcastically adverting to the Report of the Special Committee of the Town Council on the subject of the bridge.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Dunlop,—That Messrs. Carroll, S. S. Peck, Laing, Scott, Choate, Dunlop and the mover be a special Committee to fix the standing Committees for the present year.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Lucas,—That Messrs. Pearce, Scott and Laing be a special Committee to confer with the Town Council in regard to the repairs of the Peterboro Bridge, and report at as early a date as possible.—Carried.

The Council adjourned to 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

WEDNESDAY.

Council met about 11 o'clock.

Present—15 members.

Minutes of Tuesday read and approved.

On motion of Mr. Carroll, the special Committee appointed to fix standing Committees was allowed to report.

The standing Committees (the first name being Chairman) are:—

COUNTY PROPERTY.—Messrs. Walton, Miller, Scott, Pearce, Choate, F. Peck and Dunlop.

ROADS AND BRIDGES.—Messrs. Carroll, Pearce, Choate, Laing, S. S. Peck, Scott, Young, Clark, Coughlin and Probert.

SCHOOLS.—Messrs. Choate, Dunlop, Pearce, S. S. Peck, Carroll, Garbutt, Whalen, Melville and Lang.

FINANCE AND ASSESSMENT.—Messrs. Pearce, Dunlop, S. S. Peck, Laing, Walton, Carroll, Scott, Probert, Clark and Choate.

PETITIONS.—Messrs. Lucas, Garbutt, Melleville, F. Peck, Whalen, Coughlin and Young.

PRINTING.—Messrs. Dunlop, Miller, Walton, Scott, Carroll, S. S. Peck, and Coughlin.

APPOINTMENT TO OFFICE.—Messrs. Laing, Garbutt, Pearce, Choate, S. S. Peck, Carroll, Miller, Scott and Dunlop.

On motion of Mr. Carroll the petition of J. R. Benson, for the office of Inspector of Weights and Measures was referred to the Committee on appointments to office.

The Warden urged action, that the business of the session might be got through as early as possible.

Mr. Walton thought it better to adjourn so as to allow Committees to get to work.

Mr. Pearce thought the subject of re-survey, concerning which there was so much talk, should be taken up. He then referred to a motion of the last Council recommending to memorialize government to establish the resurvey, and also to enable the County Council to levy and collect the costs already paid, being almost $3,000.

Mr. Carroll explained that the motion referred to had not been unanimously passed, as he (Mr. C.) had opposed it at the time.

On motion of Mr. Lucas, the Clerk was directed to procure the necessary books and statutes for the new municipalities of Dysart and Stanhope.

The Council adjourned to two o'clock to allow Committees to get to work.

The remaining part of this day was taken up with Committees, until about six o'clock, when the Council reassembled. After which, on a motion of Mr. S. S. Peck, seconded by Mr. Pearce, to have the County Solicitor appear before the Council and give his advice how to proceed so as to reimburse the County for the cost of the re-survey of Harvey and Burleigh, a free discussion took place, in which Messrs. Pearce, Peck, Scott, Walton, Garbutt and Laing took part. We cannot give a report this week, but hope to be able to do so in our next.

North Monaghan Township Council

Monaghan, January 21st, 1867.

The members Elect met on Monday, at noon, when they made and subscribed to the usual qualifications and declarations of office.

A By-law was passed, appointing Robert M. Shaw and John McIntosh, Esqs., Auditors of Township accounts for past year.

Account of sheep killed belonging to the Rev. J. M. Roger and Richard Lund were received and ordered to lie over till the next meeting of the Council.

On the motion of Mr. Robson the Council adjourned to Saturday, the 2nd February, at 10 o'clock, then to meet for the appointment of Township officers and other public business.—Com.

Gold in Dysart.

Mr. Lucas, Reeve of Dysart, has shown us a specimen of gold-bearing quartz found in Dysart, that will compare favorably with any brought from Madoc. Several gentlemen, who profess to be judges, declare it to be very rich in the precious metal. We have no doubt but that the back country is just as rich in gold as Madoc, and next season there may be a rush to Dysart from Madoc.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, Jan. 21st., 1867.

The newly elected Mayor and Council met to-day at noon pursuant to the statute in that behalf. Present—His Worship W. H. Sheet, Wrighton, and Messrs. Burnham, Chamberlain, Leonard, Clinton, Kennedy, S. Dickson, Doherty, Patterson, Stevenson, Wrighton and J. H. Dixon.

The Clerk then read the returns of the different Wards.

The members present made and subscribed the necessary qualification of office.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Clerk read the clause of the statute relating to balloting of members to retire, and proceeded to take the ballot, which resulted as follows:

NORTH WARD.

Mr. Toole	retires	1st year.
W. H. Wrighton,	"	2nd "
J. H. Dixon	"	3rd "

SOUTH WARD.

T. Leonard,	retires	1st year.
E. Burnham,	"	2nd "
E. Chamberlain,	"	3rd "

CENTRE WARD.

W. Patterson,	retires	1st year.
J. Doharty,	"	2nd "
J. Stevenson,	"	3rd "

EAST WARD.

Wm. Cluxton,	retires	1st year.
S. Dickson,	"	2nd "
W. N. Kennedy,	"	3rd "

On motion of Mr. Stevenson a By-law was read a first time for appointing auditors for the current year.

On motion of the same, the council went into committee on the second reading of the By-law. Mr. Wrighton in the chair. The blanks were filled with the names of E. Pearce and Charles Cameron, and read a second time without amendment; it was afterwards passed.

Moved by Mr. Chamberlen, seconded by Mr. Burnham,—That the undersigned be a special committee to recommend the standing committees of the council for the present year at the next meeting of the council, viz: Messrs. Burnham, S. Dickson, Stevenson and Wrighton.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson seconded by Mr. Wrighton,—The council adjourned till the evening at half past seven o'clock.

The Council met in the evening pursuant to adjournment.

Present—The Mayor, and Messrs. Chamberlen, Leonard, Kennedy, S. Dickson, Patterson, Doharty, Stevenson, Wrighton and J. H. Dixon.

The minutes of the last meeting were read over and confirmed.

Two petitions were read from widow Riordan and Mrs. Halpin, asking charity from the Council. They were both referred to the Mayor.

The Council then adjourned to next Monday night at half-past seven o'clock.

ASHBURNHAM.

The Councillors for the current year met shortly after 12 o'clock on Monday, and made and subscribed the necessary declarations of qualification and of office. Having done so they proceeded to business and passed two or three minor accounts and claims. They appointed Jonathan Stephenson and H. T. Strickland, Esq's, Auditors.

The Clerk was directed to instruct the Collector to remit Edward Tighe the amount of his statute labor for 1866.

The Council adjourned till the first Monday in February, at 7 o'clock, p. m.

Godey's Lady's Book for February.

This is the second number of Volume Seventy four. The illustration are of the very highest order of the art, and the literary matter excellent. The contents:—

A beautiful steel engraving, "The Lost Money." The Fashion-plate contains six finely colored dresses, real fashions. Cupid Sharpening his Arrow, printed in tints.—Valentine's Day, an emblematical wood-cut. The latest Fashions consist of two Promenade Suits; Ristori Jacket, front and back view; New Style of Caps, Night-cap and Invalid's Cap, etc. etc In the Novelties will be found a Hood for a little girl; eight new styles of Dresses; Collar; Night dress; Black Velvit Jacket; Fancy Basque; and the End of a neck-tie. The work Department contains a variety of work that will be appreciated. A Lady's Under Waistcoat, three engravings; a Pair of Crochet Over-Boots for Ladies; Mittens in Berlin wool; Foot-Cushion in Braid-work; Work-Pocket, two handsome engravings; Design for working on Net; Trimming for Under Petticoats, etc.; Antimacassar in Embroidery and Applique over White Net; Letters for Marking; and several handsome Embroidery Patterns, etc. A handsome Country Residence will also be found in this number. In Literary Department Mrs. Harland concludes her first story of the year, "Entirely at Home." In the March number we will give another, and in April we will commence a capital novelette, by the same author, running through several numbers. Read the beautiful story of "Ten Years and Two Hearts," by Belle Butledge; "Ursule Athoy;" and "The Little Strategist."

The London Railway News and Joint Stock Journal states that the Canadian Delegates have settled all points at issue with the N. B and N. S. Delegates on the one hand, and with the Imperial government on the other, regarding the Confederation of these Provinces, and that a bill on the accepted basis will be introduced at the opening of next session, to confirm the arrangement.—It also says that the Imperial guarantee of £3,000,000 for the Intercolonial Railway will be increased to £4,000,000 if necessary, and that the line can be completed in two years, to connect the Grand Trunk with Halifax.

Mr. A. Michel, the well known mining engineer attached to the Canada Geological Commission, and on whose statements reliance may be placed, writes that although he was not permitted to make in the Richardson gold mine near Madoc, the works required for a thorough investigation of the discovery, he saw enough and assayed a sufficient quantity of earthy matter and rock to be persuaded of the existence in the Township of Madoc "of an auriferous deposit as extraordinary for its wealth as for the conditions of its existence."

Tenders for the deepening of the Grenville and Carillon canal were opened on the 15th inst. in the Public Works Department, Ottawa. The deepening of the canal is deemed of such importance by lumbermen and saw mill owners on the Ottawa, that they have guaranteed upwards of thirty thousand dollars to the Department of Public Works to enable the work to be commenced at once in anticipation of a grant from Parliament.

THE PETERBOROUGH BRIDGE.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—At the first meeting of the County Council on Tuesday last, Mr. Pearce alluded to the apathy shown by the Town Council in reference to its assisting in the repairs required on the bridge across the Otonabee River in the Town. In his usual sledge-hammer style he commented upon the Report submitted by the special Committee of the Town Council, in a way not very complimentary to that body, and after showing the necessity of some action at once to be taken in the matter, moved for a Committee to confer with the Town Council to ascertain what was to be done.

Mr. Carroll referred to a conversation he had heard the night before, in which a City Father had humorously said, "We have our end of the bridge secured, the County now might look after the other end." The circumstance he said reminded him of the story of a man's craft that had a Captain and a Mate, in which the former, jealous of his dignity, would not allow the latter on the quarter deck without a reprimand. When the vessel came to anchor, the Mate said to the Captain, "My end of the vessel is at anchor, where is yours?"

The most casual observer cannot but be struck with the apparent indifference on the part of the Town in regard to a matter which interests them equally with the County, and one will be ready to ask is there not a cause? Yes, Mr. Editor, there is a cause, and it is a pity that the special Committee appointed by the Town Council referred to, did not state this in their Report, I will, with your leave, sir, state a few reasons why there exists the indifference complained of; they are bruited about the Town and they may as well be made public as not. The first intimation that the Town Council had of the state of the bridge was on the 12th of November last, when both Mr. Sheridan and Mr. Clarke were heard on the state of the bridge.

In answer to enquiries, the latter could not state the amount of repairs necessary, the time it would require to make them, nor an approximation of the amount required. From the observations made by members of the Council at the time, Mr. Sheridan must have known that there was an impression that something was wrong, which he should have noticed in his Report to the County Council. The Town Council reasoned in this way, the bridge is in the charge of the County Council, and that body as is usual at the June Session, gave instructions to have the bridge examined and repaired, but left the matter in the hands of the Clerk. The Clerk, in his Report to the Council at its meeting in December, states why it was not done. He says "subsequent to the June Council I could not find an experienced carpenter to undertake the examination and repairs of the Peterborough Bridge in this Town. The Volunteer excitement was an additional reason for the delay. In August I wrote for Mr. Clarke, an experienced bridge builder; my letter did not reach him for some time. With a view of making a thorough examination a temporary scow was erected. Mr. Clarke brought with him a few experienced hands, when it was found that the six corbels on the cut stone piers were all rotten, also the ends of the long joists projecting inwards from the same. As soon as this discovery was made I attended the next meeting of the Town Council and represented the whole matter, with a view of their co-operation, &c."

Then if the Clerk neglects writing to the "experienced carpenter" till August, and that gentleman sees fit to come in November, when the days are short and the weather disagreeable, should it be deemed strange if the Town Council demur [illegible] for these blunders and delays? [illegible] experienced carpenter being found to [illegible] examine ion and repairs of the [illegible] in town the very man who [illegible] the timbers now wanting repairs—[illegible] is that man, and no tradesman in [illegible] given better satisfaction to any [illegible] him. There are others [illegible] make the job if they had the [illegible] are certain reasons [illegible] which are anything [illegible] from a distance [illegible] preferred.

Asked not if I have succeeded in showing the causes of the indifference on the part of the Town in the Bridge affair, but they are, first, that the County has blundered in having the examination and repairs undertaken at so late a period of the year; and secondly, in the manner in which the Council is to pay for these blunders. In fair play the Town should have been consulted in the matter, if it be required to pay. Let the County Council act right in the matter, and my word for it the Town will act right on its part.

The question of dignity might appear a frivolous one, but, nevertheless, it is one that enters largely into corporate bodies. No such body allows quietly its prerogative to be infringed upon, at the same time it not unfrequently happens, that this same body will ruthlessly invade the right of another body, simply because the former may esteem itself to be the greater of the two. Such conduct is unworthy of intelligent men, and should be guarded against. Free dignity asserts its own rights, and as readily asserts the rights of others. False dignity claims too much, and yields too little. "Wisdom in this as in all other matters is profitable to direct."

Apologizing for the length of this communication.

I am, sir,
Yours truly,
A RATEPAYER.

A DAIRY FOR GALWAY.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Being desirous of advancing the interests of Galway, and also of putting money into the pockets of enterprising men, the writer proposes to raise a company for the purpose of starting a dairy business in the township of Galway. The plan to be adopted, is to purchase 2,000 acres of land in the centre of the Township, Land that cannot be surpassed for diary purposes; to clear 100 acres the first year, crop it and seed it down; and to continue doing so till enough be cleared. The second year to put on 50 cows, 20 ewes, and some good hogs. The butter or cheese of one year would repay the whole investment, while at the same time young stock could be raised and large crops of grain—crops that would far more than repay the cost of clearing, building, &c. By the third year all the outlaid capital would be repaid, and in future, all, over working expenses would be profits which would, without doubt be large. The writer of this is well acquainted with dairy business, and is certain that the rear of this county is well adapted for dairy farming being the same sort of soil as that of Orange County, N. Y., and the dairymen of that county receive the highest prices for butter and dairy produce. The plan would be to apply to the government for land, which I have no doubt would be sold for that purpose at about 20cts. per acre, and twenty shares at $100 each would be sufficient to establish the business.—The Government would be a safe one; the land alone at the expiration of a few years would be worth the cost ay, and more too; so that shareholders would be sure to realize the capital invested and a nice profit. Who will commence the work?

I am, Sir,
Yours truly,
THOMAS PROBERT,
Galway, January 21st 1867.

It is rumoured in England that Lord Monck will not return to Canada, and that he will be succeeded by Lord Naas, at present Irish Secretary.

The list of English subscriptions to the Quebec Relief Fund is published, and exhibits a noble generosity to praise which would be an gild refined gold. The sum total of the subscriptions amounted to $131,6667

A nugget of gold, weighing forty ounces, worth about seven Hundred dollars, was found a few weeks since at a depth of 32 feet, on the Delory property in the Chaudiere district; and in the same place was found a few days previously a smaller nugget weighing eight ounces.

The direct trade between this country and France is yearly increasing. The number of vessels entered inwards at the Port of Quebec for 1866 was 23, tonnage 8222, and cleared from Quebec 22 vessels, 8283 tons. In the list of Canadian exports to France are 7 vessels of 2,297 tons, amounting to $131,880.

It is proposed to establish an universal green back currency in the United States, the national Bank notes to be replaced by $300,000,000 legal tenders. The supporters of this scheme claim that by retiring 6 per cent, bonds to that amount, a saving of $18,000,000 per annum to the country would be effected. The immediate effect would probably be an advance in the premium on gold.

Billiards.

On Tuesday evening, the 11th ult., J. W. Crown, of Peterboro, C. W., and W. Phillips, of Bellville, played an exhibition game of 500 points, at the club rooms, Belleville, before a large audience, Crown winning by 217 points, who made runs of 134, 90, 80.

On Thursday, the 14th ult., Crown and Jakes (ex-champion) played an exhibition game of 300 points in the afternoon, at Jakes' Billiard Rooms, Cobourg, which was won by Crown.

The same parties played in the evening a game of 500 points for a stake of ——. This game was closely contested up to the first two hundred, when Jakes took the lead and kept it till the fourth hundred, when the game stood—Crown, 220; Jakes, 401; when Crown, getting the balls together, ran out on 180, and winning by 90 points. Crown's highest runs were 280, 75, 65; Jakes' 90, 75, 64, 56. The attendance was large.

PLAYERS WILL TAKE NOTICE.—After January 1, 1867, the following rule extracted from the "The Game of Billiards, by Michael Phelan," will govern when balls are in contact:—

"When the one-balls is in contact with any other ball, the striker may effect a count either by playing directly upon some ball other than that with which his own is in contact, or by playing first upon the cushion, or by a masse. In either of the two last mentioned cases, it is immaterial which ball the one-ball strikes first.

"These stipulations observed, the play can then be pursued entirely as if the balls had not been in contact."

SUBSTITUTE FOR COFFEE.—Get some Rye, scald it, dry it, and brown it, then mix two parts of it with one of Coffee, and you will have as good a cup of coffee as you ever drank if you are troubled with colds, rheumatism, toothache, nervousness, or any summer complaints try first of all [illegible] of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," you can get it of any Medicine Dealer for 25 cts per bottle.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affection. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed withe t assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he seemed me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY

IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is conclusive of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

Prescott, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

"The Ottawa Citizen,"

Published Daily and Weekly at Ottawa.

I. B. TAYLOR, PROPRIETOR.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1867.

THE "OTTAWA CITIZEN," in the oldest newspaper extant in the Ottawa Valley—in a few weeks it will enter upon the eighteenth year of its existence. The time has therefore arrived when the Proprietor may appropriately offer a few remarks concerning the past and respecting the future. The Bytown Packet, the possessor of the Citizen, was first issued in the year 1845, and was continued until 1851, when its name was changed to the Ottawa Citizen. The Citizen has, therefore, under the two names, been published continuously for twenty-two years. Until May, 1865, the Citizen was issued as a Semi-weekly and Weekly Journal, when a change of proprietorship taking place, its publication as a Daily Newspaper, with a Weekly Edition also was commenced. The connexion formed twenty-two years ago by the Packet, with readers and advertisers in all parts of the Ottawa Valley and Central Canada, has been preserved. With the growth and expansion of the population and resources of the Valley, the circulation and influence of the Citizen has gradually increased, and now the extent of the issues of both the Daily and Weekly editions in the Metropolis and surrounding districts is such as to give much gratification to the Proprietor, while it affords the amplest of guarantees to advertisers that their notices will be brought fully before the people. The aim of the Proprietor has been to make of the Citizen, a reliable and faithful medium of general news, and a trusty advocate of correct political principles. He has spared no reasonable expense to provide for the readers of the Citizen the earliest and most reliable intelligence of public events. The Telegraph lines have been unsparingly used to convey an epitome of news from the principle cities in the Province and for the transmission of Reports of important Public Meeting and Demonstrations from the pens of the Citizen's own editorial staff. At the time of the Fenian raids in June last, the Proprietor despatched from his own office two special correspondents, to the scene of danger, one East and one West with instructions to spare no expense in the preparation of reliable intelligence; other correspondents, too were engaged at different points; and it may be permitted in him to doubt whether any newspaper in the Province was better prepared to furnish the public with news from the seat of War. A prominent feature in the Citizen is the publication every morning of Midnight Despatches per Atlantic Cable, and of other despatches, by the Montreal Line, from all parts of the Provinces, wherever occurrences worthy of note take place. The arrangements of the Citizen for the procurement and publication of the Latest Intelligence are such as to place it in the van of Provincial newspapers for enterprise and industry. The Proprietor will aim to maintain the reputation acquired, and will ungrudgingly meet all possible expenditure with that end in view.

Since the information of the Coalition Ministry, there have been but few party issues in the political world, and the political complexion of even the most extreme of partizan journals has been eclipsed under the influence of the preparatory measures for Confederation. Political issues have been lost sight of, and the political Lions and Lambs have lain together in the same fold. The year 1867, however, will, no doubt witness a revival of political issues.—After the consumation of Confederation, new party lines will be drawn and new and great questions of public policy come before Parliament and the people. To meet these contingencies and issues when they arise, it is the duty of the faithful journalist to make diligent preparation. The aim of the Proprietor of the Citizen will be to meet the new state of things with thorough independence of action free from party bias. His efforts in the past are a sufficient guarantee, that, in future, no exertion or expense will be spared to make of the Citizen a faithful, truthful intelligencer.

PROSPECTUS OF 'MONTREAL WITNESS' FOR 1867.

Daily Witness	$3 per an.
Montreal Witness (Semi-weekly)	$2 per an.
Weekly Witness	$1 per an.
Canadian Messenger	25c per an.

All strictly in advance, and the papers stop unless subscription be renewed.

On the 31st December, 1866, the Montreal Witness will have completed its twenty-first year, a period sufficient to render its character and objects generally known.

The Witness is devoted to the best interests of the people of Canada, temporal and eternal. It fearlessly grapples with Oppression, Infidelity, Intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and public evils of every kind. It is connected with no party or denomination, and consequently has no support except from the public, on whom alone it relies. Its various editions are probably the cheapest papers on this Continent; and, though the circulation they have obtained is large, we think it might be, and hope it will be, much larger throughout the Provinces. To this end we rely on the kind aid of the friends of evangelical religion and wholesome literature everywhere, who, we hope, will help us in the future, as many of them have done in the past.

Canada is passing through a crisis in its history; the United States are still convulsed with the struggle for justice and equal rights; the map of Europe is undergoing great changes; Italy is claiming Rome, and Russia again menaces Turkey;—in a word, the times are full of interest, and the Witness gives special attention to the news of the day. It has also an extensive department for Commercial Intelligence and Prices Current, &c., &c., upon which great care is bestowed.

The Messenger is devoted exclusively to Temperance, Education, Agriculture, Science, Art, &c., and consequently goes free through the Post-office.

Any Minister, Post-master, or School-teacher remitting for eight subscribers to any edition, will be entitled to a gratis copy. For a mixed list, amounting to eight dollars, a copy of the Weekly or four copies of the Messenger will be sent gratis.

Subscriptions may commence at any time; and as the best season of the year for obtaining new subscribers is probably just after harvest, we hope ere long to have many lists sent in.

All orders, advertisements, and communications to be addressed (post-paid) to

JOHN DOUGALL & SON, Montreal.

☞ To all newspapers publishing the above prospectus for a few times we will send the Daily Witness free for one year.

Marked papers containing the prospectus should be addressed to the Publishing Clerk, Witness Office, Montreal, C. E.

What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given in parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Selections.

WHEN AWAKING.

One of the most amusing hits we have seen upon the high prices existing in the United States was made by a Louisville (Ky.) paper the other day. Under the heading "How to go to Europe for nothing," the writer supplies figures to show that a citizen of Louisville can go to Great Britain, buy an outfit of clothing and return, just as cheaply as he can buy the same goods at that place! This remarkable statement is supported by the following list of articles and prices:

	Louisville prices	British prices.
1 Sapphire West of England Much suit	$100 00	£4 10
1 Wearing tweed suit	60 00	3 00
1 Winter overcoat	60 00	3 02
1 Hat, silk	6 00	0 16
1 Pair boots	14 00	1 00
1 Pair gaiterboots	10 00	0 16
1 Dozen French kid gloves	24 00	1 04
1 Dozen socks	6 00	0 02
	$264 00	£13 00

The difference between these two sums is sufficient to pay the fare of a Louisvillian to New York by rail, from there to Liverpool or Glasgow in a steamer's second cabin, and return again to his home! What American after this, will deny himself a trip to Europe next year? Who will refuse to go to the Paris Exhibition when the trip would be cheaper than staying at home? The British clothes being quite as good as the American, the trip would be a clear gain. Verily it is time—Americans can now travel to Europe for nothing!

White House Anecdotes.

Some good stories are told of an Irish man named 'Ned,' for many years door keeper at the White House—

'Ned went with Fillmore to look at a carriage which the necessity of some Southern magnate had thrown upon the market.

'Well, Ned,' said the President, 'and how will it do for the President of the United States to buy a second hand carriage?'

'And sure, yer Excellency, and ye're only a second hand Prisidint, ye know.'

Mr. Fillmore took the joke, but not the carriage. This anecdote was told by Mr. Lincoln, and was called up by the following anecdote—

One dark and rainy evening we had got as far as the door, on our way to General McClellan's headquarters without an umbrella, and Ned was sent back after one. the President telling him whereabouts he might find it.

In a few minutes he came back, announcing a fruitless search, and adding—

'Sure, yer Excellency, and the owner must have come for it.

The President laughed heartily, and Ned found another umbrella.

The Schoolmaster and his Pupils.

'John, where is Africa?'

'On the map, sir.'

'I mean, John, in what continent—the Eastern or Western continent?'

'Well, the land of Africa is in the Eastern continent; but the people, sir, are in the Southern down South.'

'What are its products?' say; it never

'Well, sir—

'How do the African people live?'

'By draw ng'

'By drawing what?'

'Yes, sir; by drawing their breath!'

'Sit down, John.'

'Thomas, what is the equator?'

'Why, sir, it's a horizontal pole running perpendicularly through the imaginations of astronomers and old geographers.'

'William Stiggs, what do we mean by an eclipse?'

'As old race horse, sir.'

'Next scholar. What is an eclipse?'

'An eclipse is a thing as appears when the moon gets on a bust, and runs against the sun; consequently, the sun blacks the moon's face?'

Class is dismissed.

TURKISH PROVERBS.—A small stone often makes a great noise. A foolish friend is, at times, a greater annoyance than a wise enemy. You'll not sweeten your mouth by saying "honey." If a man would live in peace he should be blind, deaf, and dumb. Do good and throw it into the sea, if the fish know it not the Lord will. Who fears God need not fear man. If thy foe be as small as a gnat, fancy him as large as an elephant. They who know most are oftenest cheated. A man who weeps for every one will soon have lost his eye-sight. More is learned from conversation than from book. A friend is of more worth than a thousan. He rides seldom who never rides any but a broken-down horse. Trust in the whiteness of his turban who bought the soap on credit. Death is a black camel that kneels before every man's door.

FREEMASONARY IN THE WORLD.—It is estimated by those who ought to know, that at present, in round numbers, there are about 1,250,000 Free and Accepted Masons scattered upon the face of the globe. Of this number some 150,000 are in England, 100,000 in Scotland, and 50,000 in Ireland. There are about 600,000 on the continent of Europe; 300,000 in the United States; and 50,000 in other parts of the world. In England there are two or three thousand persons initiated every year; and Papal allocutions and feminine denunciations notwithstanding, the Masonic body is said to be everywhere increasing.

ADVICE TO LADY SKATERS.—Here are a few simple directions for lady skaters:—

1. If you wear tilters on the ice, be sure that you are properly adjusted. The spectators along the bank are generally supposed to be critical.

2. Scream prettily in passing an air hole, and give the arm of Charles Augustus a frantic squeeze. It makes him feel his oats—in a protectional way.

3. If your skating partner is eligible, and your foot is pretty, don't hesitate in asking him to adjust your skate straps every five or ten minutes. He will rather like it.

If you allow your cattle to shiver, your fortune will be shivered in consequence; that is, the farmer who leaves his cattle to the wind, will find his profits also given to the winds.

A Parisian hairdresser has constructed a waterfall for gentlemen who have lost their back hair. Bald headed parties may take a little comfort.

An exchange advises gentlemen not to part their hair behind, for "hair parted in that way reveals a soft place in the head."

The great difference between Noah's ark and an ambushup is that one was a very high ark, but the other was a blue-arch.

Dogs are valuable to tanners on account of the quantity of bark they yield.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF CONSUMPTION
BY THE
GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barber has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I feel hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,
THAT THE
GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is warranted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say, may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the annals of Historical memories recorded in the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Pints, $1.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A rather delight. Superior to any Cologne, and to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay heat, relieve, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the fresh petals Magnolia, and has obtained a perpetual exhibition-prize-medal. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Dunlap Ramsay & Co., New York, Wholesale agents.

"Just so?"—Exactly?—Spoken through hats; they were there "every time." If he left "early" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he left weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or in any way oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"* * * I owe much to [illegible] believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Medrid, N. Y."

* * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. HILLWOOD, New York City.

* * * I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

* * * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

O. C MORRE, 394 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." "I have received over a hundred rouns of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some an part from parties who do not are what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 12, 1866.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Am rica, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. KELLY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1866.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, Every-man and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.

This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are out-speed of inner caustic, and more or less destroys the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

Literature.

A Tale of the Times of the Martyrs.

BY THE REV. EDWARD IRVING.

There is nothing, my dear friend, for which I envy former times more than this—that their information was conveyed from one to another so much by word of mouth, and so little by written letters and printed books. For though the report might chance to take a fashion and a mould from the character of the reporter, still it was the fashion and the mould of a living, feeling, acting man: a friend, haply a father, haply a venerable ancestor, haply the living chronicler of the country round. The information thus acquired lives embalmed in the most precious associations which bind youth to age—inexperienced, ignorant youth, to wise and narrative old age. And to my heart much exercised in early years with such traditionary memorials of the pious fathers of one brave and religious land, I know not whether it be more pleasant to look back upon the ready good will, the heartfelt gladness, with which the venerable sires and mothers of our dale consented to open the mystery of the past times—the story of ruined halls, the fates of decayed families, the hardships and mortal trials of persecuted saints and martyrs; or to remember the deep hold which their words took, and the awful impression which they made, upon us whom they favored with the tale. Of their many traditions which I have thus received, I select for your use one of the most pious and instructive, as well as the most romantic and poetical; for that, while I prize you as a poet, I esteem you as an upright and worthy man. Now I have such a reverence for the traditions of past times, that you may depend upon my faith as a Christian man and a minister, that I have invented nothing, and altered nothing in what I am about to relate, whether as to the manner of my receiving the story, or as to the story itself.

A branch of my mother's family, who lived in Nithsdale, and whom you know well as distinguished amongst the clergy of that district for faithfulness, had cultivated the most intimate brotherhood with another family, likewise of the Scottish clergy, who when the father died, betook themselves to Glasgow, where the blessing of God continued to rest upon the widow and fatherless. When about to repair to that city, to serve our distinguished countryman, my dear and honored master, Dr. Chalmers, I received a charge from my mother's aunt, now with the Lord, not to fail to pay my respects to the old lady and her children, of whom I had seen the only daughter, when on a visit to our part of the country. Thus entrusted with the precious charge of an old and faithful family friendship, and with this also for my only introduction, I proceeded to the house of the old lady, and inquired for her daughter. The servant who admitted me, mistaking my inquiry, as it had been for the old lady herself, showed me into a large apartment: and deeming, I suppose, that I was well acquainted with her mistress, she shut the door and went away. When I looked round, expecting some one to come forward and receive me, I saw no one but a venerable old woman, seated at the further end of the room, who neither spoke nor removed from her seat, but sat still, looking at her work, as if the door had not been opened, and no one had entered,—of which, indeed, I afterwards found she was not conscious, from her great infirmity of deafness. I had, therefore, time to observe and contemplate the very picturesque and touching figure which was before me. She sat at her spinning wheel, all dressed in black velvet, with a pure white cap upon her head, an ancient plaited ruff about her neck, and white ruffles round her wrists, from under which appeared her withered hands, busily employed in drawing the thread, which her eyesight was too feeble to discern. For, as I had now drawn near, I observed that her spinning-wheel was of the upright construction, having no heck, but a moveable eye, which was carried along the yarn by a heart motion. She afterwards told me that it had been constructed on purpose to accommodate her blindness, under the direction of her son, a gentleman in a high office in London; for she had so much difficulty in reading, and was so dull of hearing, that it was a great relief to her solitude to employ herself with her spinning-wheel, which also preserved her habits of early industry, and made her feel that she was not altogether useless in the world. I felt too much reverence for this venerable relic of a former generation that was now before me, to stand by, curiously perusing, though I was too much impressed immediately to speak; besides, feeling a little embarrassed how I should make my approach to a stranger for whom I instinctively felt so much reverence, and with whom I might find it so difficult to communicate. Having approached close up to her person which remained still unmoved, I bent down my head to her ear, and spoke to her in a loud slow voice, telling her not to be alarmed at the sight of a stranger, of whose presence she seemed to be utterly unconscious, for that I was the friend of one near and dear to her. I know not whether it was from her being accustomed to be thus approached and spoken to, in consequence of her infirmity of sight and hearing, but she was less surprised than I had expected, and relieved me from my embarrassment by desiring me to sit down beside her.

So I sat down, and told her of her ancient and true friends, whose remembrance and respects, thus delivered, she seemed highly to prize; and as I touched upon a chord which was very sweet to her memory, she began to talk of her departed husband, and of my departed grand-uncle, who had long been copresbyters and fast brethren, and had together fought the battles of the kirk, against the invasion of moderation and morals. I loved the theme, and love it still; and finding what a clear memory and fine feeling of ancient times she was endued withal, I was delighted to follow her narrations, as she ascended from age to age, so far as her memory could reach. When she found that I had so much pleasure in her recollections of former times, she said that she would tell me a story of a still older date, which her father had oft told her, and in which he was not a little concerned. So, pushing her wheel a little way from her, and turning her face round towards me—for hitherto, for the convenience of my speaking into her ear, she had looked towards her wheel—she began, and told me the following history, of which I took a faithful record in my memory, and have oft told it since to pious and well-disposed people, though never, till this hour, have I committed any part of it to paper. I shall not attempt to recall her manner of expression, but simply recall the very remarkable events of Divine Providence which she related to me:—

"After the restoration of Charles II., when the Presbyterian clergy of Scotland were required to conform to the moderate episcopacy which he sought to introduce, the faithful ministers of the kirk were contented, with their wives and children, to forego house and hall, and to tear themselves from their godly people, rather than to suffer the civil power to bring guilt upon its own head, and wrath upon the land, by daring like Uzziah, to enter into the sanctuary of the church, and intermeddle with its government and discipline. But when the civil authorities of the realm, not content with this free-will resignation of all they held of their bounty, would require the ordained ministers of the word to shut their mouths, and cease from preaching the gospel of the grace of God to perishing sinners, they preferred to obey God rather than man, and the head of the church, whose vows where upon them, rather than the head of the state, who had ventured to usurp the power of the keys, instead of resting contented with the power of the sword, which by right appertaineth to them. The first who suffered in this contending for Christ's royal office in his house, was James Guthrie, Professor of Divinity in the University of Edinburgh. He was the first of that time who was honoured with the martyr's crown, and having witnessed his good confession unto the death, his head, according to the barbarous custom of those evil days, was placed upon a pole over one of the ports of the city of Edinburgh, called the West Port, which lies immediately under the guns of the castle, and looked towards the south and west,—the quarter of Scotland were the church ever rallied her distressed affairs. And at the same time a proclamation was made at the Cross, and other high places of the city, forbidding any one, under peril of instant destruction from the castle, to remove that head of a rebel and traitor to the king. The body was given to his sorrowful kindred, amongst whom was a youth, his nephew, of great piety and devotedness to the good cause of Christ and his church, of strong, and deep, and tender affection to his uncle, in whose house he had lived, and under whose care he had studied until he was now ripe for the ministerial office, and might ere this have been planted in the vineyard, but for the high and odious hand with which ungodly power and prelatical pride were carrying it in every quarter of poor suffering Scotland. This youth, his heart big with grief to see his uncle's headless trunk, vowed a vow in the presence of God and his conscience, that he would, in spite of wicked men, take down from the ignominious gate his uncle's reverend head, and bury it beside his body. Full of this purpose, and without communicating it to any one, he went his way, at high noon, and climbed the city wall, and from beneath the guns of the castle, in broad daylight, he took down his uncle's head, wrapped it in a linen napkin, and carried it away with him: whether overawing by his intrepidity the garrison, or by his speed outstripping them, or whether protected by the people, or favoured by the special providence of God, my venerable narrator stayed not to tell; but as he vowed he was honoured to perform, and in the same grave was the martyr's head buried with his body. Soon was it noised abroad what this devoted and fearless youth had done, who, regardless of his life, was disposed to walk abroad and at large as usual, and abide whatever revenge and violence might be permitted to do against him. But his kindred, and the steadfast friends of the distressed church, preserving from this heroic and holy act what such a youth might have to perform, set themselves by all means to conceal him from the public search, which was set on foot, and to save him from the high price which was placed upon his head. Finding this to be almost impossible, in the house of the search which the lord provost, zealous in the cause of prelacy, whereof he was a partizan, had set on foot, they sought to convey him beyond seas. This was not difficult at that time, when Scotland had become too hot for the people of the Lord to abide in, and many of her nobles and gentlemen found it better to leave their lands and habitations, and follow their religion in foreign parts, than, by following it at home, to suffer fines, forfeitures, imprisonment, and death. These noble witnesses by exile, for that cause for which the ministers and the people witnessed by death, were glad to find pious scholars or ministers who would accompany them as chaplains to their households and tutors to their children, and the name of Guthrie had already risen to such distinction in the service of Christ, and of his church, that little difficulty was found in obtaining for the proscribed youth honourable shelter and occupation in a foreign land. "Last here," said the venerable matron, "I should have told you that young Guthrie was knit to Edinburgh by a tie which made it more after his heart to abide in the face of threatening death, than to accept the protection of any noble family, or the shelter of a foreign land. For the providence of God, to give in this youth a notable example of true faith as well as of high devotion, had knit his heart to a maiden of good degree and fervent piety, as the sequel of this sad history will prove, being no other than the only daughter of the lord provost of the city, who with such zeal and bitterness, was seeking her lover's life. To this true love, religion had been the guide and minister, as she was destined to prove the comforter; for the soul of this young maiden had been touched with the grace of God, and, abhorring the legal doctrines of the curates, she cast in her lot with the persecuted saints and in the hiding places from the wrath of man, where they worshipped God, with their lives in their right hand, these two hearts grew together, as it were, under the immediate eye and influence of the Holy Spirit; and now that they were knit together in the bands of faithful love, they were called upon to sacrifice their dearest affections to the will of God. She, knowing her father's zeal and speed to serve the cruel edicts of the reigning powers, was not only content to part with the proscribed youth, but anxious to hasten his escape from the danger to which he was continually exposed, from her father's diligent search; and he, though very loathe to leave his heart's desire under the sole authority of a father who sought his life, and persecuted the saints of God, was fain at length to yield to the remonstrances of all his friends, and become an exile from his native land. Yet did these pious lovers not part from each other until they had plighted their mutual troth to be for one another while they were spared upon this earth, and to fulfil that vow by holy wedlock, if Providence should bless them to meet in better days. And so they parted, never to meet again in this world of suffering and sorrow."

"All this passed unknown to her father, and indeed, hardly known to herself; for the events of the uncle's martyrdom, and the nephew's piety and proscription, had awakened in the maiden's heart the knowledge of an affection whose strength she had not dreamed of; and all at once, setting her father, whom, next to God, she honored, in direct hostility to him whom more than all men she loved, there was neither time nor room, nor even possibility, to give head to any other thought than how she might prevent the man whom most she honoured from slaying the man whom most she loved. Fearful predicament for one so young and unconsoelled; but a more fearful predicament was reserved for her.

"She was her father's only child, and he was a widower; so that all his hopes were centered in her alone. Her fear of God made her mind beautiful, and her walk and conversation as becometh godliness. Her father, also, bore himself tenderly towards her predilections for the persecuted preachers, thinking thereby the more easily to win her over to his views, not finding in his heart to exercise harsh authority over such a child. Sore, sore was her heart, as she thought on her exiled lover and her affectionate father, who lay in her heart together, and yet she must not speak their names together; than which there is no trial more severe to a true and tender mind. To sit beside her father, night after night, and not dare mention the name of him over whom she brooded the livelong day, was both a great trial, and seemed likewise to her pure conscience as a great deception. But aye she hoped for better days, and found her refuge in faith and trust upon a good and gracious Providence. But Providence, though good and gracious unto all who put their trust therein, is oft pleased to try the people of the Lord, and make them perfect through sufferings; which truly befel this faithful but much tried lady "Her father, seeing the hopes of his family centered in his only daughter, naturally longed to see her united to some honorable and worthy man, which, above all things, she feared and sought to prevent, well knowing that the man to whom she had betrothed herself could not be he. Her father's official rank and good estate made her hand to be sought by young men of high family, with whom he would have been glad to see her united, but her own disinclination, to the cause of which we must remain a stranger, continually stood in the way, until, at length, what at first he respected as a woman's right, he came at length to treat as a child's perverseness; and being accustomed to obedience, as the companion and colleague of arbitrary men, leagued in the bad resolution of bowing a nation's will to the service of God he was tender upon the point of his authority, especially over a child whom he had so cherished in his bosom.—At length, when his patience was well nigh worn out, the eldest son of a noble family paid his court to the betrothed maiden, and her father resolved that he should not be gainsaid. When she saw that there was no escape from her father's stern and obstinate purpose, she resolved to lay before him the secret of her heart. Terrible was the struggle, for she dreaded her father's wrath; and yet at times she would hope for a father's kindness. But when he heard that she had given her affections to the man who had defied his authority, and set at nought the proclamation of the state, his wrath knew no bounds. His dignity as chief magistrate, which had been severely by that young man; his religion, which had been contended against by him and his fathers; his prospect of allying his family to the nobles of the land; and, above all, the joy of heart which he had set upon his beautiful, his obedient, and his only child, arose together in his mind, and made him sternly resolve that she should not have for a husband the man of her own choice. It was in vain she pleaded a woman's right to remain unmarried if she pleased. It was in vain she pleaded a Christian woman's duty not to violate her faith, nor yet to give her hand to one, while her will remained another's. When she found her father unrelenting, and that he would oblige her, upon her obedience, to marry the man of his choice, she felt that she had a duty to perform like unto him whom he would make her husband. But whether God would, in her case, teach unto all young maidens a lesson how they betrothed themselves without her father's consent, or whether he would show to betrothed maidens an example of true-heartedness and faithfulness to their plighted troth, it was so ordered that this pious and dutiful child should find both a hard-hearted father and a hard-hearted husband, who vainly thought that her after-kindness would atone for their present cruelty. But, alas! it fared to her and them as she had told them beforehand, that they were mingling poison in their cup, and together a father and a husband, compassing her death. Oh, that this tale of sorrow might prevent such deeds of stern authority and unrelenting wilfulness! This young woman, who had borne a lover's peril of death, and a lover's exile from his land, and hidden her sorrows in her breast, without a witness, through the strength of her faith, could not bear the unnatural state in which she now found herself placed, but passed away without an earthly friend,—Resignation to the will of God, and a conscience void of offence, bore her spirits up, and supported her constitution for the space of twelve months only, when she died, without a disease, of a blighted and withered heart. Yet, not until she had brought into this world of sorrow an infant daughter, to whom she left this legacy written with dying hand:—"I bequeathed my infant daughter, so long as she is spared to this world, to the care of William Guthrie, if ever he should return to his native land; and I give him a charge before God to bring up my child in the faith of her mother, for which I die a martyr, as he lives a banished man."

"This—all this misery, had passed unknown to her faithful lover, who had no means of intercourse with his own land, and least of all with that how even it from which his death-warrant had issued and vigilant search gone out against him. But shortly after these things were consummated, a full opportunity was given to him and every brave-hearted exile, to take share in that great demonstration which was made by William of Orange for the Protestant cause in Britain. Without delay, William Guthrie hastened to Edinburgh, where all the faithful sufferers for the truth were now overwhelmed with joy. But, for him, alas! there awaited in that place only sorrow upon sorrow. Sorrow, they say, will in a knight cover the head of youth with the snows of age; sorrow, they say, will at once loose the silver chord of life, and break the golden pitcher at the fountain: and surely hardly less wonderful was the change wrought on William Guthrie's heart, which grew cold to the land of his fathers, and indifferent to the church for which the house of his fathers had suffered so much.

"For in his absence, also, his cousin, or brother, I wot not which, the persecuted minister of Fenwick, and author of the "Trial of the Saving Interest in Christ," with other principal works of practical godliness, had been violently ejected from his parish, and died of sorrow for the suffering church. Wherefore the youth said, he would turn his back upon the cruel land for ever, and with his staff go forth and seek more genial heavens. They sought to divert his grief, but it was in vain; they sought to stir him up to exercise his gift and calling of a minister, but it was in vain.—His faculties were all absorbed in the greatness of his grief, and the vigour of his heart was gone. One thing only bound him to that cruel city, the charge he had received of the infant child, whom God spared only for a short season after his arrival, and then removed to himself. Upon this, true to his purpose, he took his staff in his hand and turned his face towards England, which hath often yielded shelter since to many a Scotsman, tossed in his own land with envious and cruel tempests; and by the way he turned into the town of Dumfries, being desirous to take leave of some of his kindred before leaving his native land for ever. His friends soon saw of what disease he was pining, and being men of feeling, they gave themselves to comfort and heal him. Being also men truly devoted to the church, they grieved that one who had proved himself so faithful and true, should thus be lost from her service. They meditated, therefore how they might win him back unto God and to his duty, from this selfish grief which had overclouded all his judgement. But wisely hiding their intent, they seemed only to protract his visit by friendly and familiar attention, taking him from place to place, to show him the monuments of those who, in the much persecuted dale of the Nith, had sealed their testimony with their blood; skilfully seeking to awaken the devotion of the martyr, that it might contend with the sorrow of the broken-hearted lover And from day to day, as thus they endeavoured to solace and divert his grief, they would point out to him how, now that the church had gotten rest, she was threatened with a hardly less grievous evil, arising out of the want of well educated and well principled ministers, who had been mostly cut off by martyrdom, imprisonment or exile. And as they spoke to him of these things, they would gently, as he could bear, press upon him their grief and disappointment that he was fitted by his learning and devotedness to be an example and a help to many, should thus surrender himself to unavailing grief, and forsake the church which his fathers had loved unto the death. And being now removed from Edinburgh, the scene of his sufferings, the seat of business and bustle and hard-hearted men, and dwelling amongst the quiet scenes and noble recollections of his country, he felt a calm and repose of soul which made it pleasant to abide amongst his friends.

"Now, in the neighborhood of Dumfries, there is a parish called Irongray, and in the remote parts of this parish is a sequestered hollow amongst the hills, looking to the south and west, whence least danger came, but on every other side surrounded with summits which commanded the whole of Nithsdale, the foot of Annandale, and a great part of Galloway. In this hollow are to be seen at this day, nearly as they were used, tables and seats cut out of stone, at which the persecuted people of the country were wont to assemble from the face of their enemies, and meet their pastors, who came forth from their caves and dens of the earth to administer to them the precious memorials of the dying love of our Lord; for which they are called, to this day, the Communion Tables of Irongray. And as they were filled by one company after another, some were stationed upon the summits round about to keep watch against the approach of their persecutors. To these Communion Tables of Irongray would William Guthrie wander forth and meditate upon the days of old; and then there would come over his heart a questioning of his backwardness and opposition to the work of the Lord, like the voice which spoke to Elias in the cliff of the rock of Sinai, saying, "What dost thou here, Elias?" Now, it so happened at that time, that the faithful people of Irongray were without a pastor, and God was preparing to give them one according to his own mind. Little wist William Guthrie why God permitted that darkness of his glory, and hiding his face, in his soul. Little knew he for what end God had recovered him from Edinburgh, and from Angus, the seat of his fathers, driven him from his station, and tossed him like a ball in a wide country. Little thought he wherefore he was turned aside from his heedless course, and drawn and kept for a season at Dumfries.

"The people of Irongray, as I said, were in the south, like the people of Fenwick in the west, a home and a rallying-place unto the distressed of the Lord; and, if aught under heaven, or in the providence of God, could hallow a spot, which may not be until Jerusalem be rebuilt, and his foot stand upon the Mount of Olives, then would these communion tables of stone, from which so many saints—famishing saints—were fed with heavenly food, have hallowed the parish of Irongray. But though there may not be any consecrated places under this dispensation, there is a Providence, be assured, which extendeth itself even to the places where worthy and zealous acts had been done for the testimony of God and of his Christ. And in no way was this faithfulness, unto a well deserving and much enduring parish, shown more, than in that providence which drew this much-retried and faithful youth to their borders. Haply moved thereto, and guided by the friends of his youth, who longed for his stay, the heads of the parish came and entreated him to become their pastor, offering him all affection and duty. Whereupon our worthy was much pressed in spirit, and sorely straitened how he should refuse, or how he should accept the entreaties of the people; and then it was that "his heart said, "What are thou, foolish man, who settest thyself up against the providence of God? Hast thou suffered like Job, or like any of the cloud of witnesses? Wilt thou leave that land unto which thou hast received by commission to preach the Gospel? What would she then mourneest have advised thee to do in this strait?—How wouldst thou most honour and best please her whom thou believest to be a saint of God? Would it not be in caring for those with whom she preferred to cast in her lot, and unto whose society she bequeathed her child?" And thus, after sore strugglings between the righteousness of duty and the inclination of grief, between the obedience of the Head of the church, and the idolatory of a departed saint, whom he loved as his own soul, he surrendered himself to the call of the heads of the parish, and was ordained over the flock. Yet, so far as nature was concerned there was a blank in his heart which he preferred to remain a blank, rather than seek the fellowship of any other woman. Year passed over year, and found him mourning; for thirty years he continued to deny himself the greatest comfort and joy of human life, though drawn thereto by a true and tender heart; but after this long separation unto the memory of her who had proved herself so faithful unto him, he at length yielded to the affections of the living, and married a wife. Of which marriage,' said the venerable old mother who told me the history, 'I am the fruit."

Such was the history of her father; after hearing which, you may well believe, my dear friend, I was little disposed to listen to anything besides. My desire for traditions was swallowed up in deep sympathy with the wonderful narrative which I had heard; and I felt disposed to withdraw to my own reflections. But the worthy and venerable woman would not suffer me to depart until she had taken me to her own little apartment, and shown me a small picture, but whether of her father or of her husband, who was minister of the neighbouring parish of Kirkmahoe, I cannot now recall to my remembrance. She also showed me the Bible in which she was wont to read, and told me it had been the Bible of a queen of England. I took my leave; and not many weeks after I followed her body to the grave; so that this story, if it contain any moral instruction, may be said to be expired by the dying lips of one of the mothers of the kirk of Scotland. Farewell my dear friend. May the Lord make us worthy of our sires!

THE SWEARER AND HIS BOY.—A man, in an agricultural district, who was extremely addicted to profane swearing, was one day at work with a yoke of oxen near his house. The oxen not working to suit him he began to whip them severely, at the same time uttering blasphemous oaths. The oxen breaking loose from their burden ran to the house, while the owner in a passion pursued after them, and coming up with them at the house, began to whip them again and to swear as before. His little boy, at this time just old enough to talk began to prattle his profane oaths after him. No sooner did the father hear this than his feelings were thus wrought up to a lively sensibility. He paused for a moment, dropped his whip, and sat down and wept bitterly. A flood of keen reflection at once rushed down upon his convicted conscience, which produced such an effect, that he found no rest to his mind day or night until his sins were forgiven, which took place a few weeks afterwards.

Who was Jonah's tutor?—The whale who brought him up.

"What did you give for that horse, neighbour?" "My note."—"Well that was cheap."

The correlative to loving our neighbors as ourselves, is hating ourselves as we hate our neighbors.

No endowments of the mind are a sufficient justification for pride.

THE RE-SURVEY.

We do not intend to take up this subject again, but inasmuch as there was some discussion in the County Council about the matter, it may not be amiss to refer to it. Our own views we have set forth, and these are unchanged. The majority, too, of the members of the County Council believe that something should be done to establish the re-surveys and to reimburse the county treasury for the cost of survey.

Those who oppose action set forth that since the people of these townships did not petition for the resurvey that therefore they should not be forced to pay for it, although it is not denied that the resurvey was needed. It is also set forth that the parties who signed the petitions were not bona fide proprietors, only squatters, in many instances, and in other cases individuals whose names had been used without their knowledge, as is alleged in the case of Burleigh. In reference to Harvey that there was a petition is totally denied. This we feel bound to contradict, as we have good reason to believe that there was a petition, but we know the names of a only few who signed it. During last week we were in Harvey, and made some inquiries about this petition, and we were told that a petition had been got up; our informants saying that they themselves as well as others had really signed it.

We further learned that it had been represented to them that the government would order the survey and of course pay the costs. The same parties informed us that certain non-resident proprietors induced the promoters of the petition to undertake getting it up, they being unable to find their lots, which they feared the lumbermen would strip. This sets the fact of the existence of a petition at rest. We do not say that the petitioners were all bona fide proprietors; nor do we say that the petition originated with the proper persons. This is a matter of dispute. The council, however, we believe, acted in good faith, and therefore cannot be blamed. The costs they have paid, besides a little to the lawyers, and perhaps they have learned a useful lesson. At the late session of the County Council there was an effort made to apply to parliament for an act to enable the council to levy the cost of re-survey, but as it was the very last thing before adjournment it was not satisfactorily arranged. In the meantime the parties should be slow to incur more costs.

Small-Pox.

During a late tour through Enniskore, we were informed that the small-pox had visited several families, and had carried off one victim, Mr. Stoddart. Upon enquiry we learned that Mr. Stoddart had been in the hospital for the purpose of receiving treatment for some old sore, and had just returned, expecting that his sore was healed He, however, brought home the infection of this terrible disease, unknown to him, of course, and in a few days fell a victim to it. M. S. Dean, Esq., who sat up with Stoddart during his illness, not suspecting what was the matter, has also taken the disease, and according to report, is very ill. Mr. Dean's servant girl too has been taken down, and one or more families in the north of Enniskore.

On Monday last a woman from the neighborhood where the disease is spreading, finding her child unwell brought it to town, for the purpose of getting the Rev. Mr. Johnson to baptise it, fearing to allow it to die unsprinkled. So far does superstition still reign. When Mr. Johnson saw the child the pox was all over it, visible to all who saw it; and yet for several hours the mother had sat in one of our principal stores, —people passing in and out, and, as we are informed, children also playing around them. Such conduct cannot be too severely reprobated. Every one knows that this is one of the most contagious of diseases; and not only so, but very fatal, and on various accounts much dreaded, and if parents are so indifferent to the injuries they may inflict, they should be compelled to keep by themselves, and not mingle in thoroughfares with people from all quarters.

Parents too should remember that there are means to alleviate the effects of this disease, and therefore they should not allow their children to be without vaccination, which, while it may not prevent the disease, it will at least, do much to prevent its worst effects. What a pity, too, that parents should endanger the life of their child (and perhaps the lives of others) through a superstitious desire to have a little water sprinkled on it, as if any application of water would prepare a soul for Heaven.

Just as we go to press we are informed that one of the assistants in the store has taken what is believed to be small pox. We only hope that it may not be so.

Literary Club.

The evening the following subject will be discussed:—"Should the execution of criminals be in private or public." Leaders—Messrs. Dunnett and Hall. Members only admitted.

The next Session of the course will be given by the Club this night week in the Firemen's Hall. They will be assisted by several Lady and Gentlemen Amateurs. The programme, a copy of which we have seen, is really a good one, and will be out at an early date. We trust these entertainments will be largely patronised; they are of such a nature as to merit the approbation of the community.

Change of County Clerk.

From the minutes of the County Council it will be seen that Mr. Sheridan who has long been Clerk and Treasurer of the County, has resigned the Clerkship. Mr. Sheridan's advanced years and the increasing labors of the office, necessitating him to take this step. Mr. Edgecombe Pearce, who has been assistant to Mr. Sheridan for some time past, has received the Clerkship, and his connection with the business fits him for the position. Mr. Pearce has all along shown himself civil and obliging, which, we have no doubt, he will continue to be, and if at the end of a long career his resignation shall be as much regretted as that of Mr. Sheridan, his predecessor, he will have reason to be satisfied with himself. Those who have to transact business in the office will be glad to learn that Mr. Sheridan will still be found there

Social Tea.

The Members of Alpha Lodge, No. 385, British Order of Good Templars, intend holding a Social Tea, on Friday evening, February 8th, in their Lodge Room, over Mr. M. Moloney's Store. The public are respectfully invited to attend. Tickets 25 cents each, to be had from the members.

Loyal Orange Association.

The members of the Peterboro' County Loyal Orange Lodge intend holding their annual meeting for the election of officers for the current year, on Tuesday, the 5th day of February, instant, at one o'clock, p. m., in the Orange Hall, Hopkins' Block, Peterborough.

TRUSTEES.—On Monday evening the ballot to determine who should be Trustees, terminated in the selection of Messrs. Dumble, Graham, Cameron, Claxton, Lundy and Coulter.

Adjourned Meeting of the Senior Board of Instruction.

An adjourned meeting of this Board was held at Bobcaygeon on Friday last. There were ten candidates, but only seven certificates granted. The successful ones were:—

SECOND CLASS.—W. S. Knowles, Miss S. Germain, Miss S. D. Johnston, Miss Wilhemina Johnston.

THIRD CLASS.—Miss Eastman, Miss C. Sullivan, Miss J. E. Rothwell

Two were unable to obtain certificates, and one was withheld until an investigation be made of charges that were laid against the character of the applicant. This will take place on Tuesday next.

MADOC.—The Napanee Express says that government speculators have come in for a share of the land in the Townships around the celebrated Gold-bearing district. Sheriff Powell, late member for Carleton, having a grab of all the Government Land of Madoc, at the up shot price of $2 per acre. The Richardson Mine is in the hands of a company, but they cannot yet work it as it is in chancery. The Lawyers intend having a nugget first.

The Intelligencer says that blasts were being put into the rock, which overlaid the crevice or pocket, and after half a dozen had been put in it was found to be excessively rich, yielding $12,000 to the ton, and the dirt yielding $60,000 to the ton. The company now having the matter in hand are Benjamin Lombard, President of the 4th National Bank of Chicago, and Mr. S. C. Hardin of the firm of Cushman, Hardin & Co., of the same city.

THE REV. MR. BABIN, a clergyman of the Church of England, has lately been tried for the horrible crime of the murder of his sister. This sister it appears was a cripple and had been living with him, but it does not appear that she had been ill-treated.—He, however, under the pretence of sending her to a boarding school, gave her in charge of one Leblanc, a vile character, and she was never heard of more, until her body was found in a river not far from Babin's residence. There was no direct evidence against the prisoner, but circumstances were certainly suspicious enough to almost convince a jury of his guilt; the jury, however, took a different view and acquitted him.

HARD UP FOR A CASE.—At the recent election for the Township of Cornwall there were two candidates for the office of Reeve. One of them, Mr. Ranald McDonald, was elected by a majority of about 150 to 200 votes. It was discovered, however, that the successful candidate had, two years ago, entered into a commutation of statute labour with the Council of which he was the head. The work was to be done on a particular section of a road and to be completed within one year, and in consideration he was to be allowed five years' statute labor. This was called a contract and a protest accordingly entered, and the Judge declared the seat vacant.

The Marmora Foundry Company's property has been sold for $30,000 in cash and $170,000 in paid up stock, in the new company formed to carry on the work of taking the ore via Cobourg to Rochester and Peterburgh, and the company invests $600,000 in the enterprise.

Gen. Beauregard has written a letter to the papers explaining the views he expressed during the recent excursion of Congressmen to the South. He is in favor of the people applying themselves earnestly to the work of restoring their former prosperity, and, regarding secession and slavery as for ever settled, he says he will under no circumstances countenance any effort to revive them.

The London Free Press gets off the following:—"The fate of Ottawa seems to be trembling in the balance, if indeed, the fates have not already decided that it is to be speedily shorn of its parvenu glories. It is said from Montreal that a despatch has been received per Atlantic Cable, which states that a majority of the delegates in England have decided to move the seat of government to Quebec. Good bye, Ottawa."

THE HALLIDAY CASE.—The Maitland Distillery Case came up again before the Toronto assizes on Tuesday, the 22nd inst., terminated against Halliday and $47,000 damages. To those who have watched this trial, and read the evidence, the verdict will give satisfaction.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

THURSDAY.

The Council met. All the members were present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and confirmed.

Messrs. Gilmour and Carnegie who had been appointed a committee in connection with the Warden to see after the erection of the Drill Shed, having sent in their resignation,

On motion of Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Probert, the resignation was not accepted, but Messrs. Gilmour and Carnegie were requested to act under their original appointment until the Drill Shed be completed.

Moved by Mr. Walton, seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—That whereas the statutes of the last parliament of Canada have made it imperative on County Councils to establish a Board of Refuge within two years after the passing of the said Act—that the matter be referred to the committee on County property.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Peck,—That a By-law to provide for the payment of a reward for the apprehension and conviction of any person or persons stealing any horse or mare in the County of Peterborough, be read a first time.

(This By-law also went through a second reading in committee of the whole, and was finally passed on Friday.)

The committee on the Drill Shed having reported, on motion of Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Probert, the report was received and ordered to be filed.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Peck, the account of the expenses of the Peterborough Board of Public Instruction was referred to the Finance Committee.

A By-law fixing the remuneration of members in attendance in the Council, and also mileage to and from said meetings, was read a first time.

The Council went into committee of the whole on this By-law. It was read in committee without amendment. The rate being fixed at $2 per day and four cents milage per mile.

The Council adjourned till to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

FRIDAY.

Council met. All the members present. The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

Moved by S. S. Peck and seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That the resignation of Walter Sheridan, Esq., as County Clerk, be received.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Pearce and seconded by F. Peck,—That a By-law to provide for the payment of a sum of money, as a reward for the apprehension and conviction of any person or persons stealing any horse or mare within the County of Peterborough, be read a third time and passed.

This by-law provides for paying thirty dollars to any person or persons who shall apprehend and convict the person or persons who shall be found stealing any horse or mare in the County.

A Report of Committee on County property was read, and on motion of Mr. Walton received and adopted

On motion of Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Miller, the Warden and Messrs. Walton and Dunlop were appointed a special Committee to enquire into all matters concerning a House of Refuge, which is to be established in this County, and Committee to report at the June session.

On motion of Mr. Laing, seconded by Mr. Pearce, the report of the Joint Committees of the Town and County, on the state of the Otonabee Bridge, was received, read and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Scott, it was agreed to memorialize the Government to grant a sum of money for the purpose of placing the first 15 miles north of Burleigh bridge in a perfect state of repair.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Choate, the Committee on Finance reported.

On motion of Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Melville, the By-law to remunerate County Councillor's attendance in Council, the sum being fixed at $2 per day was read.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Peck, the Report of the Finance Committee was referred to a Committee of the whole Council. Mr. Pearce in the chair. Council resumed, chairman reported, report read in Committee with amendment. The amended report was received and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Coughlin, Messrs. Dunlop and Laing were appointed an Advisory Committee to confer with the Warden during the interim of Council Sessions, and also to make arrangements with a Bank, as they may deem for the best interest of the County.

Moved by Mr. Carroll, seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That in view of the incomplete condition of that part of the Burleigh road north of the Bridge, and with the view of affording relief to the young and thriving settlement north of that point, as well as of affording to intending settlers the important facility of a good road, that a grant of $100 be made by this Council for the completion of that part of the Burleigh Road from the Bridge to Hoyet's corner, the Town Council of Peterborough being already pledged to a grant for the same purpose, equal to one third of the amount necessary.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Laing, seconded by Mr. Miller, the Report of the Committee on appointments was received and read, but the motion of Mr. Dunlop for its adoption was lost.

It was then moved by Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Peck,—That the Report of the Committee on appointments to office be not adopted, but that it be referred to the Committee with instructions to amend it in such a manner as to include the names of the following gentlemen, as Superintendents for their several localities, viz.: Rev. Samuel Wilson for Otonabee, Rev. M. A. Farrar for Asphodel, F. T. Lumsden for Dummer, Rev. D. O'Connell for Douro and Daniel Donohue for Ennismore.

The motion was put and lost also.

Moved by Mr. Laing, seconded by Mr. Millar,—That the Committee on appointments to office be allowed to report the amended report.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, the Council went into Committee of the whole on the second reading of the amended report on appointments to office, Mr. Laing in the chair.

Council resumed, chairman reported Report adopted in Committee.

Moved by Mr. Carroll, seconded by Mr. Young,—That the Council of the Town of Peterborough be authorized to appoint a Committee to confer with a Committee of this Council in relation to the improvement of the Burleigh road and that Messrs. Dunlop, Walton, Scott and the mover be appointed on behalf of this Council.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Scott, the Report of Committee appointed to examine the plans and specifications produced by the County engineer was received.

These were merely plans and a report of the engineer in reference to placing a floating bridge across Mud Lake, the cost of which was computed at about $4,000. (See Report.)

On motion of Mr. S. S. Peck, seconded by Mr. Pearce, the Auditor's Report was received and read, and

On motion of Mr. S. S. Peck, seconded by Mr. Young, the Auditors' Report was adopted, and the Clerk instructed to have the statement printed in book form and attached to the printed minutes of last year.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, the claims of Messrs. Weller & Hatton, for costs incurred in the matter of the Resurvey of Harvey and Burleigh was referred to the Finance committee.

These claims amount to $407.36.

Moved by Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Carroll,—That this council do Memorialize the Governor in Council, setting forth the great injustice to counties from which towns have separated for Municipal purposes, owing to the fact that under the provisions of the Existing statutes the county is obliged to bear the whole expense of producing Registry Office accomodation and the heavy expense of copying all Records now fyled in such Registry Office, a considerable proportion of which accommodation and extra expense is for the Benefit of a Town so situated, but which town bears no portion of the burden of the same, as under existing statutes the arbitration first made is binding in after years notwithstanding that the expense incurred for the joint benefit of the County and Town have equally increased, an ammendment of the 353d Section of the Municipal Act of last Session is therefore urgently needed, in order to a proper adjustment of the burden existing for the joint benefit of the Municipalities so situated.

The Council adjourned to 10 o'clock tomorrow.

SATURDAY.

The Council met. All the members present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

The Warden read a letter from agent of the Bank of Toronto here offering to accommodate the council on favorable terms.

The Finance Committee made second report.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, the second report of the Finance committee was received and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Laing, seconded by Mr. Miller, a By-law to appoint certain county officers was read a first time.

The council went into committee of the whole on the second reading of the By-law. Mr. Scott in the chair. The council resumed. Chairman reported By-law read in committee without amendment.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Coughlin, that a memorial to his Excellency the Governor General on the subject of improving the Burleigh Road, be now read a first time.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Pearce, that this council seeing the necessity of a more direct and accessible communication with the back country by way of Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek, appoint Messrs. Scott, S. S. Peck and Dunlop, a committee to confer with the Town of Peterboro' and other municipalities interested: said committee to report to this council at its next session, the assistance the several interested municipalities are willing to give for the purpose of opening up said communication, and to give any other information respecting the same they may deem advisable.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Carroll.—That a By-law to repeal By-law 219 and make provisions instead thereof, be now read a first time.—Carried.

The Council went into committee of the whole on the second reading of the By-law. It was read without amendment.

On motion of Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Pearce, a By-law to provide for the payment of certain accounts and claims against the County was read a third time.

On motion of Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Miller, the By-law to appoint certain County officers was read a third time and passed.

These officers are:—

Trustee of Peterborough Grammar School, John Gilmour, Esq.

Trustee of Norwood Grammar School, Rev. M. A. Farrar.

Local Superintendent of Schools, for the Townships of Monaghan, Smith, Otonabee, Douro, Ennismore, Dummer, Harrey, Belmont and Methuen, Jas. Stratton, Esq.

On motion of Mr. Scott, a By-law to repeal certain By-laws and parts of By-laws, authorizing the levying of a sum of money from the Townships of Harvey and Burleigh for expenses incurred in the re-survey of the same, was read a first time.

A separate By-law to appoint County auditors was now put through the different readings and passed. The auditors are given above.

The By-law to provide for the payment of certain accounts and claims against the County, was now read in committee of the whole, without amendment.

The By-law to repeal the By-law levying the expenses of re-survey of Harvey and Burleigh, was also read a second time in committee of the whole without amendment, and immediately afterwards read a third time and passed.

The By-law to provide for the payment of accounts and claims was also read a third time and passed.

Moved by Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Walton,—That for the future, no accounts be received after the 3rd day of the session, at ten o'clock, a. m., to enable the Finance Committee to make their report.—Carried.

The By-law to repeal By-law No. 219 was now read a third time and passed.

The Committee on printing was now allowed to report. The report was adopted.

Printing, the same as last year.

A By-law to appoint overseers of highways was read a first, second and third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, the Council went into committee of the whole on the second reading of the memorial to His Excellency, in reference to the improvement of the Burleigh road. Mr. Pearce in the chair. The Memorial was read without amendment.

Moved by Mr. Laing and seconded by Mr. Miller,—That the Warden of this County give regular notice that the Corporation of the County of Peterborough will, at the next session of Parliament, apply for an Act to levy the sum of——dollars on the ratepayers of the Municipalities of Harvey and Burleigh to indemnify the County of Peterborough for the said sums, paid by the said County, for the re-survey of said Townships of Harvey and Burleigh.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Carroll,—That the motion be not now read, but that it be read this day six months.—Lost.

Here there was an adjournment of half an hour to allow the opposers of the motion to prepare what they they thought fit against it. During this time there was a lively discussion, in which several members engaged.—Several warm words were let fly, but nothing to injure the good feelings that characterized the proceedings of the whole session.

On motion of Mr. Lang, seconded by Mr. F. Peck, the Council adjourned till June.

The following is a report of the County Engineer, in reference to a bridge across Mud Lake:—

The desirableness of securing the trade and traffic of the country to the north of us, and diverting it into our County Town, has long been admitted, and to ascertain the best mode of accomplishing that end has occupied the attention of our public men for years. Several schemes have from time to time been put forward for the attainment of that object; but the physical difficulties presenting themselves, and the probability of a heavy expenditure of money being necessary to overcome these difficulties, have prevented any of the schemes proposed ever taking a practical shape.

The Bobcaygeon road being the most important of the several roads extending northward into the new settlements in the townships forming the rear of this and the adjoining County of Victoria, is the channel down which it may be expected that the principal part of the produce and traffic of the rear townships will proceed to market. This road has its Southern terminus at the Village of Bobcaygeon. It is only about ten years since it was first located, and has only been rendered a really serviceable road within the last few years.

During the summer months much of the traffic down this road is transferred to the steamers plying on the back lakes east and west of Bobcaygeon, but still a large proportion continues on to its destination by land, notwithstanding the very unfavorable state of the roads.

There can be no doubt about the probability of the greater part, if not the whole, of this traffic finding its way to the Town of Peterboro, were it not for what are generally considered the insuperable difficulties presenting themselves forming a complete barrier to its progress in this direction. The first of these barriers in a downward direction is the Pigeon Creek. Taking its rise in the Township of Manvers, it proceeds in a north easterly direction through the township of Emily and enters Pigeon Lake at its southern extremity. Its channel through the greater part of the latter township occupies low swampy lands, and the erecting of the Buckhorn dam converted the whole valley of the stream into what resembles a long narrow lake from half a mile to two miles in width.

The next difficulty in the way of the traffic proceeding to Peterboro is Chemong or Mud lake. It forms a long bay jutting in from the south western extremity of Buckhorn Lake, and extending in a south-west direction a distance of some twelve or fourteen miles, completely severing the communication of the townships to the north west from the town of Peterboro and cutting us completely off from the advantages we might otherwise derive from a direct communication with the village of Bobcaygeon.

To overcome these difficulties various schemes have been proposed. Bridges of different designs have been suggested, but none containing the vital element of cheapness, they were abandoned, or never favourably entertained.

The late W. S. Conger, who devoted much time and attention to the welfare of our country, applied to me about ten years ago for a design for Chemong lake, which would contain the very essential elements of cheapness and durability. I turned my attention to the subject, and soon after furnished him with a design for what I considered a good and serviceable floating bridge, the cost of which was estimated far below that of any other system.

Since my residence in Peterboro' the matter of this communication has again revived, and at the request of a committee of the County Council appointed last year, to consider the best means of opening it up, I have prepared the accompanying plans of my system of bridging Chemong Lake and Pigeon Creek.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BRIDGE.

The principle of the bridge is so simple and the plans sufficiently in detail as to enable any person to comprehend the object of the design. It is proposed to form longitudinal floats extending the whole length of the bridge from shore to shore of the lake. These floats will be formed of white pine timbers averaging about eighteen inches in diameter, and not less than forty feet long each. Connected at the ends with a two inch elm or oak pin or bolt, extending through the thickness of both timbers and keyed. Five of these longitudinal floats will be provided occupying altogether a space from out to out of twelve feet. Cross floats of about the same thickness will be placed below these longitudinal floats and bolted through both, from above the latter. The upper surface of the floats will be slightly flattened and the inequalities of their surface removed to receive the planking.

The planks will be placed cross-wise on the floats and be pinned or spiked down into the latter. A railing on each side for the safety of passengers will extend the whole length of the bridge.

It is proposed to sink good substantial cribs at the distance of five hundred feet apart, to which the bridge will be attached by chains. These cribs or piers will be placed alternately on either side and at the distance of about eight feet from the bridge. The object being to allow the bridge to have a certain amount of swing or elasticity to prevent any injurious action from the ice. At each of these piers, but on the opposite side of the bridge the platform of the bridge will be widened to twenty feet, to allow teams to pass. A reference to the plans will shew the position and necessity of this arrangement.

Landing stages will be provided at each shore, and a portion of the bridge will be moveable to allow vessels to pass when necessary.

ESTIMATE OF COST.

To enable me to arrive at something of an exact estimate of the cost of constructing this bridge, I made a survey of the shores of Mud Lake and took a line of soundings across to ascertain the depth of water. The shortest distance I found to be three thousand six hundred and twenty feet, and the greatest depth to be seventeen and one-half feet. On this basis the following estimate is made:—

5 longitudinal floats 12 inches diameter 3600 feet long.....	18,000 ft
Extra at passing places 2x12x7'.....	840 ft
Cross floats 12x12x12.....	2,160 ft
Extra at passing places 2x12x7.....	168 ft
Total floating timber, lineal.....	21,168 ft
Piers average 14 feet high.
14 tiers 56 ft each.....	784 ft
Bottoms and Tops 12x12.....	192 ft
	980 ft
Total 6 piers	5,880 ft
Planking 11x12x3-60.....	37,620 ft B. M.
Extra at passing places.....	4,980 "
	$1,600 "
Handrailing.
Rail 4x4x7200.....	9,600 ft B. M.
Braces, studs, &c.....	3,400 "
Baseboard.....	7,200 "
	22,200 "
Stone filling 30 cords.
31,823 lineal feet round timber 5 cts..	$1091 40
5,720 lineal feet flatted and squared 6 cents	916 80
21,360 feet board measure planking at $7 per M.....	641 20
22,200 ft. handrailing at $7 per M....	155 40
2 landing stages.....	160 00
Stone filling	100 00
Spikes	100 00
Bolts, chains, guards, &c.....	100 00
Total for materials, including stone filling.....	$3,664 80
1 Carpenter 180 days at $2 per day..	360 00
4 men 150 " $1 each....	600 00
	$3564 80
Add 10 per cent for superintendence and contingencies.....	356 48
Total cost of Bridge.....	$3921 28

Although each length of fifty feet, if separated from the rest of the bridge, would be capable of bearing ten tons, a load much larger than is ever likely to be placed upon it, still it will be seen from the construction of the bridge, and the mode of arranging and connecting the timbers, that it will be capable of supporting even more than this amount. The whole of the timbers being connected together from end to end of the bridge, a load placed upon any given portion of it cannot sink that portion of it to any extent without drawing on the whole structure to contribute to its support, so that the calculation above given of an isolated portion of the bridge will give a result much below the actual capacity of the bridge.

All of which is respectfully submitted by your obedient servant,

GEO. A. STEWART,
County Engineer and Provincial Surveyor.
January, 1867.

TOWN COUNCIL.

There was a special meeting of the Council on Wednesday evening. Present—the Mayor, and Messrs. Chamberlen, Leonard, Stevenson, Claxton, S. Dickson, Patterson, Doherty, Wrighton, and J. H. Dixon.

The Mayor stated that his object in calling the Council together was, that the County Council now in session, had appointed a committee to confer with a committee from the Town Council about the repairs needed on the Otonabee Bridge. It was therefore necessary to appoint a committee to act with a committee of the county in the matter.

On motion of the Mr Stevenson, W. A. Scott, Esq., a member of the County Council, was heard in reference to the object for which the committee had been appointed.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Leonard,—That this Council never expressed unwillingness to do its proper share of the repairs on the Otonabee Bridge when that assistance has been officially asked, but it is the opinion of this Council that if it is asked to assist in such repairs, especially when such repairs involved considerable expense, it should have had something to say in the expenditure of the money either by appointing a proper overseer or otherwise; they also think that the work should not have been undertaken at so late a season.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson seconded by Mr. Dixon,—That the following members be a special committee to confer with the committee appointed by the County Council with respect to the expenses of the repairs of the Otonabee Bridge, viz: Messrs. Chamberlen, Dixon, and the mover, and that they report to the Council at its next sitting.

The Council adjourned.

MONDAY Evening, 28th Jan. 1867.

The Council again met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—The Mayor and Messrs. Burnham, Chamberlen, Leonard, Kennedy, Patterson, Dickson, Doherty, Stevenson, Wrighton, Toole and Dixon.

The minutes of two last meetings were read and confirmed.

A copy of resolutions passed by the Burleigh Council was read; also, a letter from the Clerk thereof, urging the Town Council to memorialize the government to make a grant to repair the first 15 miles of the Burleigh road. The Clerk, on motion of Mr. Burnham, was instructed to draw up a memorial in accordance with the wish of the Municipality of Burleigh, and when signed by the Mayor and Clerk, to forward the same to the government.

Mr. Stevenson, as chairman Special Committee appointed to strike the Standing Committees for the year, reported as follows:—

FINANCE.—Messrs. Claxton, Chamberlen, Toole and Stevenson.

STREETS AND BRIDGES.—Messrs. Chamberlen, Dickson, Dixon and Doherty.

PRINTING AND PETITIONS.—Messrs. Wrighton, Doherty and Kennedy.

LICENSES.—Messrs. Chamberlen, Dixon, Burnham and Claxton.

COURT OF REVISION.—Messrs. Claxton, Toole, Patterson, Leonard and Dickson.

FIRE.—Messrs. Wrighton, Kennedy, Doherty and Burnham.

CHARITIES.—Messrs. Claxton, Chamberlen, Wrighton and Patterson.

The Report was received and adopted.

Mr. Stevenson, as chairman of the Special Committee appointed to confer with the Committee from the County in reference to the Bridge, reported that the joint Committees had agreed that the Town should pay as its share of the costs of the repairs, in proportion to the amount of its assessment compared with that of the County.

On motion for the adoption of the report, the votes were:—

Yeas.—Messrs. Burnham, Chamberlen, Kennedy, Dixon, Dickson, Doherty, Patterson and Stevenson.

Nays.—Messrs. Toole and Wrighton.

It was, therefore, read and adopted.

Mr. Burnham introduced a By law to authorise the Mayor to subscribe stock in the Wallace Point Road and Bridge Company.

This By-law received the six month's hoist on the motion to read it a second time.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Wrighton,—That the By-law be read a second time this day six month.

The votes were:—

Yeas.—Messrs. Toole, Wrighton, Doherty, Patterson, Dixon and Kennedy.

Nays.—Messrs. Burnham, Leonard, Chamberlen, Dickson and Stevenson.

The amendment was carried by a majority of one.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, Dr. Burnham was re-appointed Grammar School Trustee.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Wrighton,—That a By-law, entitled a By-law authorizing the Mayor to sign the contract for building the drill shed on behalf of the Town, be now read a second time in committee of the whole.

In amendment, moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Chamberlen,—That the By-law be not now read a second time.—The amendment was lost; and the original was then put and declared lost also.

The Council then adjourned to Monday night at half-past seven o'clock.

North Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society.

The Rev. Mr. Allen, of Millbrook, delivered the Inaugral Lecture on Wednesday evening, 16th inst. Subject—"The Battle of Life," when, on the motion of Mr. Sproule, seconded by Mr. Bennett, George Young, Esq., was called to the chair. The chairman said that he found himself very unexpectedly occupying his present position, but it was with very much pleasure he found that the Rev. Mr. Allen was present to give the first lecture of the season, and from the well known ability which he possessed, he felt quite certain that not one present would be disappointed, Without further detaining the meeting he would at once call on the Rev. gentleman to proceed with his lecture.

Mr. Allen on rising was greeted with loud and prolonged applause. He commenced by stating that the year just ended had been noted for great contests, both in the Senate and in the Field, indeed few more eventful ones had passed away. It was not, however, his intention to attempt to delineate the bloody battle fields where such frightful carnage had taken place, but rather in accordance with the subject he had chosen, confine himself to this theme,—"The Battle of Life."—a subject fraught with deep interest to every human being, as all had to engage therein. During an address of one hour and fifteen minutes duration, Mr. Allen secured the undivided attention of the audience, and in a clear and forcible manner, abounding in deep research, interspersed with well chosen illustrations brought the subject before the meeting, pointing out the difficulties, sometimes apparently insuperable, which many had endured, but these tended to develope and strengthen resources otherwise unknown. He considered perseverance could scarcely be over estimated, which History, both sacred and profane, amply testified In conclusion Mr. Allen said that we should not engage in the Battle of Life for mere human aggrandisement, nor for earthly possessions, nor for temporal power; if we did so, disappointment must be the result—higher aims than these should influence us. In a most impressive manner and well becoming his sacred avocation, he showed how we should engage in the contest, how it should be carried on, as well as the results to be achieved therefrom, and ended by hoping that all present would run with patience the race that is set before them, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith."

Mr. W. A. Morrow moved a vote of thanks to the Rev. lecturer for the able, interesting and instructive address that had been delivered, which was seconded by Mr. Wood, and carried amidst much applause.

The proceedings terminated by singing the Doxology.—Com.

The following letter has been handed us for publication, for the information of members of the Society to which it refers.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE:
TORONTO, Jan. 23, 1867.

DEAR SIR,—I have to acknowledge the due receipt of your letter of 14th inst., in which you request my opinion as to the legality of certain practices of Branch Societies in your county

I am of opinion that the practices you describe are altogether illegal. Amongst the things which may be lawfully done by Societies, you will find in the 48th Section of the Act 29, Victoria Chap 32, "importing or otherwise procuring Seeds, Plants and Animals of new and valuable kinds." Now, clover seed, although valuable, can hardly be considered new, and can hardly, therefore, come within this category, while plaster is a common article of merchandize. There could, perhaps, be no very strong objection to Societies buying clover seed and plaster, in quantity, and retailing it to members at cost price; if the Society lost nothing thereby, as, although the operation would, perhaps, not be quite legal, still good would probably result in the long run. But to receive the amount in advance, and to count it as subscriptions of members, and to make use of it in obtaining an apportionment of the public grant, is quite another matter. If the money so obtained is to be considered a genuine subscription, then it cannot be expended in purchasing clover seed and plaster, and donating the same to members of the Society, because this would be contrary to the legal objects of the Society, and you will find in the same section of the Act to which I have already referred that "The funds of the Societies derived from subscriptions of members, or the public grant, shall not be expended for any object inconsistent with those above mentioned."

The only remedy I can suggest is that the Treasurers of Branch Societies in making their deposits on 1st May, should be required to make a declaration that the amounts they deposit consist only of genuine bona fide subscriptions of members for the current year. If any person has paid in an amount to any Branch Society, with the understanding that he shall receive back the value of the same in clover seed or plaster, such amount cannot be considered as a genuine subscription, but is merely payment in advance for such clover seed or plaster, and cannot, therefore, be returned as a subscription and deposited for the purpose of drawing a proportionate amount of the government grant thereupon.

In the 62nd section of the Act already referred to, Consolidated Statute, you will find the penalty for making any such false return, viz., a forfeit of $40 for every such offence, and liability to all the pains and penalties of perjury.

I am, Sir,
Yours very obediently,
HUGH C. THOMSON,
Sec'y.

JOHN CARNEGIE, Esq.,
Sec'y Co. Peterboro Ag'l Society.

The President and Congress.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.

The President's Washington evening organ of yesterday says of the Administration:—

"If necessary, its strong and iron hand will be invoked to stay the course and prevent the consummation of Radical treason. The great oath of the President to protect and defend the Constitution will not be forgotten, and the people who sustain him with their 500,000 majority of the voting population, North and South will not forget him. Events have already brought the Government to the very verge of another revolution. If the Radical majority in Congress pursues its treasonable course much long

SPECULATION IN THE MADOC GOLD LANDS.—The statement is made both at Ottawa and Belleville that all the Crown Lands in the township of Madoc have been bought up by speculators. The keenness thus exhibited by moneyed men may or may not prove of advantage to the country. In most cases the buying up of wild lands by speculators has proved a public evil, and legislation has been attempted to put checks and limitations to speculative purchases. The principle, as it applies to agricultural lands, applies equally to mineral lands. As Sir William Logan long ago pointed out, we want a system which will allow the industrious explorer to reap the advantage of his discoveries, while greedy and obstructive speculators shall be checked. It will be found, perhaps to the public dissatisfaction when too late, that the lands have been sold on a plan that could have been tattered in the interests of the public.—Kingston News.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affection. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box

FENIAN and ENGLAND'S CHAMPION.—We hear that Heenan has again challenged England's Champion for a very heavy sum, but whether will be accepted or not we cannot say, negotiations are still pending, and should it come to a battle, our advice to all parties concerned is to be well supplied with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," the finest thing for bruises out, it soon cures sprains, and flesh wounds, and relieves pain almost immediately. Price 25 cents per Bottle. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

JOHNSON BRIGGS, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—I have been informed by Mr. Wilson of Brockville, that you are making a very fine Hair Restorative, (Prof. Velpeau's). I have used one bottle of it, and believe it to be a good article, you may send me one dozen by Express (and collect through them) to this place.

Sold by Druggists and Dealers in every part of the Provinces.

EVERY BODY SAYS SO.

That in all who have either used the article themselves or witnessed its effects when used by others; all such, and they are only fit to judge, are unanimous in the opinion that "Darley's Arab an Heave Remedy" is superior to anything of the kind heretofore or at present in use for Coughs, Colds, Thick Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses. As a Condition Medicine it has no equal; there is nothing in it which can injure a horse whether sick or well—nor need the horse be kept from working while using it; it is just the article which all who owns horses require, and which they should have constantly on hand.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hunt & Co. is on each package.

THE Subscriber respectfully informs the Commercial public of Canada and the British Provinces that he has at length succeeded, after years of experiment and research, in making a METAL PEN entirely imperious to rust from the acids contained in inks (especially so when used with Arnold's writing fluid), which for elasticity and smoothness of action over the poorest paper, stands unequalled.—Being Electro-Carbonized, they will outlast six or eight ordinary Pens, and are guaranteed not to cut through the thinnest foreign letter paper. The manufacturer feels confident that where the Electro-Carbonized Pens have been tried they will supersede all other makes, and respectfully solicits a trial of them.

A New Discovery better than the MADOC GOLD.

Notice for a Cold—Relief in five Minutes!

WHY do you suffer with a bad Cold when one bottle of Morris's Electric Invigorating Fluid will cure the worst cold in three days. It is far superior to any pain-killer or Liniment or Ready-relief. Try it once and you will not keep your house without it, for after all other remedies have failed it has cured hundreds of rheumatism, frost-bites, chilblains, burns, scalds, bruises, sprains, pains in the bowels, fresh cuts, lame back, headache and all pains internal and external. Sold everywhere at 25 cents per bottle. Retail and wholesale only by E. MORRIS, Peterborough, C. W. Guaranteed to give satisfaction or the money refunded. Every one should have a bottle.

Peterboro', Jan. 30th, 1867. 6

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed witho t assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who has the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

THE Edinburgh Life Assurance Company offers to the public the advantages of a Canadian as well as a British Company. They have invested a large amount of money on securities in this country, and the Toronto Local Board have full power, by an Imperial Statute, to take risks, make investments, and settle claims in Canada without reference to the Head Office, Edinburgh. Some of the old Policies in the Company, which became claims during the past year, were settled by payment of amounts double of those originally insured, in consequence of the large bonuses that accrued on the Policies.

"The Ottawa Citizen,"

Published Daily and Weekly at Ottawa.

I. B. TAYLOR, PROPRIETOR.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1867.

THE "OTTAWA CITIZEN," is the oldest newspaper extant in the Ottawa Valley—In a few weeks it will enter upon the sixteenth year of its existence. The time has therefore arrived when the Proprietor may appropriately offer a few remarks concerning the past and respecting the future. The Bytown Packet, the precursor of the Citizen, was first issued in the year 1845, and was continued until 1851, when its name was changed to the Ottawa Citizen. The Citizen has, therefore, under the two names, been published continuously for twenty-two years. Until May, 1858, the Citizen was issued as a Semi-weekly and Weekly Journal, when a change of proprietorship taking place, its publication as a Daily Newspaper, with a Weekly Edition also, was commenced. The connexion formed twenty-two years ago by the Packet, with readers and advertisers in all parts of the Ottawa Valley and Central Canada, has been preserved. With the growth and expansion of the population and resources of the Valley, the circulation and influence of the Citizen has gradually increased, and now the extent of the issue of both the Daily and Weekly editions in the Metropolis and surrounding districts is such as to give much gratification to the Proprietor, while it affords the amplest of guarantees to advertisers that their not

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured then when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

BUT TRUE.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

WILLIAM STORMS,

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Pints, $1.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Peterboro', April, 1866.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, as perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.50 in large bottles, and by Dunas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jest so!"—"Exactly I"—Sloan Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "out-beat" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or in vitality oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins again re and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" " " " I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" " " " I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" " " " I had lost all appetite—was so weak and emaciated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. " " " The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" " " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 284 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but as advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Ames, Wells, Fargo's and Herndon's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SHELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1863.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in circular engravings, bearing the signatures of C. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 5 cts. per bottle.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.

This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HELMSTREET, Chemist.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—For Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a choice and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, promoting everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the congestible lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to assume its natural condition, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, rendering the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Poetry.

"GO IT ALONE."

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

There's a game much in fashion, I think it is called Euchre,
Though I've never played it for pleasure or lucre,
In which when the cards are in certain conditions,
The players appear to have changed their positions,
And one of them cries in a confident tone—
"I think I might venture to go it alone."

While watching the game, 'twas a whim of the bards,
A moral to draw from the skirmish in cards,
And to fancy he finds in the trivial strife,
Some excellent hints for the battle of life,
Where, whether the prize be a ribbon or throne,
The winner is he who can "go it alone."

When great Galileo proclaimed that the world
In a regular orbit was ceasingly whirled,
And got—not a convert for all of his pains,
But only derision, and prison, and chains—
"It moves for all that" was his answering tone,
For he knew, like the earth, he could "go it alone."

When Kepler, with intellect, piercing afar,
Discovered the laws of each planet and star;
And doctors, who ought to have lauded his name,
Derided his learning and blackened his fame;
"I can wait," he replied, "till the truth you shall own,"
For he felt in his heart he could "go it alone!"

Alas for the player who idly depends,
In the struggle for life up on kindred and friends
Whatever the value of blessings like these,
They can never atone for inglorious ease;
Nor comfort the coward who finds with a groan,
That his crutches have left him to "go it alone."

There is something, no doubt, in the hand you may hold;
Health family, culture, wit beauty and gold,
The unfortunate owner may fairly regard.
As each in his way a most excellent card—
Yet the game may be lost with all these for your own,
Unless you've the courage to "go it alone!"

In battle or business, whatever the game,
In law or in love it is ever the same,
In the struggle for power or scramble for pelf,
Let this be your motto: "Rely on yourself!"
For whether the prize be a ribbon or throne,
The victor is he who can "go it alone!"

Selections.

A PRISONER AMONG CANNIBALS.

Between the Eastern and China Sea is the island of Formoso, which is over two hundred miles in length, and some sixty in breadth. It is at present inhabited by two distinct races—Chinese and Indians—the former occupying the northern and western coast, and the latter the southern and eastern. These two races are separated by a range of mountains running lengthwise of the island, and the two divisions are as different as the people—the lands of the Chinese being low, undulating, and arable, and those of the Indians rugged, mountainous, and in some d gree sterile. The Chinese are diminutive, timid, and industrious; the Indians athletic, fierce, and warlike. The former live by their herds, tillage, and peaceful arts; the latter by robbing, plundering, capturing, and making slaves of their more honest neighbors. A state of constant hostility exists between the two nations. The Indians cross the mountains in formidable bands, swoop down upon the Chinese, pillage and burn their houses, carry off their grain, drive off their herds, and make prisoners of as many men, women, and children as they can lay their hands on. These human captives serve the red men in a double capacity—first as slaves, and secondly as food; for the Indians are cannibals, and often feast on human flesh.

Some years ago, the writer of this statement, being in a merchant vessel, was wrecked on the eastern coast of the island; and four of us, half-drowned and considerably bruised, found ourselves clinging to the rocks and imploring heaven for succor.

As our vessel went to pieces upon a foaming reef, within about a hundred yards of the rocky shore of the island of Formoso, I managed to get hold of a spar, to which I clung with the tenacity of a drowning man. Three others got hold of the same support simultaneously with myself, and for a few minutes we were whirled about with terrible velocity; and then a huge wave suddenly landed us upon a low ledge of rocks, a few feet above the level of the smoking and roaring waters that madly broke against them. Though half-dead from exhaustion, and seriously bruised, yet the hope of life brought every faculty into active play, and in less than a few minutes we were all beyond the danger of being swept back into the boiling surf.

This happened not far from mid-day—the wind blowing a gale, and the rain beating against us in driving sheets. We could only see a short distance out upon the angry sea, though clearly beyond the point where our vessel had gone to pieces. We now and then detected some portions of the wreck whirling about in the surf, but nowhere could we perceive a sign of human life. Of the twenty-two human beings composing the officers and crew of the ill-fated ship, we were all that were now left alive; and as we looked at the frowning rocks above us, the awful destruction below, instead to the wild howling of the storm, and considered our almost helpless condition, on an island said to be inhabited by a fierce race of cannibals, we almost envied those who were sleeping their last sleep. Their earthly troubles at least were over, while the unknown future might hold for us such terrors and sufferings as would make us pay for death as a relief.

But still the proverb, "while there is life there is hope." gave us a little cheer; and thanking heaven for our present preservation, we began to toil up the rocks to see what lay beyond. We were so exhausted and bruised as to make our ascent very slow and painful, and nearly every step was attended with a groan of both mental and physical suffering.

A length we reached the summit of the cliff, and found ourselves on the edge of a heavy wood. We stopped to rest a few minutes, and then pushed forward for about a quarter of a mile, through a thicket of undergrowth. To our surprise we suddenly came in sight of a small, neat village of stone houses, scattered upward along the slope of a neighboring hill from the bed of a romantic valley through which flowed a babbling stream. We could see what looked like gardens, shade-trees, orchards, green lawns, and, far back, fields of pasture and tillage, the whole having the appearance of a high state of civilization. Could this be the abode of savages and cannibals?—No—never—impossible! And we shouted for joy at the thought that Providence had thrown us among a people who would not deny us the rights of hospitality.

As we were about to again set forward, with brighter spirits, a sad event took place among us. One of our companions, who had seemed the most delighted at the discovery of the village, suddenly stopped, sat down, pressed his hands against his breast, and complained of a feeling of suffocation. About the same moment he fell over on his back, and an examination disclosed the startling fact that he was dead. The fatigue and excitement had proved too much for the action of a diseased heart, and he had gone to join the spirits of those who had perished in the deep. As we had no means of burying him, we placed his body upon a high rock, took a few trifling things we found in his pockets, and in a more sad, dejected mood, set forward toward the village, with the expectation of getting assistance from the natives and returning to perform the last and office of humanity. But we never returned. We called him "poor fellow" then—we carried his fate afterward.

As we approached the village, we came upon a few Chinese laborers at work in the storm in an open field. On seeing us they fled with cries of terror; and in a few minutes the whole town was in a state of the wildest alarm—horns blowing, tom-toms beating, and men, women, and children running to and fro in great confusion. We stopped to let the excitement calm down, and were soon cautiously approached by a band of, some twenty-five or thirty athletic warriors, armed with bows and arrows, spears, matchlocks and knives. As they warily drew near us we held up our open hands, and watched them with breathless interest and aching hearts, for we could see they were the dreaded red men of whom we had heard such terrible accounts.

Physically considered, they were not an ill-looking set of men, being of good stature, with well-developed limbs and bodies.—Their skins were a bright copper color, and their hair black and long, sweeping down in large masses around their necks and shoulders. Their features I did not like, the general expression being too fierce and sensual. Their foreheads were narrow, their eyes black and snaky, their cheek-bones high and sharp, their noses large and arched, and their mouths and jaws huge and massive. They wore a sort of turban around the head and a strip of cotton-cloth about the body. These two articles formed their entire costume, and their only ornaments were large rings depending from their ears.

As soon as they had satisfied themselves that we were not armed and hostile, they came up boldly; and one who seemed to be a leader or chief, and whose only distinctive mark was a crimson sash around the waist, made signs to know from whence we came. I replied to him as well as I could; and when I made him understand that we were wrecked, he seemed highly pleased and hurried us off to the village.—There, after undergoing a close and troublesome examination from a crowd of women and children, we were locked up in a small stone house, which had but one apartment, and no outlet save the door.

Here we remained a prey to conjecture, till dark, when the chief and several warriors came in with a torch, and showed us some things that proved they had found the wreck. They then proceeded to strip us, and feel of our limbs and bodies, after the manner of so many butchers examining the animals they intend to slay. We remembered we were among cannibals, trembled with terror, and regretted we had not perished with the vessel.

Both of my companions were larger and stouter than myself, and one was quite fleshy. With him the savages seemed much pleased. They pinched and patted him, and nodded to each other with smiles—while he, poor fellow, with ashen, trembling lips, and eyes half starting from their sockets, looked the horror we all felt, but which no language could speak. Next in their approval was my other companion, but for myself they cared little; and for once in my life I thanked heaven for being small, thin, bony, and muscular. After this examination they went out, carrying all our clothes with them. In the course of an hour they brought us a large dish of boiled rice, and about a gallon of water, and then left us for the night. We had little a, petite for eating, as may readily be believed; and our feverish sleep on the moist, bare ground was filled with the most horrid dreams.

The storm abated about midnight, and the morning broke fair. At daylight six savages came into our prison with ropes, and proceeded to bind our arms behind our backs. They then led us out to a sort of common in the centre of the village, where most of the inhabitants were collected—nearly every Indian, male and female being attended by a Chinese slave of the same sex. In the middle of the area was a circular wall of masonry, about five feet high and sixty in circumference; and around the inner side of this wall was a row of fagots. The largest of my companions was now separated from us, and bound back to back with a Chinaman of nearly his own size; and then, amid cries of terror from the two victims, and shouts of delight from the savage spectators, they were lifted over into an arena, and the fagots set on fire. The spectacle which followed was horrid beyond description; and the shrieks, moans, and groans of the poor fellows, as the flames encompassed and blistered their flesh, and then literally roasted them alive, are ringing in my ears yet.

Being looked back to back, each one, as he retreated from the circular fire, pushed the other nearer to it; and their struggles in this way made a fiendish sport for their tormentors, who almost drowned their screams of agony with yells of laughter. When at last they fell down exhausted, they were left upon the ground to bake till the fire burned out; after which their dead and roasted bodies were removed and eaten, each one cutting off a slice to his or her liking, and devouring it greedily.—When all was over, my companion and myself were taken back to our prison more dead than alive—in fact, wishing ourselves dead.

We were kept shut up there for a week, and then he was taken out and roasted in the same manner, and I was left alone, the last survivor of the ill-fated crew. I starved myself as much as I could, for fear I should get into good condition for their horrid purpose; and after keeping me a week longer, my captors signified that I might take one of the squaws to wife and have my liberty. The female selected for my partner was old and ugly; but the horn of escape made me seem pleased with the revolting alternative, and thus I became a member of the infernal tribe.

For a month I was closely watched and guarded; but I affected to be so well contented with my new life, that by the end of that time their vigilance began to relax; and then I felt almost certain of being able to effect my escape to the other side of the island, and there finding refuge among another race. Meantime I had to be a witness to several other human roastings.

Of the cannibals of Formoso, I have little knowledge beyond those of the village in which I was for three months a prisoner; but from what I saw, I am inclined to believe the whole race are complete savages, without industry or art, and not a whit removed from the barbarism of their ancestors. It is true their houses and lands have a look of civilization; but these they owe to the skill and labor of their captives, whom they employ and destroy as suits their pleasure or caprice. Like the North American Indians, they are fond of athletic sports, and spend much of their time in hunting fishing, fighting, and marauding.—They have war-songs and war-dances, and believe in some sort of religion, which principally consists in propitiating the evil spirit by the most diabolical human sacrifices. Some of the women are rather comely in appearance, but their natures are fierce and intractable, and their moral qualities of the lowest order.

The three months I was compelled to remain with these savages was an age of horror, and did more to break down my constitution than previous years of hardships, exposures, and privations.

At last I managed to escape in the night; and after concealing myself two days in a hollow tree, I pursued my way, with perilous adventure, and reached a large Chinese settlement in an exhausted condition.—Here, at least, I was kindly treated and cared for; and at length succeeded in getting passage to Canton, and thence to my native land. But since my return I feel I am not the same man I was before, and the recollection of the horrid scenes I witnessed often makes me shudder in my waking moments, and shriek out with terror in my sleep.

The Ancient Americans.

From an able article in the North British Review based on Dr. Daniel Wilson's "Prehistoric Man," we extract some curious particulars concerning the ancient races inhabiting America:—

THE ANCIENT COPPER MINERS ON LAKE SUPERIOR.—Even so far north as the great lakes traces have been found of the operations of the ancient Americans ten centuries older than the Aztecs on the Mexican plateau. Despite the rapid progress of the Anglo-Saxon population west-wards, the shores of Lake Superior, overspread by the gloom of primeval woods, present much the same aspect as they must have done in the time of Columbus. The southern shore consists of rocky ridges covered with forests, and almost the only invaders of the solitude are the mining companies attracted thither by the unparalleled richness of the copper veins. When these rich veins began to be worked, fifteen years ago, the singular fact was brought to light that the miners had been worked by the natives in a very remote past, long before the ships of Columbus arrived in the western seas. Attention was first directed to the subject by Mr Knapp, the agent of the Minnesota Mining Company. Following up the indications of a continuous depression of the soil, he came at length to a cave a, where he found several porcupines had fixed their quarters for hibernation; but, detecting evidence of artificial excavation, he proceeded to clear out the accumulated soil, and not only exposed to view a vein of copper, but found in the rubbish numerous mauls and hammers of the ancient workmen. Subsequent operations brought to light ancient excavations of great extent, frequently from twenty-five two thirty feet deep, and scattered over an area of many miles. They extend over a tract from 100 to 150 miles in length, along the southern shore of Lake Superior; and similar excavations have also been observed on the north shore. In one of these excavations, in the neighbourhood of Minnesota Mine, a detched mas of native copper—measuring ten feet long, three feet wide, and nearly two feet thick, and weighing upwards of six tons—was found resting on an artificial cradle of black oak. The oaken framework had been partially preserved from decay by being covered by the water with which the trenches had become filled after their abandonment, and showed distinctly the marks of the implement (a narrow axe), with which its legs had been cut. Various implements and tools of copper also lay in the deserted trench, where the huge mass had been separated from its native matrix, and elevated on the oaken frame preparatory to its removal entire. It appeared to have been raised about two feet, and then abandoned, abruptly it would seem, since even the copper tools were found among the soil which had subsequently accumulated over it. All the other trenches, like this one, although in many cases thirty feet deep, had been gradually refilled with soil and decayed vegetable matter accumulated during the long centuries since their desertion; and over all the giants of the forest have grown and withered, and fallen into decay, and been replaced by new growths of woodland. Mr Knapp counted 395 annular rings on a hemlock-tree which grew on one of the mounds of earth thrown out of an ancient mine. And an other observer, Mr. Whittlesey, not only mentions living trees upwards of three hundred years old, now flourishing on the gathered soil of the abandoned trenches, but adds that "on the same spot there are the decayed trunks of a preceding generation or generations of trees that had arrived at maturity and fallen down from old age." Judging from these and other facts, Mr. Whittlesey considers that an interval of twelve hundred years has elapsed since the mines were abandoned; and that five hundred years more must be allowed for the time during which they were occupied and worked. This would carry us back to the second century of the Christian era; at which time, as Dr. Wilson observes, "the ancient Damnonian of Cornwall practised his ingenious industry by means of arts not greatly in advance of the [contemporaneous] miners of Lake Superior" It is worthy of remark that the condition of some of these works, when recently re-opened, indicates unmistakeably that the labors of the ancient mining population on the shores of Lake Superior had come to an abrupt termination. "Whether by some terrible devastating pestilence, like that which nearly exterminated the native population of New England immediately before the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers, or by the breaking out of war; or, as seems not less probable, of the invasion of the mineral regions by a barbarian race, ignorant of all the arts of the ancient mound-builders of the Mississippi and of the miners of Lake Superior—certain it is that the works have been abandoned, leaving the quarried metals, the laboriously wrought hammers, and the ingenious copper tools, just as if they may have been left when the shadows of the evening told their long-forgotten owners that the labors of the day were at an end, and for which they never returned."

A Question for Anatomists.

A most extraordinary and we believe unparalleled case has been brought to our notice by Dr. Hamilton, R. A. It appears that some time in November, Dr. Hamilton was called in to attend a lad living with his parents on James Street, in this city, and who had been suffering for some time with a sore leg which had been treated for rheumatism. Dr. Hamilton discovered that the leg was swollen, and that there was a lump like an incrustation on the bone, between the knee and ankle. After poulticing the leg, and opening it, there came out a number of small bones, beyond question the ribs and other bones of an animal of considerable size, but what the animal is, or how it got there, is a question that will, we doubt not, give good deal of trouble and research to determine. The bones Dr. Hamilton will be glad to show any professional or other gentleman who will call on him previous to his sending them to the celebrated comparative anatomist, Dr. Brown, of London, England, for his opinion. The fact is scarcely creditable that any animal such as the bones must have belonged to, could have obtained lodgment in the boy's leg. The only explanation is that it has been the growth of some larva deposited there while bathing. We confess ourselves unable to offer any solution or reason for the occurrence, but the facts as we have given them are beyond any question, and are authenticated by dozens of respectable people, who have known the lad for years. The part of the leg from which the bones are discharging is about three or four inches below the knee, on both sides of the tibea, extending downwards to near the middle of the leg, and as there are evidently a great many more bones to come away, it is probable that the deity of the animal may be ascertained; for until the bones of the head and vertebra make their appearance, it is not easy to guess what kind of animal could have bred and came to maturity in such a situation.—Hamilton Spectator.

How a Man Freezes to Death.

M. Pouchet lately read an interesting paper on this subject before the French Academy of Science. The author's inferences are as follows:

1. That the first phenomenon produced by cold is a contraction of the capillary vessels to such an extent that a globule of blood cannot enter; these vessels, therefore, remain completely empty.

2. The second phenomenon is an alteration of the blood globules, which amounts to their complete disorganization.

3 Every animal completely frozen is absolutely dead, and no power can re-animate it.

4 When only a part is frozen, that part is destroyed by gangrene.

5 If the part frozen is not extensive, and only a few disorganized blood globules pass into circulation, the animal may recover.

6 But if, on the contrary, the frozen part is of considerable extent, then the mass of altered globules brought into the circulation when the part is thawed, rapidly kills the animal.

7. For this reason a half-frozen animal may live a long time if moist ured in this condition, since the altered globules do not get into circulation; but if expires rapidly as soon as the frozen part is thawed.

8. In all cases of congelation, death is due to the alteration of the blood globules and not to any effect on the nervous system.

9. It results from these facts that the less rapidly the frozen part is thawed, the more slowly altered globules find their way into the circulation, and the greater the chance of the recovery of the animal.

'You are welcome,' as the empty purse said to the shilling.

THE GREAT DURBAR.

One of the most magnificent assemblages of principalities and powers that ever took place in India, met on the 19th of November at Agra, to do homage to Sir John Lawrence, Viceroy of India, as representative of the Queen of England. At this Durbar there were more native princes than ever attended the Durbars of the Great Mogul, and yet only about the third part of British India was represented. There was, as we have said, a great concourse of native princes (some of whom traced their descent from before the time of Alexander the Great), all decorated in magnificent and varied costumes, and glittering, not only with "barbaric pearl and gold," but with the most magnificent array of diamonds that was, perhaps, ever displayed at any single assembly in the world. These native princes consisted of two, or more properly speaking, three classes. First, the ancient families of the country, who have always, so far as they could, stood aloof from all invading and upstart dynasties, and who had never attended any British Durbar before. These are the chiefs of the Rajpoots and other pure ancient races of India, who have looked down alike on Mogul and English conquerors. The second class were the remaining chieftains of the Mogul empire, dating only some three or four hundred years back; and the third were the upstart Mahrattas and other plundering chieftains, who acquired great power and dominion about a hundred years ago, and who for a long time fiercely disputed the empire of India with England. It is a somewhat singular fact that the British government in India never had any trouble with the first class, and very little with the second. It was only the upstart potentates, who were angry that England could stretch farther and grasp more than themselves, that have seriously opposed British progress and authority.

Among the various ranks and orders composing the great assemblage, all are exceedingly tenacious of their dignity and privileges, and jealous of the slightest infringement of etiquette, it required a ruler as well versed in Indian customs and ideas as Sir John Lawrence to maintain order and good humor. The great point with the representatives of the high old families was to get the Queen's representative to advance, not only to the edge of the carpet on which he stood, but a few inches beyond it, so that they might boast of being more honored than the rest; but he, though he knew exactly to an inch how far to advance to meet each, and came nearest the edge for those highest in authority and antiquity, would not compromise the dignity of the Queen by going in any case an inch beyond. The great difficulty in point of etiquette, however, occurred when the new order of Indian Knighthood was conferred on a select few, and the knights took precedence in the order of their appointment. A high dignitary, who would far outrank another of inferior standing in all other relations, would find himself placed behind that other as a knight of more recent appointments; and it was only after the fullest explanation, that the Prince of Wales himself would take his place below an older knight, that they reluctantly assented to take the places assigned to them.

The excellent Viceroy gave the assembled half-independent sovereigns some very profitable advice, such as that they should travel over India and other countries to endarge their observation and knowledge, instead of shutting themselves up in their castles and devoting their lives to luxury or intrigue, and that they should open up their countries to the civilizing and enriching pursuits of commerce,

Such an assembly as this from all parts of Northern and Central India, under such enlightened and experienced auspices as those of Sir John Lawrence, cannot fail to do much towards the elevation and enlightenment of India.

Frightful Loss of Life in Orissa by the Famine.

The Times Calcutta correspondent writes:—"I have been unable to send you, because the Bengal Government still conceals it, as have been done in so many cases, the report of Mr. T. Ravenshaw, Commissioner of Orissa; but those who have seen it—and it must now be in Lord Cranbourne's hands—tell me that a picture more heartrending, facts more hideous, could not be given. That officer, who up to June believed in the mythical stores of grain, cannot be suspected of exaggerating horrors, which to some extent reflect on his own want of foresight, and still more on the apathy of his superiors after he was fairly roused; yet even he estimates the deaths in Orissa alone at from 500,000 to 600,000, and in some places he admits that three fourths of the population have been carried off. Orissa had five millions. Add the mortality of Midnapore, which was as severely visited; of Gunjam and Chota Nagpore, which were terribly, yet more mildly dealt with; of Calcutta, whose hospitals still tell so sad a tale; and of the other districts, where the sequelæ, at least, of starvation carried off many, and remember that the deaths are still going on at the rate of a hundred a day, and you will agree with the rough estimate generally accepted here that the number of victims will not be under a million. But it is cruel to telegraph to you, as the Bombay people seem to have done, that half the population, or two and a half millions, have been destroyed. The mortality among thirteen millions in the famine of 1860-61 was half a million only, thanks to the energy of Sir Geo. Edmonstone, his Board of Revenue, and, above all Colonel Beard Smith, that noble martyr to duty, a monument to whom Anglo-Indians are about to place in St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta. In 1838-9 when as little was done for relief as in 1866, the mortality in the Jumna Doab was 800,000. But the tale of victims in this Orissa visitation mounts higher than even that, as high as the greatest of all recorded famines in India, that of 1770. We may trust Mr. Justice Campbell and his colleagues who form the Commission of Inquiry to tell us the accurate truth, so far as it is now possible to collect data. They are at work on the records in the Board of Revenue, Calcutta, before proceeding to visit the scene of devastation. Meanwhile all sorts of authorities, official and non-official, have been asked for reports and information; but their statements, and the still more vivid regular reports of the police, are studiously kept back from the public. Some of the reports which I have seen, reflect severely on the criminal delay of authorities to raise subscriptions and import rice, and declare that no good will be done till the land tax is made perpetual, irrigation is encouraged, and the embankments are cared for, so as to prevent or modify the periodical inundations. This mail, I believe, takes home a despatch from the Government of India on the whole subject to Lord Cranbourne."

RITUALISTIC PRACTICES.—The more advanced section of the Ritualistic party have lately introduced amongst themselves two very decided novelties in the English Church. They are published at Oxford an "Anglican Missal," which contains the order of the Communion Service, without any portion of the Liturgy, and is illuminated as well as divided into parts, in exact imitation of the Roman Catholic Missal.—Nor is this part of the Anglican Prayer-book ever spoken of by Ritualists as other than "the Mass." "I have been to high mass," or "I am going to hear low mass," is now as common a way of speaking amongst the worshipers at St. Mary Magdalene, Munster square; St Alban's, Baldwin's gardens; or St. Matthias, Stoke Newington, as it is with the members of any congregation that is under the jurisdiction of Dr Manning. Another curious fashion some of the Ritualists have adopted is that of speaking to or of the clergymen who adopt these views as "Father John," "Father James" or what ever the reverend clergyman's christian name may be, instead of calling him Mr. Smith, Brown, or Jones. —Exchange.

THE ORGAN IN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCHES.—At the meeting of the Canada Presbyterian Presbytery of Montreal, held in Cote Street Church on Wednesday and Thursday, the subject of instrumental music was discussed on a question from the Rev. Mr. Cameron, of Lochiel, as to the truth of a report that an organ was used in Knox's Church in this city. This being answered in the affirmative, a good deal of time was taken up by the Court as to how the Presbytery should proceed under the circumstances. It was finally moved that a Committee be appointed to confer with the Session of Knox's Church with the view of having the instrument silenced forthwith and a stop put to such innovations. Nine members voted for the motion, four against, and five declined to vote. It is understood that the matter will be appealed to the Synod.—Herald.

HOW TO TEST COAL OIL.—A great deal of risk and danger might be avoided if persons will but examine the coal oil they buy before using it. Several notable results from this neglect, some of which have not been brought to light, have occurred in this city. The following method is said to afford an effectual means of determination whether coal oil is explosive or not: Fill a tumbler three-fourths full of moderate cool water, then pour half a teaspoonful of oil into it; stir them together; then hold a lighted match over the tumbler, and if it takes fire from the vapor, before the flame comes in contact with the oil, then it is dangerous, as good oil will not thus ignite, and indeed, will not burn readily when the flameing match is thrown into it; while that which has been much adulterated with benzine will emit a vapor which is nearly as explosive as gunpowder, and the oil will then burn freely. Kerosene ought always to be tested in this way before using.—Free Press.

CRUEL.—A young lad, a street news-boy, was brought to the General Hospital yesterday with both his lips frozen. The poor fellow, it is said, had been sent by a cruel guardian into the street, late in the evening of the previous day, under orders to sell a certain number of the Evening Journal before returning home. This he was unable to do, and going home, pleadingly told his cruel monitor of the coldness of the night, and the impossibility of his staying out longer. The woman without heeding his appeal again forced him out in the cold and the poor little fellow was obliged to seek shelter in a door step, where he was picked up in the morning with both lips badly frozen They will have to be cut off.—Globe.

We see it stated that the British Government has given the 'Cunard' steamship company notice that the contract with them for mail service, which expires with the present year, will not be renewed. The Liverpool Courier says the Government seems disposed to adopt the American plan of paying a certain amount per letter to every vessel carrying mails, instead of subsidizing particular lines.—Witness.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

The Imperial Parliament opened on the 5th instant, and on the 6th we have the Queen's Speech in our Canadian dailies; thus the Atlantic Cable places us within a few hours travel of the great metropolis of the world; nay, we may say within a few minutes. The speech is an interesting document at present, the time at which it was delivered being a momentous one. It refers to the satisfactory relations existing between Great Britain and the nations of Europe, and the United States, and a hope is expressed that peace may soon be established in Europe.

It also refers to the difficulties ensuing out of the Alabama claims, and tells us that a mode has been suggested for their amicable settlement.

We are also informed that an effort to mediate between Spain and the Republics of Peru and Chili has failed, and that, therefore, war still goes on between them.

The old trouble of discontent in the Provinces of the Turkish Empire are hinted at. These troubles will remain till the causes are removed and despotism blotted out of Europe and out of the world.

In reference to Confederation of the Provinces, we are informed that the delegates have agreed on conditions upon which a union may be effected, and a bill will be submitted to Parliament to carry out the intended consolidation of the several Provinces.

The famine in India also receives a share of royal attention, and Fenianism in Ireland, and a recommendation to discontinue the Habeas Corpus act in that unfortunate country.

The Cholera, and the Cattle Plague are also referred to.

A Reform Bill is promised and an extension of the Franchise, but to what extent is not mooted. It appears, therefore, that outside pressure has had its effect on the mind of the Government and it may be that even a conservative ministry will yield to the just demands of the people.

Another Reform that is pressing itself on the people of Britain, is something in reference to factories where women and children are largely employed, to alleviate the condition of both.

The health and treatment of seamen are to receive a share of parliamentary attention. In fact the speech is an important one, and it is a pleasure to have to record the fact that more attention is being given to the comfort and well-being of the subjects of the Empire than to the doubtful policy of extending a territory already unwieldy.

Railway arrangements, management of the sick and poor, matters of law and justice are promised to be brought before parliament; a very important measure is promised, and that is something to improve the condition of the tenantry of Ireland. The only thing that can be done is to grant them remuneration for improvements, and to remove the appearance of paying to the support of a religion that they perhaps despise. To make the whole contented and happy, the parliament of Britain would require to change their nature and their hearts. This they cannot do. Reforms, however, are needed, and it is to be hoped that much will be done to remove cause of discontent. On the whole the speech is an important one, and if the programme be carried out, the present session of parliament will have a claim to be called a Reform one.

THE CONFEDERATION SCHEME.

It is asserted by some journals that the subject of Confederation is arranged, and that a Bill will be introduced in the Imperial Parliament to give effect to the plan proposed by the Delegates. Certain modifications of the Quebec Scheme are reported, such for instance as the right of appeal by local minorities to the Federal Legislature. The school question is sometimes declared untouched, and again we hear of certain concessions on the matter. Very soon, however, we will be able to give a synopsis of what has been done. We need not expect any over scrupulous attachments to any scheme other than may suit those in power. It is to be feared that the delegates will consult the chances of office more than the will or desires of the people of Canada, especially of the people of Upper Canada. If the party that has so long held the whip over the heads of those in power make demands, even the most unjust, there is no reason to doubt that they will be granted, and we may rest assured that if the delegates have agreed to accept the Quebec scheme in its entirety, it is because there has been no outside pressure exerted. The subject of the right of appeal by minorities being agreed to we need scarcely fear. The Delegates are surely not so foolish as to entertain the idea for a moment. They must be aware that if this should be granted there would be a never ending cause for strife and trouble in the Federal Parliament. The Local Parliaments would settle before a three; their acts would have no weight or stability unless when there was complete unanimity; and if every bill that should be opposed by a minority would have to be discussed in the Federal Parliament, it would soon be found the wisest plan to have the matter settled altogether by the Federal Legislature. Such a course as this would frustrate all the advantages hoped to be reaped from Confederation, and would cause one of the surest ways of learning about such a reaction in the minds of right thinking men, that ere long Anti-Confederation would be the cry from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The public mind will soon be enlightened, however, as the Imperial Parliament has met and proceedings will soon reach us. Until we receive a full report of the deliberations of our delegates, we must refrain comment.

A New Governor General.

It is rumored that Lord Monck will not return to Canada as Governor General, nor as Governor General of the Confederate Provinces. The Duke of Edinburgh and Lord Nass are spoken of as probable successors; which of them will be, is not yet known.—Lord Monck, it must be admitted, discharged the duties of his office as satisfactorily at home and in Canada as any of his predecessors, and he showed good judgement in not embroiling himself in any petty or local matter. Those who are very desirous of having a man who would worthily represent the Imperial Parliament in British America, look to the Duke of Edinburgh, a Royal Scion. It is possible that our next Governor General may be the Duke of Edinburgh.

Referring to the report that Lord Nass will probably succeed Lord Monck as Governor General of Canada, the Philadelphia Press, which frequently makes intelligent comment upon British and Canadian affairs says:—"Lord Nass, eldest son of the Earl of Mayo, is now forty-five years old, has thrice been Irish Secretary, when Lord Derby was Premier, and is distinguished for his high administrative power. Ireland would lose and Canada would gain by his promotion! He is a nobleman of high culture, has travelled much, and is author of "St. Petersburg and Moscow." We incline to the belief that Lord Monck will continue Governor General of Canada, and as his previous relations with the United States government have been liberal and conciliatory, this may be advantageous in more ways than one.

Anniversary Services and Soiree.

The anniversary services of the Free Presbyterian Church here, will be held on Sabbath 10th inst. The Rev. Dr. Ormiston of Hamilton, will preach, at 11 o'clock, a. m., and 6.30 p. m., the Rev. Mr. Johnston, Wesleyan Minister, will preach at 2.30 p.m. The annual Soiree will be held on Monday evening, after which addresses will be delivered by Dr. Ormiston and the resident ministers. These services will be well worth attending. Dr. Ormiston is one of the ablest preachers of Canada, and as a platform speaker, he has scarcely an equal in America. Our readers will do well to keep these days in remembrance: Sabbath first and the following evening in the Free Presbyterian Church.

Warden's Supper.

We omitted in our last issue to give an account of the Warden's Supper which took place the week of the County Council's sitting here. We were unavoidably from town that evening, but we understand a pleasant evening was enjoyed, and with eating, the usual drinking not to excess, and a goodly number of speeches, the whole was very satisfactory, at least to the participants, for probably there may have been some others like ourselves, who would have been better pleased had they been present. Loyal toasts and good speeches were the order of the evening, as far as we can learn.

Bible Society Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro' Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society, will be held in St. Andrew's Church, on Thursday evening, the 14th inst., at seven o'clock, p. m. Addresses will be delivered by Mr. Johnson, agent of the Society, and resident Ministers. The society demands the special attention of all lovers of the extension of Bible Truth, and it is hoped that Peterborough will still, as it has long been, be ready to do its share in the good work.

Personal.

We learn with pleasure that Mr. R. H. Dennistoun, son of Robert Dennistoun, Esq., passed a very creditable examination at Osgoode Hall.

Mr. W. H. Moore, jr., has also been admitted after a creditable examination, and without the additional trouble of an oral one, to the profession of Law.

We may mention that Master Dennistoun is another of our young men that has been successfully prepared by Mr. King, the worthy principal of our grammar school.

Almost a Fire.

On Tuesday the "St. Lawrence Hotel," came well nigh being burned down. It appears that some whiskey had been spilled on the floor and some one after lighting his pipe, having thrown the burning match on the floor the spirits ignited and destroyed a considerable part of the Bar. The firemen were promptly in attendance, and by their timely aid saved the premises.

Didn't forget the wives of Volunteers.

The Council of Somerville at its last session, voted the sum of five dollars to the wives of the Volunteers of the Bobcaygeon Company, for the purpose of supplying them with a new (blue) dress; so as to unite the loyal colors of "Red, White and Blue" on the clothing of each volunteer and his loyal spouse.

The Bridge difficulty is at last settled. The committees agreeing to pay in proportion to the assessed value of the county and town. We trust that the two bodies will not run foul of each other again, but that each will be ready to accord a due respect to the other. The Town had a right to be consulted on a matter that would cost them so large an amount of outlay. Yet we feel certain that no disrespect was intended by the County Council. A little care in future on both sides will do no harm.

NEW PUBLICATION.

A SKETCH OF THE EARLY SETTLEMENT AND SUBSEQUENT PROGRESS OF THE TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH, AND EACH TOWNSHIP IN THE COUNTY. By T. W. POOLE, M. D.

The above is the title of a neat little book of 220 pages, which has been laid before us through the kindness of the author, Dr. Poole, of this town. It has been expected for some time, and now that it has made its appearance it fully comes up to our highest expectations.

The first chapters are taken up with a record of the early settlement of the immediate neighbourhood of the Town of Peterborough, and of the prominent individuals who were engaged in the settlement of the district; chapters 3 to 5 contain the principal events in connection with the survey and settlement of the town; chapters 6 and 7 relates the incidents of the Rebellion of '37-8, and consequent Militia organization. The subsequent chapters contain varied information concerning Churches, Postmasters, Reeves, Wardens, Justices of the Peace, Assessors, Collectors, Auditors, Town Clerks, &c., &c. In fact, we wonder how the author has been able to collect so many interesting reminiscences, and so much information in connexion with the early history of our Town and County and of every Township. The style of the work is easy and readable, and the information that may be received will well repay the reader. The price of the work (50 cts.) is very low and cannot be an obstacle to the rapid sale of the book. In fact every one who can afford to spend fifty cents should procure a copy. It is for sale by all the Booksellers in the County, and will be offered for sale by agents.

Board of Trustees.

No meeting on Tuesday evening for want of a quorum. Present—Messrs. Lundy, Cluxton, Cameron, Graham, and Coulter. Absent—Col. Haultain, and Messrs. Stevenson, J. W. Gilmour, D. W. Dumble, Dr. Poole, Dr. McCrea, Dr. Burnham. Complaints were loud and strong about the difficulty of getting a meeting of the Board lately. The absent ones, we suppose, ought to have been present.

Literary Club.

The second Reunion of the series will take place this evening, in the Firemen's Hall. The doors open at half past seven. Chair taken at eight precisely.

The Committee of the Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the following donations for January: Mr. O'Beirne, cord of wood; Mrs. Hamilton, parcel of clothing; Nicholls & Hall, 6 large loaves, and beef for Barchard and family who had been burned out on the 15th January and received into the Home; Mrs. Fife, Asphodel, 8 lbs. butter; Mrs. Romaine, quarter of mutton; Mr. White, butcher, quarter of mutton; C. Ormond, Esq., quarter of beef.

On Saturday last Lynch, McMahon and their fellow prisoners, who had been under sentence of of death, left Toronto for a residence of 20 years in the Provincial Penitentiary. We learn from the Toronto papers that their removal was without ostentation. They were put on board the Grand Trunk cars, in care of the Deputy Sheriff and nine turnkeys. They all ironed except Father McMahon. Lynch had been deputed to read a document that had been prepared by the prisoners to those who had them in charge, but was unable to read it for shedding tears. Father McMahon is 58 years of age; Lynch, 45; Quinn, 32; Slavin, 31; Wheelan, 36; Scool, 25; Hayden 20; all of Irish birth.

"Resolutions in favor of a more intimate union of the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have been passed by their several legislatures, and delegates duly authorised and representing all classes of colonial party and opinion have concurred in the conditions upon which such an union may be best effected. In accordance with their wishes a bill will be submitted to you which, by the consolidation of colonial interests and resources, will give strength to the sovereign provinces as members of the same Empire and animated by feelings of loyalty to the same Sovereign.

"I have heard with deep sorrow that the calamity of famine pressed heavily on my subjects in some parts of India. Instructions were issued to my Government in that country to make the utmost exertions to allay the distress which prevails during the autumn of last year. The blessing of an abundant harvest has since that time improved the condition of the suffering districts.

"The preserving efforts and unscrupulous assertions of treasonable conspirators have during the last autumn excited the hopes of some disaffected persons in Ireland and the apprehensions of the loyal population; but the firm and temperate exercise of the powers entrusted to the executive and the hostility manifested against the conspiracy by men of all classes and creeds, have greatly tended to restore public confidence and have rendered hopeless any attempt to disturb the general tranquility. I trust that you will consequently be enabled to dispense with the continuance of any exceptional legislation for that part of my dominions.

"I acknowledge with deep thankfulness to Almighty God the great decrease which has taken place in the cholera and in the pest which has attacked our cattle; but the continued prevalence of the latter in some foreign countries, and its occasional reappearance in this, will render necessary some special measure of precaution, and I trust that the visitation of the former will lead to increasep attention to those sanitary measure which experience has show to be the best preventive.

"Estimating as of the highest importance an adequate supply of pure and wholesome water, I have directed the issue of a commission to inquire into the best means of permanently securing such a supply for the metropolis and for the principal towns in the densely peopled district of the kingdom.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"I have directed the estimates for the ensuing year to be laid before you. They have been prepared with a due regard to economy and the requirements of the public service. You will, I am assured, give your ready assent to a moderate expenditure calculated to improve the state of my soldiers and to lay the foundation of an efficient army of reserve.

"My Lords and Gentlemen:

"Your attention will again be called to the state of the representation of the population in Parliament, and I trust that your deliberations, conducted in a spirit of moderation, and mutual forbearance, may lead to the adoption of measures which, without undue disturbance of the balance of political power, shall freely extend the elective franchise.

"The frequent occurrence of disagreement between the employers of labor and their workmen, causing much private suffering and public loss, and occasionally leading, as is alleged, to acts of outrage and violence, has induced me to issue a commission to inquire into and report upon the organization of Trades' Unions and other societies, whether of workmen or employers, with power to suggest any improvement of the laws for their own benefit. Application will be made to you for the parliamentary powers which will be necessary to make this inquiry effective.

"I have directed bills to be laid before you for the extension to other trades of the beneficial provisions of the factory acts especially reported by the royal commission on the employment of children, and for the better regulation, according to the principle of those acts, of workshops where women and children are largely employed.

"The condition of the mercantile marine has attracted my serious attention. Complaints are made that the supply of seamen is deficient and the provisions for their health and discipline on board ship are imperfect. Measures will be submitted to you with a view to increase the efficiency of this important service.

"I have observed with satisfaction the relaxation recently introduced into the navigation laws of France. I have expressed to the Emperor my readiness to submit to Parliament a proposal for the extinction on equitable terms of the exemption from local charges on shipping which are still enjoyed by a limited number of individuals in British ports, and have in anticipation of this step already admitted British ships to the advantages of the new law. A bill upon this subject will forthwith be laid before you.

"A bill will also be submitted to you for making better provision for the arrangement of the affairs of railway companies which are unable to meet engage. ments.

"Measures will be submitted to you for improving the management of the sick and poor in the metropolis, and for a re distribution of some of the charges for relief therein.

"Your attention will also be called to the amendment of the law of bankruptcy, to the consolidation of the courts of probate and divorce and admiralty, and to the means of disposing with greater dispatch and frequency of the increasing business in the Superior Courts of common law and at the assizes.

"The relations between landlord and tenant in Ireland have engaged my attention, and a bill will be laid before you which, without interfering with the rights of property, will offer direct encouragement to occupiers of land, to improve their holdings and provide a simple mode of obtaining compensation for permanent improvement.

"I commend to your careful consideration these and other measures which will be brought before you; and I pray that your labors may, under the blessing of providence, continue to the prosperity of the country and the happiness of my people."

Opening of the Imperial Parliament.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

LONDON, Feb. 5, (evening.)—The Imperial Parliament was opened to-day by the Queen in person. The following is the speech read from the throne by Her Majesty:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen:

"In again recurring to your advice and assistance I am happy to inform you that my relations with foreign powers are on a friendly and satisfactory footing.

"I hope that the war in which Prussia, Austria and Italy have been engaged may lead to the establishment of a durable peace in Europe.

"I have suggested to the Government of the United States a mode by which the questions pending between the two countries arising out of the civil war may receive an amicable solution and which, if met, as I trust it will be, in a corresponding spirit, will remove all grounds of possible misunderstanding and promote relations of cordial friendship.

"The war between Spain and the republics of Chili and Peru still continues, the good offices of my government, in conjunction with that of the Emperor of the French, having failed to effect a reconciliation. If either by agreement between the parties themselves or by the mediation of any other friendly power, peace should be restored, the objects which I have had in view will be equally attained.

"The discontent prevailing in some of the provinces of the Turkish Empire has broken out in actual insurrection in Crete. In common with my allies, the Emperor of the French and the Emperor of Russia, I have abstained from any active interference in these internal disturbances, but joint efforts have been directed to bringing about improved relations between the Porte and its Christian subjects not inconsistent with the Sovereign rights of the Sultan.

"The protracted negotiations which arose out of the acceptance by Prince Charles of Hohenzollern, of the governorship of the Danubian principalities have been happily terminated by an arrangement which has been sanctioned by the concurrence of all the powers signatories of the treaty of 1856.

Gordon Bennett, Jr., Offers his Yacht to Prince Alfred.

LONDON, Jan. 28th.—The following correspondence between James Gordon Bennett, Jr., and His Royal Highness Prince Alfred, has been permitted to be published as the sentiment expressed in His Highness's letter are of an interesting character and intended to show the feeling of England towards the United States:—

COWES, Dec. 21st.—Your Royal Highness: At Lord Leuner's dinner on Friday last, you were pleased to match your yacht the Viking to sail with the Henrietta around the Isle of Wight next August for a cup worth £100. I could not say so then, because I was bound to make the match proposed; but, in fact, this arrangement will somewhat interfere with the disposition which I had determined to make of my yacht in case she should win the ocean race. I beg that you will accept as a New Year's gift to an English yachtsman, from an American yachtsman, the Henrietta, as she now lies in perfect order off Cowes, and I have instructed Capt. Samuels to hold her subject to your orders. The unbounded hospitality with which the American yachtsmen have been received by all classes in England, will always be remembered in the United States with the warmest gratitude, and I sincerely hope that you will not deprive me of the opportunity of acknowledging this most cordial reception by presenting the winning yacht to the representative of English yachtsmen.

I have the honor to remain, &c.,
(Signed) J. G BENNETT, JR

The Duke of Edinburg made the following reply:—

CLARENCE HOUSE, ST. JAMES, Jan 22, 1867.—Dear Mr. Bennett—I find it difficult to express how gratefully I appreciate the kindly feeling which dictated your letter of the 31st ult., as well as the splendid present which you offer to my acceptance, but most of all the delicacy with which you seek to diminish the personal obligation, under which you would lay me, by giving to your generous offer an international character. It is indeed this last consideration only which has led me to hesitate in replying to your letter, for personally it would have been impossible for me to accept so costly a present, but I felt bound fully to consider the question in too light in which you were good enough to place it, and, if on full consideration, I feel compelled to decline your generous offer, I trust that neither you nor your gallant competitors, nor your countrymen at large will believe that the yachtsmen of England less appreciate or less reciprocate the feeling of good-fellowship which prompted the offer. The Henrietta is a vessel which any man may be proud to possess and I trust that she may long continue in the hands in which she has accomplished so triumphant a success. We must do our best to find a rival to her, and in common with all Englishmen, I sincerely hope that such friendly rivalry may be the only description of contest in which our respective may engaged. It has given us great pleasure to offer a cordial reception to you and your companions in England, and I feel assured that if my professional duties and command of one of Her Majesty's ships should ever take me to your shores, I should there meet on the part of my brother seamen with a reception not less hearty than that which we have been happy to afford you here.

Believe me yours sincerely,
(Signed) ALFRED.

Canadian Railway Traffic for 1866.

An Official Statement has just been published showing the earnings of the several Railways of Canada during the year 1866. There are thirteen Railway Companies—two closed and eleven in operation—independent of each other. The joint earnings of the eleven roads in operation were, from Passengers $4,290,776; from Freight $6,221,108; and from Mails and Sundries $457,079.—Total earnings in 1866, $10,968,963, against $10,793,378 in 1865.

The earnings of the several Roads were as follows:—

	MILES.	EARNINGS. 1866.
Grand Trunk,	1,377	$6,639,260
Great Western,	345	3,261,402
Northern,	94	512,872
Brockville & Ottawa,	86	111,096
Port Hope and L. & B.,	64	178,512
Prescott & Ottawa	54	104,420
London & Pt Stanley,	25	33,490
Welland,	25	106,044
Carillon & Grenville	12	9,969
St. Lawrence & Industrie,	12	6,008
Total,	2,094	$10,068,953

It will be seen from these Returns that while the Great Western earned $9,462 per mile during the year, and the Northern $5,426 per mile—the Grand Trunk only earned $4,821 per mile.

A CLERGYMAN CONVICTED.—The Rev. Joel Lindsley, like the Rev. Mr. Rabin, has been on trial charged with murder, but the result has been less fortunate for him than that of the Ardmer trial for the Canadian clergyman. Lindsley, who was tried at Albion, N. Y., was accused of swinging his little son to death, and the jury finding him guilty of manslaughter he was sentenced to imprisonment in the State prison for four years and a half. A thrill of horror went through the court room as the physicians tested as to the condition of the child's body as seen by them after it was laid in the coffin. The witness swore that the boy must have received several hundred blows; that the body was covered with black and blue marks, the skin broken in many places, the nails of the hands and feet torn up at the sides, and even the soles of the feet and the backs of the hands laid bare in places.—Lindsley acknowledged that he had alternately beaten and "reasoned with" the child for two hours, when, observing a change, he laid him on his bed. The poor mother cried out, 'Why, Johnny's dying?' On this the father took him from the bed, and the boy died in his arms.—Leader.

CANADIAN GOLD.—We have been shown by Mr. O'Brien, of this town, a beautiful specimen of Madoc Gold, weighing 60 grains, extracted from a small quantity of quartz by Mr. E. Gregory, Druggist, Lindsay. We are also informed that gold has been discovered in the township of Lutterworth, between the Bobcaygeon Road and Gull Lake. Next week we will have something further to say on this subject.—Lindsay Post.

The following appears in an Ottawa paper:

"Chatham, Jan, 21st, 1867,

"Hon. T. D. Arcy McGee.

"Dear Sir,—In conversation with two gentlemen on Saturday evening last, Messrs. McIntosh and McDonald, both members of your church, your last letter to 'Brosse' was referred to, and led to the following:

"The person commonly known as 'Terry Flanigan,' now edi ng a Fenian paper in Buffalo, who here last Sunday attending the Catholic Church and acknowledged to two or three of his friends, in the presence of McDonald, that he was the author of the letter to the Globe, signed 'An Englishman.' Thinking that if this were true you would like to know it, I have taken the liberty of communicating the fact.

"Yours truly,
"C. H. ROSS."

From this it appears that "The Englishman" for whose respectability and standing the Toronto Globe "Vouched," in other words pledged the personal honour of Mr. George Brown, turns out to be "Terry Flanigan," the editor of the Buffalo Globe—a regular Fenian newspaper.

AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC has now arrived and is now ready for delivery, gratis, by the Druggists, to all who call for it. Our readers may be surprised to know that this little pamphlet which has become so much a favorite in our section has quite the largest circulation of any one book in the world, except the Bible.—It is printed in many languages and scattered through many nations as well as supplied to almost the entire population of our own vast domain. Every family should keep it, for it contains information which all are liable to require, when sickness overtakes them and which may prove invaluable from being at hand in season. If you take our advice, you will call and get an Ayer's Almanac, and when got, keep it.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affection. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box

If a person faint place him instantly flat on the floor, or bed on his back, and let him lay quietly for ten minutes or so, it is simply a fainting fit, and the blood flowing on a level will speedily equalise itself through the system. If you are troubled with rheumatism, pleurisy, pain in the side or back, cramps in the stomach, burns, frost-bites, &c., procure at once a bottle of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer", which is a certain cure for all such complaints. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S
CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,
*Prepared from a Prescription of S

{ John St., Clerkenwell, London, July 17, 1866.

THE Subscriber respectfully informs the Commercial public of Canada and the British Provinces that he has at length succeeded, after years of experiment and research, in making a METAL PEN entirely impervious to rust from the acids contained in inks (especially so when used with Arnold's writing fluid), which for elasticity and smoothness of action over the rougest paper, stands unequalled. — Being Electro-Carbonized, they will outlast six or eight ordinary Pens, and are guaranteed not to cut through the thinnest foreign letter paper. The manufacturer feels confident that where the Electro-Carbonized Pens have been tried they will supersede all other makes, and respectfully solicits a trial of them.

C. BARNARD.

The ELECTRO-CARBONIZED PENS are used by the following Merchants and Bankers in New York in preference, in many instances, to Gold Pens:—

SALE OF SAW MILLS!

AT

PETERBOROUGH,

CANADA WEST.

TO BE SOLD BY PUBLIC AUCTION, at "Cæsar's Hotel," in the Town of Peterborough, Canada West, at TWELVE o'clock, noon,

On Thursday, February 28, 1867,

Those very valuable Saw Mills, well known as

"THE DOURO MILLS."

These Mills are situated on the River Otonabee, within two miles of Peterborough, and command the greatest facilities for the manufacture and export of sawed lumber. They contain "An English Gate," "Stock Gang," "Slabber," "Yankee Gang" "Edger and "Butting Saws," complete, and twenty-three acres of land attached, and the pond has facilities for booming and holding five thousand saw logs at a time.

There are on the premises two good Dwelling Houses, Office, Sleeping House for men, Store House, Blacksmith Shop, and Log Stable.

The River Otonabee is a powerful, never failing stream, and as the Mills now stand they are capable of sawing out from fifty to sixty thousand feet of sawed lumber per day; with some of the more modern improvements applied, the quantity could readily be increased to seventy or eighty thousand at much less expense.

The railroad to the timber passes through the mill yard which possesses the best piling ground on the River Otonabee.

The taxes on the whole premises for the years 1865 and 1866 amounted together to $133 only.

Title indisputable.

TERMS OF SALE:—One quarter of the purchase money in cash at time of sale, residue in three equal annual instalments, with interest at seven per cent per annum on the principal sum, to be secured by mortgage on the premises and an insurance against fire for not less than $3000.

Application for further particulars to be made to Messrs. GALT & HENDERSON, Barristers, Toronto, and to ROBIN WAY, Esq., (at the office of Messrs. SHAW & WARD, Peterborough,) who will show the premises.

Toronto, February 2nd, 1867. 6-1d

☞ The following papers will please copy and send their accounts to this office:—

Belleville "Intelligencer," two weeks
Montreal "Weekly Herald," till day of sale.
Quebec "Chronicle," till day of sale.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. Throw, if not relieved, react upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in the condition, oppressed by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic,

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the princes of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR: Ayer's Pills answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever tried with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contact with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PETERSBURG, Va., May 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PEEBLE, Clerk of Hustings Court.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C., 5th Feb., 1854.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO HALL, M. D., Physician to the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and disorders. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I was called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe emphatically in originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promoters of the natural secretions when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and canal worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PLEASANT HOME, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in abscess rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By perseverring in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of rheumatic gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful disease it produces that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter, in Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

"The Ottawa Citizen,"

Published Daily and Weekly at Ottawa.

I. B. TAYLOR, PROPRIETOR.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1867.

THE "OTTAWA CITIZEN," in the oldest newspaper extant in the Ottawa Valley—in a few weeks it will enter upon the sixteenth year of its existence. The time has therefore arrived when the Proprietor may appropriately offer a few remarks concerning the past and respecting the future. The Bytown Packet, the precursor of the Citizen, was first issued in the year 1845, and was continued until 1851; when its name was changed to the Ottawa Citizen. The Citizen has, therefore, under the two names, been published continuously for twenty-two years. Until May, 1855, the Citizen was issued as a Semi-weekly and Weekly Journal, when a change of proprietorship taking place, its publication as a Daily Newspaper, with a Weekly Edition also was commenced. The connexion formed twenty-two years ago by the Packet, with readers and advertisers in all parts of the Ottawa Valley and Central Canada, has been preserved. With the growth and expansion of the population and resources of the Valley, the circulation and influence of the Citizen has gradually increased, and now the extent of the issues of both the Daily and Weekly editions in the Metropolis and surrounding districts is such as to give much gratification to the Proprietor, while it affords the amplest of guarantees to advertisers that their notices will be brought fully before the people. The aim of the Proprietor has been to make of the Citizen, a reliable and faithful medium of general news, and a trusty advocate of no sect political principles. He has spared no reasonable expense to provide for the readers of the Citizen the earliest and most reliable intelligence of public events. The Telegraph lines have been used sparingly used to convey an epitome of news from the principle cities in the Province and for the transmission of Reports of important Public Meeting and Demonstrations from the pens of the Citizen's own editorial staff. At the time of the Fenian raids in June last, the Proprietor despatched from his own office two special correspondents, to the scene of danger, one East and one West with instructions to

Poetry.

THE FIDGETY THING.

It's just as you say neighbor Green,
A treasure indeed is my wife;
Such another for bustle and work
I never have found in my life.
But then she keeps every one else
As busy as birds on the wing;
There is never a moment for rest,
She is such a fidgety thing.

She makes the best bread in the town,
Her pies are a perfect delight;
Her coffee a rich golden brown,
Her crullers and puddings just right.
But then, while I eat them, she tells
Of the care and the worry they bring,
Of the mayr-like it ill she endures,
O' she is such a fidgety thing.

My house is neat as a pin—
You should see how the door-handles shine,
And all the soft cushioned chairs
And nicely swept floors are mine.
But then she so frets at the dust,
At a fly, at a straw or a string,
That I stay out of doors all I can,
She is such a fidgety thing!

She doctors the neighbors: O yes!
If a child has the measles or croup,
She is there with saffron and squills,
Her dainty-made gruels and soup.
But then she insists on her right
To physic my blood in the spring,
And she takes the whole charge of my bills,
O, she's such a fidgety thing.

You have read of a spirit so meek,
So meek that it never opposes,
Its own it dares never to seek—
Alas! I am meeker than Moses!
But then I am not recorded
The subordinate music to sing,
I submit to get rid of a row,
She is such a fidgety thing.

It's just as you say neighbor Green,
A treasure to me has been given;
But sometimes I fain would be glad
To lay up my treasure in Heaven.
But then every life has its cross,
Moses' pleasures on earth have their sting,
She's a treasure, I know, neighbor Green,
But she's a fidgety thing.

Selections from Mrs. Candle's Curtain Lectures.

BY DOUGLAS JERROLD.

Mr. Candle has lent an acquaintance the family umbrella.—Mrs. Candle lectures thereon.

"That's the third umbrella gone since Christmas. What were you to do? Why, let him go home in the rain, to be sure.—I'm very certain there was nothing about him that could spoil. Take cold, indeed! He doesn't look like one o' the sort to take cold. Besides, he'd better take cold than take our only umbrella. Do you hear the rain, Mr. Candle? I say, do you hear the rain? And as I am alive, if it isn't Saint Swithin's day! Do you hear it against the windows? Nonsense; you don't impose upon me. You can't be asleep with such a shower as that! Do you hear it, I say? Oh, you do hear it! Well, that's a pretty flood, I think, to last for six weeks; and no stirring all the time out of the house. Pooh! don't think me a fool, Mr. Candle. Don't insult me. If return the umbrella! Anybody would think you were born yesterday. As if anybody ever did return an umbrella! There—do you hear it? Worse and worse! Cats and dogs, and for six weeks—always six weeks. And no umbrella!

"I should like to know how the children are to go to school to-morrow. They shan't go through such weather I'm determined. No: they shall stop at home and never learn anything—the blessed creatures!—sooner than go and get wet. And when they grow up, I wonder who they'll have to thank for knowing nothing—who, indeed, but their father? People who can't feel for their children ought never to be fathers.

"But I know why you lent the umbrella. Oh yes; I know very well. I was going out to tea at dear mother's to-morrow,—you knew that; and you did it on purpose. Don't tell me; you hate me to go there, and take every mean advantage to hinder me. But don't you think it, Mr. Candle. No, sir; if it comes down in buckets-full, I'll go all the more. No: and I won't have a cab! Where do think the money's to come from? You've got nice high notions at that club of yours! A cab, indeed! Cost me sixteenpence, at least—sixteenpence, — two-and-eightpence for there and back again! Cabs, indeed! I should like to know who's to pay for 'em; and I'm sure you can't, if you go on as you do; throwing away your property and beggaring your children—buying umbrellas!

"Do you hear the rain, Mr. Candle? I say, do you hear it? But I don't care; I'll go to mother's to-morrow, I will; and what's more, I'll walk every step of the way,—and you know that will give me my death. Don't call me a foolish woman.—You know I can't wear clogs; and, with no umbrella, the wet's sure to give me a cold; it always does. But what do you care for that? Nothing at all. I may be laid up for what you care, as I daresay I shall—and a pretty doctor's bill there'll be. I hope there will! It will teach you to lend your umbrellas again. I shouldn't wonder if I caught my death,—yes; and that's what you lent the umbrella for. Of course!

"Nice clothes I shall get too, tripping through weather like this. My gown and bonnet will be spoilt quite. Needn't I wear 'em then? Indeed, Mr. Candle, I shall wear 'em. No, sir, I'm not going out a dowdy to please you or any one else.—Gracious knows! it isn't often I step over the threshold; indeed I might as well be a slave at once—better I should say. But when I do go out, Mr. Candle, I choose to go as a lady. Oh, that rain—if it isn't enough to break in the windows.

"Ugh! I do look forward with dread for to-morrow. How I am to go to mother's, I'm sure I can't tell. But if I die I'll do it. No, sir, I won't borrow an umbrella. No; and you shan't buy one. Now, Mr Candle, only listen to this, if you bring home another umbrella, I'll throw it in the street. I'll have my own umbrella or none at all.

"Ha! and it was only last week I had a new nozzle put to that umbrella. I'm sure if I'd have known as much as I do now, it might have gone without one for me.—Paying for new noozles, for other people to laugh at you. Oh, it's all very well for you, you can go to sleep. You've no thought of your poor patient wife and your own dear children. You think of nothing but lending umbrellas!

"Men indeed!—Call themselves lords of creation!—Pretty lords! when they can't even take care of an umbrella.

"I know that walk to-morrow will be the death of me. But that's what you want; then you may go to your club, and do as you like; and then nicely my poor dear children will be used—but then, no, then you'll be happy. Oh, don't tell me! I know you will. Else you'd never have lent the umbrella!

"You have to go on Thursday about that summons; and of course you can't go. No, indeed, you don't go without the umbrella. You may lose the debt for what I care; it won't be so much as spoiling your clothes; better lose it; people deserve to lose debts who lend umbrellas!

"And I should like to know how I'm to go to mother's without the umbrella? Oh, don't tell me that I said I would go—that's nothing to do with it; nothing at all.—She'll think I'm neglecting her, and the little money we were to have, we shan't have at all—because we've no umbrella.

"The children, too! Dear things!—They'll be sopping wet; for they shan't lose their learning; it's all their father will leave 'em, I'm sure. But they shall go to school. Don't tell me I said they shouldn't; you are so aggravating, Candle: you'd spoil the temper of an angel. They shall go to school; mark that. And if they get their deaths of cold, it's not my fault—I didn't lend the umbrella."

"Here," says Candle in his M. S., "I fell asleep; and dreamt that the sky was turned into green calico, with whale-bone ribs; that, in fact, the whole world revolved under a tremendous umbrella!"

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF CONSUMPTION
BY THE
GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY
IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshoness Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died: I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c, and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced, Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE
GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annels of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Phials, $1.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "overley" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or in easily oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"• • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"• • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"• • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEIMWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"• • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, till I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.
Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Americus, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Glenwater, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and painters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 5 cts per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.

This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair-Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HELMSTREET, Chemist.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—For indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c, where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; it may be given, sure to cure, and safe in all cases, and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased vessels to their natural aim; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs are routed, outwardly the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

"The Ottawa Citizen,"

Published Daily and Weekly at Ottawa.

I. B. TAYLOR, PROPRIETOR.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1867.

THE "OTTAWA CITIZEN," is the oldest newspaper extant in the Ottawa Valley—in a few weeks it will enter upon the sixteenth year of its existence. The time has therefore arrived when the Proprietor may appropriately offer a few remarks concerning the past and respecting the future. The Bytown Packet, the precursor of the Citizen, was first issued in the year 1845, and was continued until 1851; when its name was changed to the Ottawa Citizen. The Citizen has, therefore, under the two names, been published continuously for twenty-two years. Until May, 1865, the Citizen was issued as a Semi-weekly and Weekly Journal, when a change of proprietorship taking place, its publication as a Daily Newspaper, with a Weekly Edition also was commenced. The connexion formed twenty-two years ago by the Packet, with readers and advertisers in all parts of the Ottawa Valley and Central Canada, has been preserved. With the growth and expansion of the population and resources of the Valley, the circulation and influence of the Citizen has gradually increased, and now the extent of the issues of both the Daily and Weekly editions in the Metropolis and surrounding districts is such as to give much gratification to the Proprietor, while it affords the amplest of guarantees to advertisers that their notices will be brought fully before the people. The aim of the Proprietor has been to make of the Citizen, a reliable and faithful medium of general news, and a trusty advocate of correct political principles. He has spared no reasonable expense to provide for the readers of the Citizen the earliest and most reliable intelligence of public events. The Telegraph lines have been unsparingly used to convey an epitome of news from the principle cities in the Province and for the transmission of Reports of important Public Meeting and Demonstrations from the pens of the Citizen's own editorial staff. At the time of the Fenian raids in June last, the Proprietor despatched from his own office two special correspondents, to the scene of danger, one East and one West with instructions to spare no expense in the preparation of reliable intelligence; other correspondents, too were engaged at different points; and it may be permitted in him to doubt whether any newspaper in the Province was better prepared to furnish the public with news from the Seat of War. A prominent feature in the Citizen is the publication every morning of Midnight Despatches per Atlantic Cable, and of other despatches, by the Montreal Line, from all parts of the Provinces, wherever occurrences worthy of note take place. The arrangements of the Citizen for the procurement and publication of the Latest Intelligence are such as to place it on the van of Provincial newspapers for enterprise and industry. The Proprietor will aim to maintain the reputation acquired, and will ungrudgingly meet all possible expenditure with that end in view.

Since the information of the Coalition Ministry have been but few party issues in the political world, and the political complexion of even the extreme of partizan journals has been [illegible] under the influence of the preparatory measures for Confederation. Political issues have been lost sight of, and the political Lions and Lambs have lain together in the same fold. The year 1867, however, will, no doubt witness a revival of political issues.—After the consummation of Confederation, new party lines will be drawn and new and great questions of public policy come before Parliament and the people. To meet these contingencies and issues when they arise, it is the duty of the faithful journalist to make diligent preparation. The aim of the Proprietor of the Citizen will be to meet the new state of things with thorough independence of action freedom from party bias. His efforts in the past are a sufficient guarantee, that, in future, no exertion or expense will be spared to make of the Citizen a faithful public journal, and a reliable medium for general intelligence.

Daily Witness	$3 per an.
Montreal Witness (Semi weekly)	$2 per an.
Weekly Witness	$1 per an.
Canadian Messenger	25c per an.

All strictly in advance, and the papers stop unless subscription be renewed.

On the 31st December, 1866, the Montreal Witness will have completed its twenty-first year, a period sufficient to render its character and objects generally known.

The Witness is devoted to the best interests of the people of Canada, temporal and eternal. It fearlessly grapples with oppression, infidelity, intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and public evils of every kind. It is connected with no party or denomination, and consequently has no support except from the public, on whom alone it relies. Its various editions are probably the cheapest papers on this Continent; and, though the circulation they have obtained is large, we think it might be, and hope it will be, much larger throughout the Provinces. To this end we rely on the kind aid of the friends of evangelical religion and wholesome literature everywhere, who, we hope, will help us in the future, as many of them have done in the past.

Canada is passing through a crisis in its history; the United States are still convulsed with the struggle for justice and equal rights; the map of Europe is undergoing great changes; Italy is claiming Rome, and Russia again menaces Turkey;—in a word, the times are full of interest, and the Witness gives special attention to the news of the day. It has also an extensive department for Commercial Intelligence and Prices Current, &c., &c., upon which great care is bestowed.

The Messenger is devoted exclusively to Temperance, Education, Agriculture, Science, Art, &c., and consequently goes free through the Post-office.

Any Minister, Post-master, or School-teacher remitting for eight subscribers to any edition, will be entitled to a gratis copy. For a mixed list, amounting to eight dollars, a copy of the Weekly or four copies of the Messenger will be sent gratis.

Subscriptions may commence at any time; and as the best season of the year for obtaining new subscribers is probably just after harvest, we hope ere long to have many lists sent in.

All orders, advertisements, and communications to be addressed (post-paid) to

JOHN DOUGALL & SON, Montreal.

To all newspapers publishing the above prospectus for a few times we will send the Daily Witness free for one year.

Marked papers containing the prospectus should be addressed to the Publishing Clerk, Witness Office, Montreal, C. E.

THE SEA!

'Tis like, so like, that I could weep to gaze
On thy blue depths, though pathless, boundless sea:
And thus recall one eve of golden rays,
I marked in gorgeous splendor sink o'er thee

Youth's buoyant pulse was busy at my heart,
And bright, unreal day dreams flatter'd there;
Visions and hopes, where truth had little part,
All vanished now to viewless fields of air.

Still beautiful—and yet since that far hour
How many an anguished eye hath gazed on thee
In the dread moment of the tempest's power,
When thou art grave to myriads—boundless sea!

And thou hast buried them, and murmured by
As though ten thousand hopes thou hadst not crushed,
As though young spirits, unprepared to die,
Had not in anguish through death's portal rushed!

My grief, alas, I have buried deep as thine!
The furrows on my brow were traced by care:
The world may slight—but why should I repine?
'Tis well her malice looks no deeper there

No—calmly tranquil I survey the past;
The chill dark grave of all that once was dear;
And smile as thou—nor dread the tempest's blast—
That buried wreck has left not nought to fear.

Selections.

THE ANONYMOUS LETTER.

To write an anonymous letter is ungentlemanly: of this there can be no doubt—nay more, it is mean—dastardly—skulking—depraved! But what could I do? Colonel Plinth was about to marry his cook

To write an anonymous letter is degrading, to say the least; it would require the skill of a sophist to render it justifiable—perhaps; and yet when Colonel Plinth was going to marry his cook——

A vixen—a perfect Saracen of a woman behind his back; and he a man of nice honour—who had gained golden laurels at Seringapatam—an aid-de-camp to Sir David Baird—my friend! The intelligence had come like a thunder-bolt.

To write an anonymous letter, except under the most imperative circumstances, is unquestionably atrocious. I felt that, even posted as I was,—with the most benevolent intention,—conscience—my conscience as a gentleman and an officer, would hesitate to approve of it. I mused—I determined to weigh the matter well; but the conviction fell upon me like an avalanche that not a moment was to be lost!—Colonel Plinth was on the eve of marrying his cook——

Rebecca Moggs! And he my brother-in-law—the widowed husband of a K.C.B.—a wearer of four medals, two crosses, and the order of the golden fleece—a man who had received the thanks of parliament—the written approbation of my Lord Clive—two freedoms in gold boxes!—a man who, had he nobly fell on the ramparts of Tippoo's capital, would have been taken home in rum, and buried in St. Paul's.

His fragment—his living remains—(for he possessed only one organ of a sort—having lost a leg, an arm, an eye, and an ostrich)—had resolved on what I considered a sort of demi-post-mortem match, with—what?

A blowsy, uncultivated menial, whose only merit consisted in cooking mulligatawny, and rubbing with a soft fat palm the wounded ancle of his partially efficient leg; the illegitimate off-spring of a Sepoy pioneer's trull; a creature whom my lovely and accomplished sister had taken from the breast of her dead mother (the woman—a camp-follower—received an iron ball in her brain from one of Tippoo's guerilla troops in the jungle),—one whom Eradne had brought up with maternal care in her kitchen;—a scullion!—and such a one to be Colonel Plinth's wife—to take the place of Eradne! Good God!

To write an anonymous letter is rather revolting; much may be said against it; it is one's dernier ressort; still it has its advantages, and why neglect them? Had Colonel Plinth not been what he was; were he but a casual acquaintance or a mere friend—then indeed——

But he was my brother-in-law, my brother in arms—in a word Colonel Plinth.

Had he been a man who would listen to reason—who was open to conviction—to whom one might venture to speak—why really——

But he was but as curry; yet not deficient in sense; but dreadfully opinionated—tetchy—easily susceptible of feeling himself insulted—careful as to keeping his pistol-case in such a state as to be ready for a moment's notice—a being inflamed in body, soul and complexion, by the spices and sun of the burning East.

To remonstrate with him would have been absurd; he would have cut me down with his crutch;—he had amassed three thousand a-year.

The cook was far from immaculate. A native-servant, whom I discharged in Calcutta for repeatedly staying out at night—but why expose the weak side of humanity? And another young fellow of her acquaintance, whom I pardoned for having robbed me, on condition of his frankly confessing all his misdemeanors. Besides, there was Larry the trumpeter—and one or two more.

Under such circumstances—conscious of his infatuation, I ceased to waver; the end sanctified the means; and I wrote him an anonymous letter.

She, of course, would make a point of having children—and then where were my expectations?

Eradne had never been a mother; the Colonel was the only Plinth in the universe; and, posted as I was—Eradne being the link—I naturally had expectations.

To say nothing of being nine years my senior, he was a wreck—a fiery wreck, full of combustibles, burning gradually to the water's edge.

The sun of his happiness would, as I felt, set for ever, the moment he married such a creature as Moggs—innately vulgar, repulsive, double chinned, tumid, protuberant.

Social festivity was everything to Colonel Plinth; but who would dine with him if his ci-devant cook were to carve?—Eradne's adopted—Larry the trumpeter's love!—I couldn't.

Therefore, under a sense of overwhelming duty to Colonel Plinth, I wrote him an anonymous letter.

Every precaution was taken; the hand was disguised—the paper such as I had never used; and to crown all, I dropped the important document in a distant and very out-of-the-way post-office.

Conscious of perfect security—animated by the cause I had espoused, I played away upon him from my masked battery, with prodigious vehemence. Reserve was out of the question; in an anonymous letter, the writer, of course, speaks out:—this is its greatest advantage. I took a rapid review of his achievements—I recalled the accomplished Eradne to his mind's eye—I contrasted her with his present intended; Larry the trumpeter figured in, and the forcible expression as to Cæsar's wife was not forgotten. I rebuked—I argued—I ridiculed—I scorned—I appealed to his pride—I mentioned his person. I bade him consult a cheval glass, and ask himself if the reflection were that of a would be bride-groom. I told him how old he was—what the Indian army would think—in short, the letter carried upon the face of it the perfect conviction of a thirty-two pounder.—Here and there I was literally ferocious.

I dined alone that day, and as taking my wine in the complacent consciousness of having done all in my power, when Colonel Plinth knocked. Of course I knew his knock; it was always violent, but on this occasion rather less so than usual. I felt flurried; as he ascended, my accurate ear detected a strange footstep on the stairs.—Hastily pouring out and gulping down a bumper, I contrived to rally before my friend entered.

Commonly his countenance was turbid—bilious, rufous as the red sea in a storm; now it was a sony, pale, implacable; he was evidently white hot with wrath. His eye, usually lurid as that of a Cyclops at the forge, was cold, clear, icy; his look froze me; I had seen him thus before, in the breach at Seringapatam.

His salute was alarmingly courteous; he begged leave to introduce a friend—Baron Cahooz, a noble Swede in the Prussian service. Never before had I beheld such a martinet: where could Plinth have picked him up?

The baron, in very good English, expressed his concern at making so valuable an acquaintance as that of Major Morcassin, under such infelicitous circumstances.—Colonel Plinth had been assured: but as I had so long been his most valuable friend—as we had fought and bled on the same fields—as those arms (his right and my left) which had been so often linked together, were mouldering, side by side in the same grave—as I was his brother-in-law, Colonel Plinth would accept of the amplest possible apology;—with any other man than Major Morcassin, Colonel Plinth would have gone to extremities at once

I was petrified during this speech; but at its conclusion some sort of an inquiry staggered from my lips.

Baron Cahooz did not understand.

I declared myself to be in the same predicament; would be be so good as to explain?

In reply, the baron hinted that I must be conscious of having written Colonel Plinth a letter.

Fearing that Plinth's suspicions had been aroused, and that this was a ruse to trap me into a confession—remembering my professions—and feeling sure that nothing could by any possibility, be brought home to me, unless I turned traitor to myself—I denied the imputation point blank! Indeed, what else could I do?

Colonel Plinth uttered an exclamation of bitter contempt, and hobbled towards the door.

Baron Cahooz handed me his card:—nothing further could be done: he hoped the friends I might honour on the occasion would see him as early as possible, in order to expedite the necessary arrangements.

I made a last effort. Advancing towards the door, where Plinth stood I begged to protest that I was mystified—that he must be labouring under a mistake.

'A mistake!' shouted he in that tremendous tone, which for a moment had once appalled the tiger-hearted Tippoo—'A mistake, Major Morcassin! There's no mistake, serrah! will you deny your own hand writing?'

So saying, he threw the letter in my face and retired, followed by Cahooz—

In another moment the veil was torn asunder. Having never before attempted an anonymous letter, and acting under the influence of confirmed habit, I concluded the fatal epistle, without disguise, in my customary terms:—'Yours, ever, JOHN MORCASSIN.'

NOTE.

The foregoing paper was drawn up and sent to his cousin in Kentucky by Major Morcassin, a few hours after Colonel Plinth and Baron Cahooz had quitted him. On the inside of the envelope appears the following:—'Tis now midnight—Rear Admiral Jenkinson has settled everything with the Baron, to their mutual satisfaction; we are to be on the ground at six o'clock in the morning. If I fall—'

After considerable research, we have discovered two announcements in the public prints which form valuable appendages to Major Morcassin's document. The first extract is from a London paper published in 1819, the second from a Bath paper of two years later date.

NO. I.

'Yesterday at his own residence in Wimpole St. by special license Colonel Plinth, K.C.C., to Rebecca Louisa Moggs, a native of Masulapatam. The gallant colonel went through the ceremony with his only remaining arm in a sling, having a few hours before exchanged shots—both of which took effect—with Major Morcassin.'

NO. II.

'The busy tongue of fame reports that a gallant Major, who served with distinction, and lost an arm, under Sir David Baird in the East Indies, is about to lead to the altar the dashing relict and sole legatee of a brave and affluent brother officer who recently died at Cheltenham. A mutual attachment is supposed to be long in existence, for the bridegroom elect fought a duel on the lady's account with her late husband on the very morning of the marriage. Pecuniary motives may perhaps have influenced the fair one in giving her hand on that occasion to the gallant major's more fortunate rival.

CONCERTS.—Overtures.

As regards overtures, which are often performed for amusement, and as frequently the commencement of concerts, there seems to prevail a great mistake in the judgement and taste displayed in a proper and suitable selection. Dark, heavy, and monotonous pieces are never pleasing. An audience requires something to exhilirate and enliven—to be cheered by the waving of a graceful flame, and not to be aggravated and pained with the dull heat of a comfortless fire. They go to be entertained and pleased, not to be puzzled. Musical pieces of this description may possess great merit in respect to scientific depth and learned knowledge, and might pass and be applauded, too, by a conclave of thoughtful and scrutinizing doctors, appointed to weigh and balance between the rough and rude growl of the de[illegible] double bass, and the weak and [illegible] voice of the timid flute, including [illegible] intermediate rank and file of the de[illegible] march of correct and [illegible] bassoon, [illegible] every step, no doubt, [illegible] in unerring precision with the mathematical tests of the punctilious, but grave and ambiguous author. This may be all very well in its [illegible] meritorious, as far as regards the architectural arrangement of a gloomy and unattractive structure, compiled agreeable to the most rules of form and erudite composition of course. But 'tis a fabric kind of design fit only for the appetite of the melancholy and profound, whom at every mouthful, can distinguish, and perchance be delighted, with the varied ingredients and condiments which go to make up this heavy mass of, to the unlearned and uninitiated, inextricable compound. A blast from the trumpet, or a flash of dark, low, mingled sound, will, on most minds, operate to disturb and depress, rather than cheer and elevate. The mass go to a concert to be made gay, not sad. They go not to learn musical science, but to be charmed with its captivating voice. They cannot appreciate what they do not know, or enjoy what they do not understand. These complex chords may flutter, fan, and, perchance, pain the craving sense, but can never reach to and thrill on the soul; and the complete fulfilment of joy, though aching to its expected measure, is tortured from the disappointment in being less than half filled. A cadence, a run of relieving sounds amidst the prevailing shade operates like bursting of a brilliant star, that divide the sad and solemn gloom of night; or the full moon, with its silver beams, shedding sweet and gilding lustre on the leaves of an intellectual forest.

Let it not, however, be understood, that overtures are condemned, when properly chosen and fitly adapted to circumstances and occasions; on the contrary they are highly proper as appertaining to such purposes and motives as may justly demand them, as they introduce and convey a kind of metaphorical sentiment, to awaken and prepare the expecting sensibilities to the forthcoming entertainment, and in a musical prologue, throws out in a sweet and mystical whisper what is to be produced—whether tragedy, comedy, melo-dramatic, or comic. This is precisely what, in every case, should be adopted. Let the forgoing shadow be a type of what is to come. The tragedy—if it be one—by a slow, solemn, and mournful dirge, calculated to prepare the mind for the exhibition of scenes that will affect and distress the heart, and so on as regards the rest. And therefore it is that a concert should be ushered in by a lively and corresponding message. As the sparkling rays indicate the near approach of the rising sun, so should a concert be seen and felt through the glow of an introduction that will warm, inspire, and give promise of gratification and delight. So much for the propriety, nature, and proper occasion of overtures.

And now, when a duett is to be performed by two instruments—say violin and piano—instead of a selfish desire to show off, or any aim of superority, there should be a sort of conventional marriage—a thorough harmonising compact, and though in separate souls, a complete and perfect union; a kind of—if the comparison may be permitted—'She stoops to conquer' throughout should prevail in yielding and blending of sentimental concord and flowing unity. Like a double ching, together, but not confused and altogether; growing and maturing here the same course, and smiling and blooming on the same stem, in congenial and happy agreement, yet distinguishable in beauty and identity. Twin cherubs borne and floating on the same wings a division in union and union in division.—Thus, it is conceived, is the reciprocal and sustaining spirit in which a duett, or any similar piece should, to gratify, be given to an audience. Solos, as much as possible, should be mixed up and seasoned—nay, should spring from some popular theme or air, and not make its forbidden appearance, and pursue its dull way in the dark garb of gloomy erudition, dwelling in and revelling over mystic difficulties with a grim smile of profound science. Some old favorite might most properly form the subject. 'I was by such that the renowned Paganini charmed, delighted, and captivated'—'twas by such that he went beyond and left at an immeasurable distance all his envious and scarling competitors. And not more certainly by the unapproachableness of his execution than by letting it hang and rest on the awakening sweets of old recollections. By throwing out and exhibiting old, once dear, but forgotten friends, taken from oblivion, for which he had ransacked corners and dragged from hidden recesses those whose very sight brought fond remembrances of youthful days and pastimes, which, like a touch on the sensitive harp, thrilled and raised a bliss that long had slumbered in silent repose. He sought an outcast, cleaned, trimmed, warmed—dressed it in gold and arrayed it in diamonds. 'Twas even thus, by giving, in the first instance, what was known, he opened and struck upon all the sensibilities like a charmer. He laid his foundation on affection, and his subject was magic. Starting, then, on this proud position, he entwined both heart and soul, which he carried captive with the power of his unrivalled performance. It was by these means he acquired his fortune and established his imperishable fame. He would allow of no accompaniment, as such, without the purest taste and judgment, the best parts might be marred, if not spoiled as has too often been the case, both at concerts here and elsewhere.

The English Soldier and the Sepoy.

It was my fate, soon after joining my regiment stationed at Burhaspore, to be ordered to attend, as supernumerary officer, several court-martials about to be held in the cantonment. The first was on a soldier of the 17th foot, who had stabbed his serjeant, and fired at his captain, besides committing other crimes, less heinous perhaps in a moral point of view, but almost equally heavy according to martial law. The first charge, however, seemed so grave as to require a signal example.—The man, therefore, had been some twelve months before delivered over to the civil power, who after keeping him during that period, declared their incompetence to try him, and sent him back to his regiment, to be dealt with by a general court-martial.

Before these judges I saw him arraigned and convicted. Every one supposed that he would have been condemned to death; but his long imprisonment, the manner in which he had been sent about from one place to another, weighed in his favor. He was sentenced to receive nine hundred and ninety-nine lashes; and, on his recovery from that punishment, to be sent to a hill fort, to work for five years as a convict.—Far from feeling any horror at this decision, he merely smiled; and, with an impudent sneer, thanked the court for their mild punishment, and left the room, laughing at the tortures they proposed to inflict on him.

I saw this sentence carried into effect.—I saw the man (whose name, as well as I can recollect, was Geary) receive nine hundred lashes without uttering a single groan. At the end of that time the surgeon ordered him to be taken down. He was almost insensible; his back was one mass of congulated blood; every lash had told. The linen he had held in his mouth was bitten through and through; yet not a cry of anguish had escaped him. On some water being given him, he rather revived, and, looking round, fixed his eyes upon his captain, who had reluctantly been his prosecutor. With difficulty pushing off the men who supported him, he shook his clenched fist at that officer, and, with an oath of future vengeance, left the ground, cursing his superiors, and uttering everything insolent which he could bring to mind. What became of him after the completion of his punishment I know not. Thank heaven! I had left India.

A few days subsequently I attended a garrison court-martial held on a wretched sepoy, who had stolen an invalid's dress, from the hospital, when on sentry. The crime was heavy, and so unusual amongst the native army, that the circumstance created much interest amongst us. The native witnesses took their oaths by holding in their right hand a small jar filled with some water of the Ganges, uttering a vow at the same time. Their evidence was clear. The prisoner admitted his guilt; and, as the act was infamous, it was determined that the award should be severe. To my surprise the following morning, when the proceedings were read out at the head of the regiment, I found the only punishment to be inflicted on him was "an ignominious dismissal from the service." His facings were instantly cut off, and he was drummed out of our lines accordingly.—Naturally astonished at the seeming leniency of the sentence, I could not help adverting to it on my return to our messroom, when I was told by an adjutant that the punishment I had just seen was almost equal to the infliction of death. He then explained to me that the man was born, according to his religious case, to be a soldier; as a soldier he must live, as a soldier he must die! Turned out from that profession, his relations and friends must instantly disown him. As a beast of prey, he would be shunned by every good Mussulman and Hindoo. He was cut off for ever from his family and his God, to wander miserably an outcast in this world, without hope of pardon in the next.

A short time after, the body of the unhappy ex-sepoy was found amidst some low jungle, which grew close by his former home, the military lines. He had here crept, and, in sight of his wife and children, without their knowledge, he died of actual misery and starvation.

A man down East has invented a machine to renovate old bachelors. Out of a good aged, fat, greasy old bachelor, he can make quite a decent young Canada Produce Abroad and Yankee Cunning.

From the Trade Review.

We have often heard it remarked by parties connected with our export trade, that somehow or other, Canadian produce has not been held in that repute abroad which it ought to have enjoyed—that, in many cases, to say that a certain shipment was Canadian, was to effectually kill off the sale at anything like a reasonable price.—That there is considerable truth in this statement, experience has frequently proven, and the question has of late been often propounded: Why does this prejudice exist? Our wheat and flour cannot be excelled—our pork and butter should be as good as that of the United States, and yet they do not stand alike even in the British markets. A well-informed writer attempts to give the cause of this depreciation of our produce abroad, and contends that it has mainly arisen from the tricks of American shippers, who have made it a practice to dub as "Canadian" bad or inferior lots. His own words are as follows:—

"If a quantity of soft only pork, reached Liverpool, it was ticketed 'Canadian.'—Queer lots of flour, unsound in quality and deficient in weight, were sure to be 'Canadian,' and our butter has been quoted, for the same reason, 'from Canadian to cart grease.' The same with petroleum and other products, so that to have a lot of 'Canadian' on hand, no matter of what kind of produce, was as much as to advertise a discount in advance."

We fear there is too much truth in these remarks, and that Canada has frequently been tracked in this way to her serious injury. The fact is indisputable that prior to recent shipments of our flour to the Maritime Provinces, they had a very poor opinion of it. Brother Jonathan previously supplied them, and from the flour they had received from him, under the name of Canadian, it had obtained a very unenviable reputation. Our ally Cousins, very promptly ate our splendid white wheat flour themselves, and gave our Blue-nose friends their inferior grades—the poorest of which being marked as if from us. However this may be, one thing is certain; since we began to ship direct to Halifax and St. John, no little astonishment has been expressed at the excellence of Canadian flour, which is openly stated by many to be the best they have ever obtained. It is gratifying to know that this important staple has won for itself so good a reputation in the provinces, for whatever changes may take place in the run of our trade hereafter, they can no longer be tracked into the belief that Canadian flour is second to any it the world.

Any prejudice which may exist against Canadian produce abroad, will we are sure, ultimately pass away as it has done among our eastern friends. We believe nearly all descriptions of our produce to be quite up to the American standard, and frequently above it, and when our shippers begin to carry on a direct trade with Europe, the brand "Canadian" will soon enhance, not decrease its value. We all know the story of the Quaker who gave the dog the bad name. If that has been done with Canadian produce, as this writer and many others suppose, it is conduct exceedingly reprehensible, and it becomes our duty to counteract it as speedily as possible. The best way to do this, is just to do what has been done in the Maritime Provinces—send our produce to foreign markets direct, and let them judge for themselves. Were this done, we have no fears of the result, or of the success of any future tricks which might be tried.

All to the Cretans.—What Capt. Pym Did.

The Constantinople correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune writes:—

"England has fairly taken the wind out of the sails of Russia. Russia has promised everything to the Cretans, and done nothing. The Cretans had also hoped that American vessels might, at least, go as far as remove the suffering families from the island; but England, from whom they hoped but little, has quietly taken the initiative, and sent a steamer to remove such famish s as may wish to leave. She went to Selinos, the as yet unravaged part of the island, and took off about 500 of those poor starving women and children. They were taken to Athens. A Turkish cruiser saw the steamer, put chase, and fired in on it; but when the Englishman, finding signals of no avail, beat to quarters, run out his gun, and turned upon his pursuer, the Turk made the best of his way off."

The Syra correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune says, of the same affair:—

"The event of the day here is the intervention of the English gunboat Assurance, who had the audacity to violate his instruction to preserve the most strict neutrality, and to carry off from the Turkish territory 320 poor, starving men, women, and children. Diplomacy at Athens (and, perhaps, other capitals) stands aghast. Such unprecedented humanity is incredible and inconvenient. The gallant sailor could not endure their misery, and he risked more than ten battles, to save one load at least, for it is said that he will be cashiered. A day he knew beforehand what might come, but is said to have declared that, come what may, he was content, and that his heart justified him if his government did not. Of the 320 souls only 25 were men, and of these only two or three could walk,—one man, crippled by five wounds, had for two weeks only eaten wild salad; all were half-starved, and many had to be carried. Only three able-bodied men were willing to embark, and not one of them actually went. Even women who had no children refused to go, preferring to await the arrival of the combatants. None embarked but these who had children or aged parents to care for, or were themselves sick. Captain Pym would have gladly returned for another load, but his consul, frightened by his last instructions, put a veto on it. The crew of the Assurance, it is said, chafed as if they were ordered out of a battle, at being prevented from returning to Suda for more of the unfortunates.

The Withdrawal of the American Mission from Rome.

The question of withdrawing the United States Legation from Rome again came up in the House of Representatives on Wednesday, and after a long and irrelevant debate finally carried on a division of 51 to 48. The Washington correspondents of the New York papers state that "the debate prove there was an ill-concealed hostility to the Roman Catholic Church prevading the minds of the majority of the House."

The Montreal Daily News adds:—Congress has decided that after the present fiscal year there shall be no American Mission either at Rome or Portugal. We do not know about Portugal, but neither Rome nor the United States will be likely to suffer very severely from decision. Rome will, in all likelihood, continue to get on well in the absence of an American Minister, and the United States will not collapse because it has no representative at Rome.

Some few hundred dollars will be saved, and "nobody hurt" except the unfortunate Consul who has been paid for actively engaging himself in doing nothing.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

In our Country affairs are quiet. The alarm of invasion and the paper reports of Fenians are now scarcely heard of. These victims of Fenian folly have gone to reap the reward of their rash act in our Provincial Penitentiary, where they will be able to acquire a trade that will be of more value to them than the liberty hope for. Their trade will enable them to obtain an honest livelihood in future.

In the United States Fenianism is dead in appearance [illegible] Stephens is deposed and a successor appointed, but it is only to fetch their dupes more and more. The great troubles with our neighbors are protection and impoverishment. Notwithstanding all they have suffered from high tariffs they are still endeavouring to make them higher, and we may be satisfied as every cent put on our stuff goes to the United States will tend to extend our trade to some other and perhaps better channel, so that when they come to their senses again they will find that their loss was our profit.

In England it is believed that a Reform Bill will be brought in during the present Parliament. During the Queen's speech the people cried out, Reform, Reform. Mr. D'Israeli it is said will ask for certain reforms by resolution of the House; but reports are not to be too confidently received. Reform meetings are still being held—a very large one being on the 11th instant, at which there was not the slightest sign of disturbance.

The Turks are said to have gained a signal victory over the Cretans, and 600 volunteers surrendered to the forces of the Porte. The Sultan has also resolved to emancipate the christians from their political disabilities and he has issued a call for assembling a Parliament. We trust this may be true, but it is too much to expect.

In Rome matters are carried on in their old way, to the exclusion of other churches, but this will work its own cure. Kings do not now tremble at the nod of His Holiness, but he does at the nod of kings.

France is quiet and promises to withdraw her troops from Mexico by the 25th of March.

CANADIAN REPUDIATION.

There is a general cry everywhere in the Province on account of the refusal of Postmasters to receive Canadian cents and small silver for postage stamps. The reason assigned for the refusal being that the Bank will not receive it from the Postmasters. Truly this is a nice state of things. Our government blamed a small currency for the colonial Penitentiary, where they will be able to acquire a trade that will be of more value to them than the liberty hope for. Their trade will enable them to obtain an honest livelihood in future.

In another column will be found the melancholy intelligence of the death of George Millburn, son of Thos. T. Millburn, Esq., of Smith while on his way to California. Young Millburn and Geo. Stevenson of this Town, Messrs. M. Caul, Faulkner and four others whose names we have not learned, left here about the 20th of November last for California, tempted, no doubt, by the reports of obtaining gold so easily on that country. The ship on which they embarked from New York was densely crowded, and something about the boiler giving way she was forced to put into Fortress Monroe where they stop ped about a week, when a ship from New York on which were some United States soldiers, called and took them away, leaving them at the Isthmus all well. On leaving the Isthmus, all of those from this part took steerage passages, but finding them crowded, all but Millburn bought second cabin berths. Mr. Millburn choosing to occupy a hammock on deck. The cholera broke out on the vessel among the soldiers, we are informed, but also extended its fatal effects to the passengers. From a letter to Mr. James Stevenson we learn that they had left San Juan on the 5th of January and on the 9th Millburn took unwell, through the night, of what he considered Diarrhœa, and went and raised some of his companions who obtained some brandy and what cordials they could for him, after taking which he expressed himself easier. They then desired him to take them but he would not. On the morning of the 10th he was worse, having been seized with violent vomiting and cramps, but the aid of a doctor having been obtained and some restoratives applied he got some easier again and chatted to those who sat with him, complaining of nothing but weakness and thinking that he would soon be all right again. About three o'clock, however, without speaking a word he turned over toward the bulwarks and expired, having been ill only ten hours. In about half an hour afterwards they committed his remains to the great deep to await the last trumpet.

We sincerely sympathize with his bereaved parents and friends. This is certainly melancholy news for them: the death of a dear son, far from them, and this without the possibility of being able to afford him the least comfort or to soothe his dying pillow, is a severe stroke. No doubt his companions did all in their power, but parents will imagine they could do more. They will also regret his ambition and unexpected death the more, that he had no necessity to leave home, as they had all abundance for him. But God moves in mysterious ways, and this was one of his ways. It is another warning to all to "be ready."

BOBCAYGEON.

FROZEN.—On Sabbath morning last, a man named James Armstrong, of Peterboro, was discovered lying in the woods between Pigeon lake and the Bobcaygeon Road, and about 4 miles South of this Village. He was at once conveyed to the nearest house, where restoratives were at once applied, but to no purpose, as he lingered in an unconscious state till the evening, when he died.

ORANGE SOIREE.—The Soiree of Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 121, was held in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, on Tuesday the 5th inst., W. M., Bro. John McKeeters, in the chair. Addresses were delivered by Wm. Cottingham, Esq., Rev. John Vicars and Rev. Wm. L. Scott. Nearly two hundred persons were present.

GOLD IN HARVEY.—A correspondent says:—We have seen several specimens of very fine gold quartz from this township. There is no doubt but that there will be a rush to this part of our county in the spring.

B. A. O. G. T. Soiree.

We have been requested to state that there will be a County Lodge Meeting of the above Order on the 22nd inst., in the Temperance Hall, Lundy's Block. After the meeting there will be a Temperance Social and Tea. Addresses and music will follow. The speakers announced are the Rev. J. Johnson, M. A., the Rev. J. H. Gundy, P. G. W. C., and others. The Tea will commence at half past six o'clock p.m. Tickets may be obtained from any of the members.

DIED FROM STARVATION.

THREE PEOPLE LIVE ON MICE FOR SEVERAL DAYS.

A melancholy tale is related to us by Mr. P. H. Clark, who has been back to Haliburton, of the sad end of an old hunter, who lived in the Township of McClintock, about 40 miles from Haliburton, and 120 miles from Peterborough. The man's name was Isaac Hunter, and also lived by hunting. It appears from what information Mr. Clark received that Hunter lived about eight miles from any settler; it being his usual custom to move back as settlers moved in. Mr. Hunter, his wife and two children, lived together, but not being very thrifty, he had neglected to lay by provisions against the winter, not even wood, but in a wooly country this appears a little thing. About the 16th of January last, they all betook themselves to the same bed, to keep from freezing, and remained there eleven days without fire. Their food then gave way, when they were forced to take the hair off some deer skins, and then they ate the skins. When the skins were eaten they ate the cords out of a pair of snow shoes. At this stage the old man died, and the others were so far spent that the corpse lay in the same bed with them for three days, they not being able to remove it. They at last made an effort and got it into a corner of the shanty, where some mice came and nibbled the face and eyes. The survivors endeavored to frighten them off, but they became so bold that they would not go away. One of the survivors at length succeeded in killing the mice, and on these mice they lived until in the good order of Providence they were discovered by two brothers named Cole, of Thorburn, who by chance passed that way. One of those men stopped with the unfortunate survivors while the other went to the nearest settlement and brought food, and by kind and careful treatment had them restored to sufficient strength to be removed to a more comfortable place. One of those Coles was Mr. Clark's informant, who asserted that they were perfect skeletons when found. This is a sad tale of backwoods life. But it must be remembered that Hunter had it in his power to procure fire-wood enough to keep the place warm, and we are also informed that he might have had a nice crop of potatoes and corn as he had a small "clearing" but he neglected this, and also to lay by some venison, and the result of his carelessness our readers have above.

BOARD OF SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The Board met in special session on Tuesday evening.

Present.—Dr. Burnham, Col. Haultain, and Messrs. Coulter, Dumble, Stevenson, Cameron, Lundy, Graham and Clinton.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

The Secretary read the return, from the Town Clerk, of the newly elected Trustees.

The following are the Committees for the year:—

Finance,—Messrs. Coulter, Cameron, and C. I. Haultain.

Property,—Messrs. Cameron, Dumble and Graham.

Appointments,—Col. Haultain, Dr. Burnham, and Messrs. Dumble, Lundy and Coulter.

Free Pupils.—Messrs. Lundy, Graham, and Stevenson.

Visiting Committees,—

Feb'y.—Messrs. Gilmour and Dumble.
March—Col. Haultain and Clinton.
April—Messrs. Stevenson and Lundy.
May—Dr. Burnham and Coulter.
June—Dr McRae and Graham.
July—Dr. Poole and Cameron.
Sept.—Messrs. Gilmour and Dumble.
October—Col. Haultain and Clinton.
Nov.—Messrs. Stevenson and Lundy.
Dec.—Dr. Burnham and Coulter.
Jan.—Dr. Poole and Cameron.

A motion on the re appointment of Mr. O'Bierne, as Secretary, was laid over till next meeting of the Board.

Messrs. Edwards and Stratton were appointed Auditors.

Mr. Stratton was re appointed Local Superintendent.

Mr. McPhail made application for a suitable room in which to teach a class in Phonography. The application was received and a room granted.

Dr. McRae sent his resignation as Trustee. This, we believe, was on account of the distance he is from the Town. The letter was received and the Secretary instructed to notify the Warden of the vacancy.

Mr. Milne, Teacher of the Third Division, tendered his resignation, which was accepted.

The Visiting Committee reported Mrs. Flavelle's room over crowded.

The Committee on appointments were instructed to procure a teacher as an assistant to Mrs. Flavelle.

The Treasurer was instructed to pay the Principal monthly; he was also instructed to give the Principal $6 to procure reward cards for the School.

Several small accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

CONSISTENCY.

What a rare commodity is this article—consistency. How few of those who wish to be called men possess it; and certainly it appears to be unknown to the Firemen of this Town. Perhaps we should not include the whole Company, but at present we must include the whole or exclude the whole; or is it the Editor of the Review that is to blame? We cannot believe that the Editor would be guilty of such meanness as concurring a resolution for the Firemen; but why did he insert it as if he had been present when it was passed.

The resolution was so false and the action so mean that the Secretary would have nothing to do with it; and so the Review inserts it without even the addition of "Com." Well, we don't care. About the regrets of John Kincaid, the mover, or the seconder, or any one else, we care just as little. That what we said was unjust, is false. Mr. Wrighton acknowledged his meanness by paying the "yorker" next day. Was that false? If so Mr. Wrighton is the author of the falsehood, not we. That we made an incorrect statement is also false—The Captain of the Fire Company told the Editor of the Examiner that Mr. Wrighton was no Fireman at the time he skulked into the Reunion without paying the "yorker" of admittance. Surely the Captain ought to know who are members.

The Committee deputed by the Fire Company to arrange the difficulty arising out of Mr. Wrighton's act, among whom were the Secretary, John Kincaid, Mr. Brown, Gibbs and Geo. Mitchell, asserted that Mr. Wrighton was not a Fireman, and consequently the Club should not lay his (Wrighton's) individual act to the Fire Company. This the Secretary will testify, so will Mr. Brown and others of the Company. Was this repudiating Mr. Wrighton or connection with him? If not, what do words mean? Mitchell only excused Wrighton's act by saying that he (Mitchell) had led Wrighton to believe that he was a Fireman at the time, and he regretted what he had done. Is the assertion we made unfounded after all this? Nay, verily, but correct according to their own words and deeds. The words of their Captain, their Secretary, their Committee and private members all testifying to the truth of it, notwithstanding the false assertion made in the resolution by the poor tool who wrote it out and moved it.

Besides the falseness of the resolution there is a breach of faith in the transaction. The committee referred to above, agreed that Mr. Wrighton be left to "fight his own battles," and the Editor of the Examiner his, to which the Secretary and Mr. Brown will bear witness; and yet in the face of all this John Kincaid moves the resolution referred to. So then he is the tool of Wrighton to such a degree that he "couldn't help moving it," as he said afterwards, though it was a downright fal-chood, and contrary to agreement, not to interfere. Let him follow on the example of his leader, and he will become an ornament to the Fire Company. We only express our regret that the captain did not see that the company were being made fools of by the action of a few, and that their act was making out his own words false. If he cannot control the rowdy part of the company he should resign; and we cannot see that there is any other course for him now. His words are belied—his authority set at nought, and the whole company belittled by the false assertions set forth in the resolution in the Review. We think too, that the Editor of the Review should not so far forget himself as to publish a resolution without the name of the captain or secretary attached, by doing so he must certainly know that he becomes the party who inserts it. Under present circumstances we cannot understand why the Editor has gone to the trouble to publish such a resolution, something that he has not done in reference to the Fire Company for years, we believe. As for the petty clique whose words are as little to be depended to as they are themselves, we can afford to despise them, and smile at any falsehoods they can concoct.

COUNTY ORANGE LODGE.

The annual meeting of the County Lodge of the Loyal Orange Association of the County of Peterboro, was held at the Orange Hall, in this town, on Tuesday, the 5th day of February, instant. There was a large number of the brethren from the different parts of the County present; and the affairs of the County Lodge appear, from the reports of the Secretary and Treasurer, to be in a flourishing condition. One new Lodge was established at Haliburton, seventy miles north of this place, during the past year; the other Lodges in the County, of which there are nineteen, are progressing, and altogether the affairs of the Institution in this County are in every way satisfactory.

The officers elected for the current year are as follows:—

Bro. D. G. Hatton, Co. Master, re-elected.
" W. H. Stephenson, Deputy Co. Master, re-elected.
" John Smith, Co. Secretary, re-elected.
" John Armstrong, Co. Treasurer, re-elected.
" Rev. D. Cantlon, Co. Chap., re-elected.
" D. Hopkins, Co. Proxy.
" John Kennedy, Co. Director of Ceremonies.
Bros. Benjamin Green and John Kennedy, Co. Auditors.

There were votes of thanks given to the County Secretary and the other County Officers for their efficient services during the past year.

The semi-annual meeting will be held at the Village of Norwood, on Tuesday the 25th [illegible] June next at [illegible] p.m.

THE EXCISE DEPARTMENT.

From an article in the Globe on the organization of the excise department. It appears that there are to be eighteen divisions in Upper Canada, and fifteen in Lower Canada. The Provinces is also to be divided into five inspection districts—being two for Lower Canada and three for Upper Canada. The following is the division of Upper Canada into inspection districts, together with the sub-division into inland revenue divisions:—

LONDON INSPECTION DISTRICT.

Inl. Rev. Div.	Counties and Cities.
Windsor	Kent and Essex.
London	Lambton, Middlesex, Elgin & London.
Goderich, ...	Huron, Bruce and Perth.
Paris, ...	Oxford, Brant and Norfolk.
Guelph	Wellington and Waterloo.

TORONTO INSPECTION DISTRICT.

Hamilton, ..	Wentworth, Halton and Hamilton.
St. Catherines	Lincoln, Welland & Haldimand
Algoma	Algoma.
Toronto	Toronto, York, Peel & Ontario
Collingwood .	Simcoe and Grey.
Peterborough	Victoria and Peterborough.
Cobourg, ...	Northumberland & Durham.
Belleville	Hastings and Prince Edward.

Each of these inspection districts will have a district inspector. Each of the eighteen inland revenue divisions will have a collector of inland revenue, and, except in the case of Algoma, one or more deputy collectors, as the case may require. Subordinate to these, again, will be the "excise men," whose especial duty it will be to look after the distilleries, breweries, and tobacco factories. The intention is to have a constant surveillance over the distilleries and a greatly increased attendance at breweries and tobacco factories.

The officers of this department are to be prepared for their work. They will have to undergo examination, before appointment, and the excisemen will be liable to removal from place to place, so as to avoid any collusion with distillers, brewers, &c. They will also receive fixed salaries. The expense of the new scheme will be greater than that of the old, but it is expected that the increase of Revenue will more than meet the extra expenditure. The $47,000 in which Messrs. Maitland & Co., have been mulcted would be sufficient to meet a large share of the proposed outlay. What a pity that they do not close the establishments altogether? To do so would prove a blessing to all concerned.

Lakefield English Church.

On Tuesday evening next, the 19th inst., an entertainment will be given in the School House, at Lakefield, by the members of the Peterborough Literary Club, assisted by some gentlemen of the village, in aid of the fund for the purchase of materials for the Bazaar which will be held, as previously advertised, in the course of the ensuing September. The entertainment will consist of Readings, Recitations and Songs. It is hoped, especially as there will be a Full Moon, that many from Peterboro' and the neighborhood, may be tempted to be present on the occasion, in furtherance of so good an object as the payment of the debt ($1,000) still outstanding against the Church.—[Com.

Removal.

It is with pleasure that we direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. S. White's removal to Dixon's Brick Block, next to A. Williams' store, on George Street. The premises are [illegible] and commodious, and from what we know of Mr. White, we can assure the public that no pains will be spared by him to give satisfaction to all who may honor him with their custom. Special attention is called to the Ladies Department.

Literary Club.

The following subject has been appointed for discussion this evening, viz:—"Is it desirable to lower the franchise in Great Britain to £5," and will be taken part in by the following gentlemen: Affirmative,—Messrs. Connell, W. Cameron, Kennedy and Eastwood. Negative—Messrs. Knapp, Dunnet, and J. A. Hall. Members only admitted.

Temperance.

The tenth anniversary soiree of the Independent Order of Good Templars will be held on Tuesday evening next, in the Temperance Hall, Scott's Block.

The following requisition has been handed us with a request to publish it:—

To E. ARELAND, Esq., Oshawa.

We, the undersigned inhabitants of Peterboro' and vicinity, being anxious to improve the breed of our horses, and from what we know of your horse Kennett, beg to request that you will send him to this neighborhood the ensuing season, feeling confident that by so doing, it will equally benefit you with ourselves:—

DR. BURNS, OF ST. CATHERINES.—The Rev. Dr. Burns, of St. Catherines, has accepted a call from a church in Chicago, and will remove there, with the sanction of the London Presbytery. The salary of the Rev. Dr. Burns is to receive, says the St. Catharines Evening Journal, will be $2,500 a year, with the promise of a raise to $3,000 at the end of that period, and a still further increase in future years.

Gordon Bennett's yacht Henrietta, the winner of the $20,000 race to England recently, was designed and built by an Englishman named Steers, who learned his business in Plymouth dockyard. So that all the "glory" attached to the United States from the results attained, is that which is due to the growing of the timber of which the vessel was made. The very unkind, but true.

Protestants Forbidden to Worship God in Rome.

(From the New York Observer.)

Our intelligence by letter from Rome confirms the statement received by the Cunard Telegraph, that the Protestant Christians who had in a threatened with the horrors of the Inquisition for having said the temerity to worship God in spirit and in truth, and not according to Roman rites, are now utterly excluded from the walls for all purposes of public or social worship.—The American chapel, which Cardinal Antonelli had said should be attended to next, has been attended to, and American citizens can no longer meet together to pray or praise within the city.

We scarcely know which to wonder at most, the hearty ingratitude of a church which enjoys the great liberty in all Protestant countries, or the infatuated bigotry of a power that seems determined to maintain to the last the genuine spirit of the Inquisition.

We are happy to say that as soon as the facts which we published last week in the letter of the Senior Editor of the Observer, and which we forwarded immediately to one of our Representatives in Congress, were laid before that body, as a memorial to the Diplomatic appropriation bill was passed suspending the appropriations for a Resident Minister at Rome. To have continued such an Embassy after such an insult offered to the nation, would have been a disgrace to the National Legislature and an additional insult to the people themselves.

How tamely our Ministry at Rome has submitted to what our people will regard simply as an outrage without excuse, we do not yet know, but we fear that he has chosen to pocket the insult offered to the American people. The land seized with becoming dignity he would have removed his own quarters beyond the walls or at least have entered his formal protest against the action of the Roman government, but in either of these things does he appear to have done.

The present character of the American Consul at Rome, to which allusion is made in the letter from one Senior Editor, published below, does not at all relieve the action of the Papal Government from the charge of injected intolerance. The very fact that it represented the subtlest form of Protestantism, that form of which many of its adherents are unwilling to give the name of Protestant, only makes the case the stronger. It shows that nothing but blind and avowed submission to the will of a weak and imperious old man, in all matters of religion, can be allowed. No liberty of conscience, no freedom of worship, can be tolerated. These proceedings on the part of the Pope, will not only stir up the indignation of the Protestant world, and especially of Americans, but they cannot fail to produce a reaction in Roman Catholic countries. Every human heart has a spark of independence within it will protest against such bigotry.

The effect of this action of the Pope is already apparent. It is said to have been provoked by the proclamation of religious liberty by the Italian Government, and it is followed by the announcement that the "Emperor Napoleon will soon issue a decree granting the perpetual right of social and religious meetings." Light seems to be breaking out on every hand, save in that one little city where the pretended successor of St. Peter bear rule. Thank God, his rule is not for long.

Flour in St. John, N. B., on the 26th ult., is reported as follows:—There are no arrivals of flour this week, the demand however still continues very light, and the stock in consequence is but little reduced hence, our market has not changed in a proportionate degree with the advance in the Canadian and American markets, and prices have for some time past, ruled lower relatively, than at any other port on the seaboard. At the quotations we give to-day, the market is firm, with little disposition to push sales. Strong superfine, $8.25 to $8.50; superfine, $7.75 to $8.00; corn meal, $4.50 to $4.75.

In other branches of business there is very little doing, and nothing worthy of notice to report.

The ship "Queen of the Seas," from Foochow, for New York, supposed to be lost on the Pratas Shoals. She had a cargo of upwards of 1,000,000lbs. of Tea. The "Queen of the Seas" was built at St. John, N.B., in 1854, and was 1,388 tons burden. The bark "Julia," from St. John to Liverpool, waterlogged, and abandoned at sea, on the 16th. Crew taken off by the bark "Fleetwing," and landed at Portland on the 23rd inst.

SOUTHERN OPINION OF ANOTHER WAR.—The Macon (Ga.) Journal, in noticing a very warlike speech lately made at New Haven before the Connecticut Democratic State Convention by James Brooks of New York, makes the following sensible remarks:—"Rattling may be a very good practice in sociedies a game as is now going on; but we beg leave to suggest that if there is going to be any more fighting on this side of the Potomac, we must turn it over to the Northern brethern exclusively, and be counted out.—There's so many of them, that only a small population were able to take hand in the war of the rebellion; and it is not wonderful, therefore, that they should be spoiling for another opportunity. Not so with the people on this side of the Potomac. Every man who wanted to fight was provided with the fullest opportunity for the gratification of his appetite, and the result is we want no more just now. We had much rather raise corn, meat, and cotton, and do what we can to repair our dilated fortunes, than take a hand in any new revolution."

THE FENIAN PRISONERS.—The Montreal papers state that the Rev. Mr. McMahon, confined in the Penitentiary in company with his six compatriots, will enjoy many privileges not usually granted to convicts in that institution, among them anomaly from hard labor, and the use of a private room in lieu of being restricted to an ordinary cell. Such is not the case, however, as the officers of the prison have not yet shown any disposition to relax anything that appertains to its peculiar discipline in regard to any one of the prisoners. With the exception of Mr. McMahon they have all been told off to the workshops, to each being attached to the shop where he is fast learning the trade. McMahon has not yet been told off to any department, but it is likely he will be placed in some easy post, not requiring constant labor, though he will, nevertheless be obliged to conform strictly to all the rules set down for the guidance of the convicts.—Whig.

LE SIÈCLE.—The Montreal Witness publishes a letter from St. Regis, C. E., dated the 28th, stating that a dreadful ice shove took place there. The writer says:—"I was awakened at half-past four by some one calling, 'Ice come! Ice come!' I jumped out of bed and ran down stairs, when I found myself in water. The noise of crushing ice was like thunder, and rushing water, screams of poor Indians—men, women and children—all in the dark, were frightful. Ice came within a few feet of our house, and as it stands on the highest ground in the village, you can imagine the position of matters. It was a fearful scene. My family got up into a tree, and had to sit there for three hours, the ice being up to the roof of his house.—The priest and many others had nothing to eat for a day. The poor Indians lost their all, and are lying on straw without any covering."

The Mayor of Portsmouth, Mr. Emanuel Emanuel, has invited Lord Monck, Governor of Canada, and now on a temporary visit to England, to a public banquet at Portsmouth, in recognition of his services as Governor of Canada, and especially during the Fenian invasion of the Canadian frontier. His worship has received a letter in reply accepting the invitation. In his reply Lord Monck says:—"I shall be most happy to accept your most hospitable invitation to dinner, and it will be a great gratification to me to find myself once more among my old friends and constituents at Portsmouth. The day of the banquet is left for Lord Monck to name, to suit his convenience during his necessarily limited stay in England. His lordship some years represented Portsmouth in the House of Commons, with the late Lord Northcote, then Sir Francis T. Baring.—London Times.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.—We are sorry to learn that a child of Mr. Start, near Scugog Lake, an interesting little girl, about three years old, by some means got hold of a bottle of Bug Poison that had been in the house for two or three years, and before her parents discovered it she had swallowed at least a tablespoonful. Dr. Martin was called to, but too late to render any material assistance. After [illegible]

VICEROY OF CANADA.

The Volunteer Review, in advocating the appointment of Prince Alfred to the Vice-Royalty of British North America, says:—

"Let us have the first line of princes as hereditary viceroys, who will be all our own; and who would be so certain to win the hearts of the loyal inhabitants of the land of forest and lake as the gallant Sailor Prince Alfred! There would be something prophetic in the very name. Britain herself was not greater than British America is now when the ancestor of the Royal House of England, Alfred the Great, shared his scant with the poor swineherd.—Might not an Alfred become the first of a line of British American Kings, whose subjects, a thousand years hence might call him, too, Alfred the Great. Might not the brightest jewel in our good Queen's crown be fairly worn by her gallant sailor son? It would bind us to the head of our father's house with a silken cord of affection that no foe could part asunder, and the young lion of the north, glowing with youth and strength might yet be the strongest ally of the proud king of the sea from which he sprung. And how our hearts would throb with the long future before us, there should be born unto us a Native Prince! Let then, British Americans with one united voice that will not be denied, petition for the Senior Prince."

From such a fate may Canada be long spared. To write in the strain assumed by the Review is a rant humbug and nonsense. Canada wants no "hereditary viceroys." What Canada wants is men of talent, who will administer the law in accordance with the wishes of the people—We want no hereditary viceroys who claim to be above the people; who would rule regardless of justice or liberty. We do not believe Canada will consent for years attached to the British crown with a hereditary viceroy. To advocate the Review's principle is the extreme of foolishness.

With a hereditary viceroy such as George the Fourth, one of the Beast to king men of his age, and also one of the grossest blackguards and libertines of the day, what would Canada do? How long would the bond of union last between the people and such a viceroy? The seeds of profligacy sown in our small community by a viceroy of George's stamp would inaugurate a state of society ruinous to the entire community. With his proggers and ministers, it would be like master like men. Enormous salaries to a crowd of licentious rulers, with pimps spread over the land to seduce virtue and beauty wherever found, would send Canada into the arms of the United States in quick time, though taxation was far in advance of what it is in that country. The Review must try some other scheme than that of a hereditary viceroy."—Brockville Recorder.

THE FENIAN TRIALS CONCLUDED.—The trials of the Fenian prisoners at Toronto has been brought to a close, and on Wednesday, Mr. Justice Morrison presided at court for the purpose of passing the sentence of death on those convicted. The following prisoners were sentenced to be hanged on the 8th of March: Pat. Norton, W. H. Maxwell, Pat. O'Neil, James Burke, Daniel Quinn, Peter Paul Lindwith, and John Gallagher. The remaining prisoners, as follows, were sentenced to be executed on the 2nd of June: John O'Connor, John Regan, Owen Kennedy, and Bernard Dunn.

AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC has now arrived and is now ready for delivery, gratis, by the Druggists, to all who call for it. Our readers may be surprised to know that this little pamphlet which has become so much a favorite in our section has quite the largest circulation of any one book in the world, except the Bible—It is printed in many languages and scattered through many nations as well as supplied to almost the entire population of our own vast domain. Every family should keep it, for it contains information which all are liable to require, when sickness overtakes them and which may prove invaluable from being at hand in season. If you take our advice, you will call and get an Ayer's Almanac, and when got, keep it. 6

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, have it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affection. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box.

HAPPINESS.—True happiness, in our opinion, consists of the following named articles:—A nice little wife sitting on your knee, her trusty smile filling your mind with happy thoughts, a neat little room tidily furnished, and a bottle of "Canadian Pain Destroyer" in the cupboard ready for instant use, nothing better for sudden colds, sprains burns, and all kinds of aches and pains. Price 25 cents per Bottle. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

THE [illegible] respectfully informs the Commercial public of Canada and the British Provinces that he has at length succeeded, after upwards of experiment and research, in making a METAL PEN entirely impervious to rust from the acids contained in Inks (especially so when used with Arnold's writing fluid), which for elasticity and smoothness of action over the pompous paper, stands unequalled—being Electro-Carbonized, they will outlast six or eight ordinary Pens, and are guaranteed not to cut through the thinnest foreign letter paper. The manufacturer feels confident that where the Electro-Carbonized Pens have been tried they will supersede all other makes, and respectfully solicits a trial of them.

Notice for a Cold—Relief in five Minutes

WHY do you suffer with a bad Cold when one bottle of Morris's Electric Invigorating Fluid will cure the worst cold in three days. It is far superior to any pain-killer or Liniment or Ready-relief. Try it once and you will not keep your house without it, for after all other remedies have failed it has cured hundreds of rheumatism, throat bites, chilblains, burns, scalds, bruises, sprains, pains in the bowels, fresh cuts, lame back, headache and all pains internal and external. Sold everywhere at 25 cents per bottle. Retail and wholesale only by C. MORRIS, Peterborough, C. W. Guaranteed to give satisfaction or the money refunded. Every one should have a bottle.

Peterboro', Jan. 30th, 1867. 5

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and a few of us who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

SALE OF SAW MILLS!

AT

PETERBOROUGH,

CANADA WEST.

TO BE SOLD BY PUBLIC AUCTION, at "Caisse's Hotel," in the Town of Peterborough, Canada West, at TWELVE o'clock, noon,

On Thursday, February 28, 1867,

Those very valuable Saw Mills, well known as

"THE DOURO MILLS."

These Mills are situated on the River Otonabee, within two miles of Peterborough, and command the greatest facilities for the manufacture and export of sawed lumber. They contain "An English Gate," "Stock Gang," "Slabber," "Yankee Gang," "Edger and" Butting Saws," complete, and twenty-three acres of land attached, and the pond has facilities for housing and holding five thousand saw logs at a time.

There are on the premises two good Dwelling Houses, Office, Sleeping House for men, Store House, Blacksmith Shop, and Log Stable.

The River Otonabee is a powerful, never failing stream, and as the Mills now stand they are capable of sawing out from fifty to sixty thousand feet of sawed lumber per day; with some of the more modern improvements applied, the quantity could readily be increased to seventy or eighty thousand at much less expense.

The railroad to the timber passes through the mill yard which possesses the best piling ground on the River Otonabee.

The taxes on the whole premises for the years 1865 and 1866 amounted together to $133 only.

Title indisputable.

TERMS OF SALE:—One quarter of the purchase money in cash at time of sale, residue in three equal annual instalments, with interest at seven per cent per annum on the principal sum, to be secured by mortgage on the premises and an insurance against fire for not less than $5000.

Application for further particulars to be made to Messrs GALT & HENDERSON, Barristers, Toronto, and to ROCHE WAY, Esq., (at the office of Messrs. SHAW & WAITE, Peterborough,) who will show the premises.

AYER'S

Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OTTAWA, Ind., 5th June, 1860.

J. C. AYER & Co.: Gentlemen,—I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having suffered from a complaint which I have suffered from in various ways for years. Sometimes it broke out in blotches on my hands and arms; sometimes it formed a sore and ulcerated inside the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and neck with a sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but got nothing to relieve me in any thing. In fact, the disease grew worse. At length I was induced to call on the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative compound. I did know from your circulars that they gave no medicine for nothing, and therefore I sent to Otis and got a bottle of your Sarsaparilla. I took it, and soon found that it did me good. I continued using it, and kept it on till it cured me. I took in all seven bottles, which cleared a large wound over a inch and a half across, and left my blood and system pure and healthy. I am now as well as I ever was in my life, and have been for some years. I attribute my present good health entirely to the use of your Sarsaparilla, and have been a living witness to its virtues for many years. I am well known in this section of country, and many can testify to the truth of what I say. Yours, truly,

ALFRED D. B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Drop-sy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Pekin, N. Y., 12th April, 1858, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of your Sarsaparilla and also a dangerous case of Sore Eyes by the influence of the same; also has cured the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Toledo Shaw, of Prospect, Texas, writes: "The celebrated cure by Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I could fill a column with the removal of young girls in whom I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent assistant in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many incipient cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the cervix. The ulcers could rarely be cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward S. Stone, of Newburg, Ala., writes, "A daughter of mine has been one of the females in my family which had debility all the females would complain. I at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured her entirely. Nothing but extirpation could relieve her before. She was afflicted with a tumor of the ovaries. Your Sarsaparilla is the best remedy for ulcerations and female complaints."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS 27th August, 1860.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and attest to the cures of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have used both it and its pills, most of the cases I have met with, and it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Leucorrhœa, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ring-worm, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, and all diseases of the blood, which it is my province to treat in this locality. Your Sarsaparilla stands foremost in the market. Another has attempted by many worthless imitations to usurp its name and the confidence it has established with the people, but they will soon find that the credit of their medicines will sink, and of course without merit, sustain no support. A woman who had been for a long time afflicted with a disease of the womb, and was suffering from this pain in her bones. They had become so severe as to threaten her destruction, despair of relief, and refusing pain to her, I advised her to take your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks I knew from its formula, which your agent gave me, that it had a specific action upon the womb, and would relieve her pain, which it did in a few days, and in a few weeks restored her to perfect health. Her disease has never returned, and she is well again, and of course without any application to her knee

How False Reports may Originate.

A curious illustration of this is found in an anecdote told in a lecture by Mr. Spurgeon. A minister lived opposite one of the deacons of his church. A report got abroad that the minister had been seen to beat his wife, and the matter was brought before the deacon's meeting. There the minister said he had traced the spreading of the report to the deacon's daughter.—The good man, the deacon, said he would not have spoken, but his daughter's name having been mentioned, he must then state that when he was going to bed on a certain night, he did see (through the window blind of the lighted room) the minister beating his wife, and heard her scream. The minister was non-plussed; but he requested that his wife might be sent for and questioned. When she arrived she explained the whole matter. She said,—"Don't you recollect there was a rat in the room that night, that it got up on my dress, that you got frightened, and took up the poker; that I could not stand still, and ran around the room, you running after me with the poker. This is the explanation of the whole affair." Well, then, the lecturer would remark to his hearers, the next time they heard a story against a good man, let them say at once, "There is a rat at the bottom of it, I know," and that some simple explanation may account for the whole thing.

Advice to Young Ladies.—The Rev. John Dow, an eccentric preacher, is said to have expressed himself once as follows, in the pulpit, with reference to the ladies of his flock.—'The buxom, bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked, full-breasted bouncing lass, who can darn a stocking, mend trousers, make her own frocks, command a regiment of pots and kettles, feed the pigs, chop wood, milk cows, wrestle with the boys and be lady withal "in company" is just the sort of girl for me and for any worthy man to marry. But you, ye pining, moping, screwed-up-waisted, putty-faced, consumption-mortgaged, music-murdering, novel-devouring daughters of fashion and idleness, you are no more fit for matrimony than a mullet is to look after a family of fourteen children. The truth is, my dear girls, you want, generally speaking, more liberty and less fashionable restraint; more kitchen and less parlour; more tee exercise and less sofa; more pudding and less piano; more frankness and less mock modesty; more breakfast and less bustle. Loosen yourselves a little, enjoy more liberty and less restraint by fashion; breathe the pure atmosphere of freedom; and become something as lovely and beautiful as the God of nature designed.'

How to Fix the Clock.—The Country Gentleman contains the following:—When the clock stops, don't take it to the repair shop till you have tried as follows: Take off the pointers and the face; take off the pendulum and its wire. Run over the ratchet from the tick wheel, and the clock will run down with great velocity.—Let it go. The increased speed wears away the gum and dust from the pinions,—the clock cleans itself. If you have any pure sperm oil, put the least bit on the axles. Put the machine together, and nine times in ten it will run just as well as if it had been taken to the shop. In fact this is the way that most clockmen clean clocks. If, instead of a pendulum, the clock has a watch escapement, this latter can be taken out in an instant without taking the works apart, and the result is the same. It takes about twenty minutes to so clean a brass clock and saves a dollar.

Erroneous Ideas.—There appear to be certain writers who systematically inculcate the doctrine that all who possess anything are little better than robbers, and that all who have nothing are oppressed. According to their theories, every man with a decent coat on his back is necessarily a tyrant, and every poor man a suffering saint. In no respect do these writers inculcate the principle which lies at the foundation of man's destiny, that every one of us must in some shape toil for our daily bread. The necessity of self-reliance is never heard from them. Their notion is that every body should have something done for him, as if the mass were not under any obligation to think, but were born into the world to be nursed, coddled, and flattered by the few.

A friend relates the following:—"A young lady having purchased an assortment of music at a music store on returning to her carriage, she recollected a piece she had neglected to buy. "Sir," said she re-entering the store, "there is one thing which I had forgotten, and which I must now request you to give me." "And what is that?" asked the young music seller. "It is, sir, 'One Kind Kiss Before We Part.' She meant the song of that name. The gay youth vaulting instantaneously over the counter, saluted the fair stranger. He lost his heart and his situation."

Cold Feet.—Cold feet are decidedly uncomfortable, and numerous receipts have been given to prevent it. A young lady in town has kindly furnished another, which she has tried and knows to be effective. She says:—"I am troubled with cold feet but I manage to keep them warm by lying in bed every morning until after my mother has built a rousing fire and prepared breakfast. I then get up, place my feet in front of the stove, eat my morning meal, read the news, after warming some flannels, and wrapping them about my "poor feet," return to bed, where I remain until nearly noon. I repeat this every 20 hours, and find it very comfortable. I think I shall survive."

Dr. Franklin recommends a young man in choice of a wife, to select her from a bunch, giving it as his reason, that where there are many daughters, they improve each other, and from emulating acquire more than a single child, spoiled by parental fondness. This is a comfort to people blessed with large families.

"I see the villian in your face," said a Western judge to an Irish prisoner. "May it please your worship," replied Pat, "that must be a personal reflection, sure."

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF CONSUMPTION
BY THE
GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY
IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—Gentlemen:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours, had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not seem to relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system: at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Louis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be relied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

☞ Price of the Remedy in large Flats, $1.

DR. WOOD,

Proprietor of the
OTTAWA CANCER INFIRMARY,
Sparks street & Maria street, Ottawa, C.W.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and
WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and be more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEALER FARMS & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic.'

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Glu ester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Dennis Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads

This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are compounded of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original air Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the comfortable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved; all derangements of the digestive organs are corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

SELF-RELIANCE.

Self-reliance bids defiance
To a thousand petty cares;
Full of glory makes life's story,
And the highest honor wears.
Onward moving, still improving:
Borrowed plumes soon droop and fade.
Few are thriving without striving.
Success comes, through long delayed.

Self-reliant, brave, defiant,
Yet be not too stern of will;
Born of woman, be thou human,
Feel for human nature still.
Gold will sever hearts forever,
Though 'twas given but to bless;
Oh, despise it, do not prize it,
If sweet nature's loved the less.

Self-relying, self-denying,
Thus the cluster minds of old,
Grand and solemn, raised art's column,
Wrought the wonders we behold.
Though but lowly, we may slowly
Rise to eminence and fame;
Match the pages of past ages,
With a great and goodly name.

TREVILLION.

'Where are you going to, daughter Alice?' said Mrs. Williams, rising up from her great arm chair, to intercept the passage of the pale but beautiful woman who was rushing from the apartment.

'I must go and seek my boy myself, mother; something fatal must have happened to him; never before was he out so late as this; pray let me go, or my head will grow bad again.'

'Your father, Alice, is out seeking him, and so are your two brothers, and old Jones, what can you do more than they are doing? The boy is gone home with one of his schoolmates to spend the evening with out your leave, and ought to have the stick laid about his back for giving us all this trouble. Daughter, sit down and try to compose yourself. See how calm I am!'

'Edward stay out without permission! Oh! my precious, only boy! perhaps he now lies dead in one of the old gravel-pits! or has fallen into the river; see how dark it is! What a fool I was to consent to his going to school so many miles off, and at this time of the year, too! Indeed, mother, I cannot stay here; I must go somewhere to search for him. Hark! I hear father's voice,'—and a hale, good-looking man entered the apartment.

'Then you have not found my Edward! Oh, father! how could you bear to see my face without him? I shall go distracted,'—and she wanted to force her way out of the room.

'Don't be a fool, Aly,' said her father, throwing himself into his own elbow chair in the opposite corner to where his wife was sitting, 'you make more fuss with that boy of yours than your mother and I have done with a dozen of you—he'll be back again, depend upon it, when he has had his fling out, and I hope you'll punish him for playing truant.'

'Have you been over to the school, father? Have you seen Mr. Owen, the master? Was Edward there in the morning? but time did he leave? Who was in his company?'

'How can your father answer so many questions in a breath,' said Mrs. Williams. 'Do you not see what a heat he has put himself in, with riding all about the country? but you think of nothing but your son—you have no such reason to be proud of him neither.'

'Nay wife, you might have spared her that, and at such a time too. Don't cry, Aly; you know we love Edward just as well as if he had been born in wedlock; and as for you child, I think the misfortunes and the cruel treatment you have received make you dearer to us than when you were railed," the beauty of the vale of Clwyd.'

'I did not mean to hurt her feelings, said the mother, 'she knows that well enough, but she might have offered to draw you a jug of ale, when she saw how fatigued and hot you were. I cannot do it myself.'

'Forgive me, mother—how could I think of ale, when my darling boy may be lost to me for ever? Those dreadful stone quarries! he has to pass close by them. Let me just go as far as them, I can take Winny with me.'

'I tell you, Aly, he is not there. Mr. Owen told me that he came to school as usual, but some misunderstanding had taken place between him and one of the older scholars, he knew not what about, when Edward stood up with a face as red as crimson and declared, 'he never would go to that school again.' Before any one could stop him he was off, and no doubt is concealing himself in one of the pits or quarries here about—he'll soon be tired of that.'

'What could they have quarrelled about?' said Alice, thoughtfully, 'and he is of so sweet a temper, too.'

'But confounded proud, you must own that, Aly; at any rate the boy is safe.'

'What could cause him to act in so decided a manner? 'tis very strange!' and the anxious mother threw her handkerchief over her face and wept.

Edward Williams did not return that night. Alice was in a state of utter distraction, and the grandfather and grandmother now seriously partook of her anxiety. The boy's uncles had both come back without gaining any tidings of him; old Jones, who loved the youth almost as well as did his mother, was not yet returned.—The search was to be resumed immediately after breakfast, when, suddenly, the object of all this trouble, and research, stood before them, pale, it is true, but cool, firm, collected; he threw his fine dark eyes upon the assembled group, paused a moment, as if undetermined how to act, then flung himself into his mother's arms, who, nearly frantic with joy, as she has been before with grief, strained him convulsively to her bosom.

'You have nearly killed your mother, my dear Edward,' at length said Mr Williams, very gravely, 'and none of us are better for this night's work. Give an account of yourself.'

'That can soon be done, my dear grandfather,' said the beautiful boy, with a face now crimsoned over. 'I was insulted at school, and I will not submit to insult; in returning home to—to ask a question of my mother, I passed by the unworked slate quarry, near Llencalas, and I heard a moan proceeding from it.'

'Well, my boy, proceed,' said Mr Williams, mildly.

'I told you, father, that he had not played us truant, said Alice, fondly, 'my Edward has too tender a heart.'

'I contrived to get to the bottom of the quarry,' said the boy, whose age was about fourteen years, 'and I found there a gentleman, who had fallen in, and who had broken his leg—'

'Poor gentleman,' said Mrs Williams, 'Well, Ned, what did you do with him?'

'Why, I could not let him lie there and die, said the boy, 'so I comforted him all I could, and told him I would soon bring him assistance; but first I tied his handkerchief about his leg, and propped it up, and left my jacket under it for a pillow; then I ran over to Llandlas, and got a cart and a couple of men and some ropes to help me, and we drew him out and carried him to the head inn—after that I had to get the surgeon for him, and Mr Davis was not at home, so I ran to Mr Jones, and he soon set the leg, but the gentleman looked very ill, and called me his 'deliverer,' and begged I would not leave him, so I have been sitting up with him all night, and I have promised to see him again to day. Now, grandfather, do I stand excused?'

'You are a brave fellow, and always was,' said Mr. Williams, laying his hand affectionately on his grandson's shoulder, 'there kiss both your mothers, and come and eat your breakfast. I will ride over myself to the Druid and see the poor gentleman. Come, Edward, seat yourself, and begin.'

'I cannot eat, sir,' replied the boy, turning again deadly pale, 'I want to speak to my mother.'

The countenance of that mother turned unusually pale also, and her lip evidently quivered, as she said, 'but has happened, Edward? Can you speak to me here?'

'No, mother,' said Edward, almost solemnly, 'I wish to speak to you ALONE.'

'Come with me then, to my chamber' said Alice, 'but your grandfather speaks to you.'

'When you have finished this mighty secret, master Ned, I suppose you will be ready to accompany me to Llandalas?' inquired Mr Williams.

'In about an hour, grandfather, I think I shall be ready,' answered Edward, with a wave of the hand, and a dignity that rather irritated than pleased his grandmother, and his two uncles, who called out with a tone of derision, 'There goes the Emperor of Morocco!'

The boy heard them, but not a muscle of that beautiful lip was effected by the taunt; only a deeper shade of melancholy passed across his brow, as he led his mother from the room.

'I cannot think what ails the boy,' said Mr. Williams, thoughtfully. 'I trust no one has put him into the well of Ffynnon Enon; if so it will cost me a good round sum to take him out again.'

Now, be it known, that this celebrated well, near Llandalas, in North Wales, is believed by the inhabitants round, to possess some mighty power of witchcraft, and that the old man or woman (as it would be) who had the charge of it, and was looked upon as its priest or priestess, could by some incantation or other, place the spirit of any victim that had displeased them within its waters, whereby he became melancholy, subject to fits, and altogether an altered person. Every one in Denbighshire has heard of the magic well of Ffynnon-Enon

'How can Edward be put into the well?' argued the grandmother, 'seeing he is such a favourite with old Griffiths, the well-keeper?'

'That stands for nothing,' retorted her husband, 'they are a sad set of spiteful capricious creatures, those old wizards: the boy may have offended him, and he looks strangely altered, me thinks.'

On! he has been up all night, and he has had a quarrel with one of his school mates,' said Mrs. Williams; 'I dare say he is going to tell his mother all about it, and she will be sure to take his part; I hope he is not going to vex her, poor thing; she has had trouble enough already.'

'Mother,' said Edward Williams, 'sit down, I want to ask you a question, but you must not take on, or feel offended with me. You know I love you more than all the world besides; love and respect you—oh, mother!' and he paused, while tears started to his eyes.

'What does this mean, my beloved boy? speak to me as you have ever done, openly, freely—'

'Ah!' sighed the agitated youth, 'but can I speak to you as I have ever done? Can I respect you as I have ever done?—Love you I shall ever do—that nothing can alter.'

'Go on,' said Alice, striving to master her powerful emotion, 'out with it all.'

'I will, mother; nay, I must, or I shall be choked. God knows how I have passed the night—the sword rings in my ears yet, and was cold upon my heart.'

'What sword, my child? what has passed?'

'Mother,' said Edward Williams, fixing his dark mournful eyes upon her, 'young Roberts told me not to give myself such an air of a gentleman, for I was nothing but a bastard! I called him a liar in return. Oh my dear mother, was I right? Is Roberts indeed a liar?'

'My own noble boy,' said poor Alice, clasping her son to her bosom, 'thank God! I can look my child in the face and hear him say this without anguish, without shame. Yet thou, dear and wronged one, it is true thou art my child illegitimate.'

'Oh, mother! how can both these things be true?'

'Sit down, my child, here, close beside me. Stay, I must fetch the letter; his letter; that of your father, Edward; I have been cheated—deceived—injured; but my own conscience and my God acquit me of all blame. Hear my pitiable story—

'When very young I was considered beautiful. I was called by the name of ———. No matter—it is over. I went to visit a relation higher in life than ourselves; there I saw one still higher, who made honourable love to me he said; obtained my heart, and with the entire consent of my parents we were married by banns in London.'

'My beloved mother,' exclaimed young Edward fervently, 'I could have sworn it was so. You were then married?'

'For a brief space, my child, I figured away in high life—had a horse, carriage, servants, every thing. You can remember nothing of all this: for before you were a twelve-month old, I received this letter from the man who was has enough to take advantage of some trifling mistake in the wording of the banns, to desert the woman to whom he had plighted his sacred vows at the altar of his God. Read it, Edward, and judge what must have been my feeling on receiving it.'

'Beloved Alice,

'My father has heard of our connection; he is all resentment, for, alas! you are rich in nothing but virtue and beauty. He has been examining the church-books, and has found out that the name I married you by is not only mis-spelled, but that one of my christian ones is altogether omitted. He has, therefore, severed the legal ties that bound us; those of affection can never be divided. Every thing in your present abode is your own, and an annuity of three hundred a-year will be regularly left for you, in quarterly payments, at ———, the bankers. I myself, am obliged to submit to my destiny, for I am wholly dependent on the will of my father, who insists upon my setting off instantly for India. May heaven bless you and my lovely boy At all events I leave you one consolation—you are innocent.'

'Villian,' said Edward Williams indignantly; 'what did you reply?'

'Nothing: I packed up my small wardrobe; left all my valuable jewels and trinkets behind me; reserved only gold enough to pay the expenses of my journey; and, after sending the key of the house to this man's father, I took you, my only treasure, in my arms, threw myself into a coach—arrived at my good father's house, and, putting the letter into his hands, calmly asked him if I had done right.'

'My noble! my virtuous mother!' cried out Edward in a transport, 'now, indeed, I am proud of you. What said my grandfather?'

'Just what I thought he would,' said Alice, 'my mother rather blamed me for not bringing away the jewels and what money there was in the house; but no—I scorned everything coming from such a source. Of course, I have never received a shilling of the annuity, nor have I ever had a single line from the Honorable Edward Trevillion.'

'From who I inquired the boy, starting up and looking with wildness in his mother's face.

'It is a name, my child, to which it seems you have no legal rite, at least to the surname—Trevillion.'

'Kiss me, dearest mother, again, again, now, for a time farewell. And he shot like an arrow from the bow.

'My young deliverer, my brave, my excellent boy. What can I do for you?—You have saved my life, be it my duty to take care of yours in future. What is your name, my young hero?' said the gentleman lying at the inn called 'The Druid,' at Llandalas, with the broken leg. 'we will be friends,' he continued, 'tell me your name?'

'Edward,' answered the boy, almost sullenly, with a look, which to the sick gentleman seemed inexplicable.

'That is my own,' said the invalid, 'what is your other name?'

'I have no other,' cried the boy indignantly.

'How is that?' inquired the gentleman, eyeing him with evident admiration, notwithstanding his cold and constrained air.

'My father robbed me of my name,' retorted the youth, his eye kindling; 'but he could not rob my mother of her honor—that was beyond his power. Pray sir, is not your name Trevillion?'

'It is,' said the recumbent gentlemen; 'how did you learn it, boy?'

'From a voice within me, sir—a voice called instinct, which, aided by the initials on your linen, assured me that I stood in the presence of one who, after calling me into being, bitterly deserted his own offspring and the mother who love me.'

'Merciful God,' said the stranger, and he fainted upon his pillow.

'Something must have agitated him,' cried the surgeon, soon after entering the room, and seeing Edward tenderly supporting his patient. 'I left him quite cool, and doing well, now he is in a high fever. Has any other person been here?'

'No, sir,' said the nurse, 'I just stepped out of the room to fetch something, as this young master was here who saved his life as one may say, and when I came back I found him thus.

'It is very strange,' said the surgeon. 'I cannot account for it; but he must be bled immediately—his senses are wandering.'

'I have killed my father,' thought Edward to himself; perhaps I ought to have stand till he recovered. But no; he wanted something to rouse him. He had no pity on my mother. Still I trust he will not die. It would have been better, perhaps, if he had perished in the slate-quarry. Yet that would have been very shocking. How ill he looks How wildly he talks. How his head burns. Let me water it with my tears. And he did so; night and day he sat beside him; gave him the medicine from his own hand; listened to his ravings when the hired attendant slept; nor could he be drawn from his bed-side; although his grand-father, who rode over daily to visit the sick gentleman, and offer him such assistance as was in his power, conjured the boy by the love he bore his mother, to relax his attendance on the stranger, seeing that his own health suffered so extremely by such constant watching. Nothing could persuade the boy to leave the stranger's couch.

At length the violence of the fever abated; the bone knit itself together; and the stranger was pronounced convalescent.

Not another word had passed between the father and son on the painful subject that had thrown around such a change in the health of the former. There seemed to be a tacit contest between them never to allude to it more. Mr Trevillion watched the attentions of young Edward with eyes suffused in tears, whilst the boy most carefully concealed, or attempted to do so, his own emotion.

'Edward Trevillion, at length murmured out the agitated father, after sending the nurse out of the room, 'does your mother live?' and his lips seemed convulsed; 'I have not dared to ask this question before; even now it seems too much for me.'

'She does,' answered the boy, surprised to hear himself addressed by his father's name, and wondering what was coming next.

'Another question, my beloved, my noble son,' said the stranger; 'is she still unmarried?'

How did the colour mount into that youthful cheek at hearing this. How did his bosom palpitate. He looked indignant, yet feared again to do injury to his new found father.

'You hesitate,' cried Trevillion, 'and all my hopes are over;' and his head fell upon his hand, while a deadly paleness spread itself over his fine countenance

'My mother was married, sir—once—to you—and is registered in Heaven. She needs no second marriage'

'Then, Alice, you are my own,' fervently exclaimed Trevillion. 'That marriage was a legal one. It was my father who wrote that letter; who suppressed all mine to her; who forced me to India, and then informed me my wife had united herself to another. I had lost all trace of her; only known that her relations lived in Wales—North Wales. I have come hither to seek her—to traverse every hill and valley until I could gain some trace of her. But the name of Williams is every where—it has deceived me, baffled me. In pursuit of Alice, my fondly believed wife, and you, my son, I fell by some accident into that quarry. You know the rest. Where shall I find her?'

'I will show you the way,' cried Edward, transported with joy. A post-chaise was instantly procured. All was explained: all was forgiven. Alice had again her carriage and her servants; she had more, she had an affectionate husband, and a son whose qualities as a man, did not disgrace those of a boy.

AWAY.

Away! Away!—And how the strong hearted and strong limbed boy feels it in every nerve and muscle when the hour of his liberty has come, the school door opened, the teacher's authority for the day over, and he can push and rush and run for the sleighing, coasting, snowballing or skating in the merry winter time; or the rough and tumble foot-ball, or manly cricket in the gay days of summer. What a joy careers in brain and body, all thro' him; a great muscular inspiration at the word—away! Or how he calculates, and thinks, and dreams, and wearies for the day when the promise of jaunt or journey is to be fulfilled. The new, the strange, and the far away delight his fancy. His ideal of more happiness is in new places and new faces; and, poor lad, let him have his notion, and rejoice in these hopes in the days of his youth, for soon enough he'll taste a little wormwood in his best cup, and find a thorn in his sweetest rose. Let him alone, to try to find all trouble forgotten when away; and blame him not harshly the while, for he is not indifferent to the pleasures of home tho' for a time he sighs to be away. It is not a wish, really, to part from parents and all the well beloved under the roof tree, but only he would like to get nearer to the unseen, and to enjoy what distance and story lend to his view. Away!—let him have it to joyous glee; let him have it to the very fullest, with a hearty hurrah on the liberty of the present, and the high expectations of delight on flood or field. Let him have it, for soon enough he'll be a bondman to labor, and then, even in his vacation, even in that so called freedom, when the tool is laid aside, or the desk is anvilled, cold carking care will have some business in his beating heart, and be drawing its ploughshare on his brow. Is it no' well to have a true, earnest, generous sympathy with youth, and to have a young green heart even tho' the "almond tree" may flourish on the crown.

How different is the "away" of the emigrant, even though his hopes—and what emigrant has not hope,—gild his yonder land, and cheer him on by the gleaming picture of success. It is something to have both animal and moral courage to take the exodus; and it is fortunate when there is a way as well as a will to follow after the prospective image of gold and silver that invites his devotion, and to make brave for toil or trial—but yet, unless, his soul be selfish and dead, the "away," the hour of the reality that puts his mortal mettle to the test is a cutting sword. He goes in a arch of the better, but he is leaving good behind as well. He is launching his bark, and baptizing it with a tear; and he hopes and prays it may be landed—but it may be stranded,—and the "away" flutters on his lips like an eaglet on the edge of its eyrie, that must, and wants, and fears to, fly.—But far worse, still, is it with the involuntary exile, for his heart must beat like a muffled drum, his sad march to a foreign grave; and as he goes, the Hebrew lamentation may be repeated over him "weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him; but, weep ye sore for him that goeth away, for he shall return no more, nor see his native country."

There is the "away," too, of him who goes to that "bourne whence no traveller o'er returns." It is a journey appointed for all to take,—but all do not have the preparatory summons. It is to some the crash and smash of the collision; it is the instantaneous unwarning, tearing, roaring explosion of the ship on the deep sea, without time for the length even of the publican's prayer, and dismounted limbs of men and women, tell of death too truly and too awfully there; or, that corpse have gone down, using a fathom down to ocean's undiscovered burial caves. There is no time given to say, or to bid farewell in such instances; and yet many live and labor, and seek and sin, as if they were to have a tranquil translation, in their own time, to terminate their connection with sublunary things. The "away" of the man of God on his death bed, is the triumphant trumpet note of his soul's jubilee; and save for the friends he holds so dear, he has no ties to unloose; and the mother with her maidens and his, and the son reverently beside the couch of his sire, can bid god speed to his "with a joyful sadness, or a sad joy, like as one leaves to look and linger on that glorious sun that drops behind the sea, so golden and calm, and to leave the night to bring up the rabble, if not the sorrowful procession of its funeral. We take heart of obeer from the sure and certain hope of its resurrection from the other side; and so with friends away up among the majority in the great redeemed and Holy Catholic Church their "away" is certainly their gain; and it is very much to be questioned if it is, all things considered, really our loss, tho' the pious platitudes of weeping comforters must needs almost always have it otherwise.

Away!—and does not the noble race horse, much as he is cared for, love to be unbridled, and uncurried, save by the sun and dews, and rains from heaven; and how he runs and rolls, and eats and sleeps his very full, and is all the better, the stronger and be happier for his summer holidays.—And old Dobbin likes it too, and tries to kick up his old heels in the park, and play the colt again, as he is sent to take a month's recruiting by the green sides of a comfortable watering place. And why not? for certainly many a horse has been more useful to the world than his owner. And Oscar likes to be unchained, and leave the kennel for a time, for ever if he had his own way—and what a time he has of it when there is no collar on his neck, and he can bound and bark, hunt his tail, and chase his shadow; now off in search of fun, and then back as if he would fain jump into his master's arms, and give him a comfortable hug, an amiable kiss of grateful companionship.

Now, there are far worse friends a boy may have, and far worse, and far meaner loves he may cherish, and far worse examples follow than those of a kindly horse; or of a companionable dog, with an eloquence in his wagging tail that has no hypocrisy in its profession of friendship; and who will go with him thro' disasters, poverty, and famine, even till death. That strange man Burns, the poet, somewhere in his letters, says, "that man is the god of the dog, and it would be well if man would serve his God with as unfaltering devotion as the dog does his." Yes, even a dog may teach a Christian a lesson!

As to the "away" business, I am long of coming to it, but then I am at it, too.—Every one has his own kind of preliminaries to a start. Get the portmanteau and the key, and then the packing, to an old travell, is a short work. Now, if I am to do anything in the way of keeping track of myself, the keys and buckles of the diary apparatus must be got hold of, and I must think a little, moralise a little, and even be prosy a little. Why, speaking of horses, even very good ones are stiff and stupid after some hard work, their paces are very short and stumbling, and very unlike making much of a journey, yet it is wonderful how they sometimes warm up, and get over the ground. Yes, both a writer and a critic may learn from a horse. Now, who knows but a brain, that has had little intercourse with an ink-bottle for nearly a year, may get to work again, and an idle pen into motion again, if you will only have patience with me at the outset? I know, without any one telling me, that, one inch away in narrative has not been made; and then, what's the use of all that has been written? Burn it, and seek another beginning, as they say many a minister has done half-adozen times on one text!—No! it's worth something just as a beginning, if nothing more. Of course, I can be told how to do the thing much better. For example, just to have jumped right into the Atlantic, always keeping a good ship between me and the sharks—easier done than keeping clear of the land ones. But, then, I have not done that; and, instead, have taken a roundabout way of finding the beginning for myself.

It is singular how the best laid plans are suddenly shattered; but it is just the old—and the new—truth, that "Man proposes, and God disposes." How busy the head was with things new and old, and a firm resolution for a winter's hard work—no matter what or wherein—when gradually, then suddenly, it demanded a vacation. It said, without mistake, that head work is the hardest work. The man on his muscle cannot understand that, though he can sleep himself all right after fatigue, in twelve hours at most. Well, sickness gave place to inactivity, but that again had to give way to change of scene and climate. But whither? I was fairly the waif of the wind of circumstances, but neither believing in, nor recognizing chance. Chance! how can there be faith in that: where can one find the "faithful and true" in it? I got my ticket as a doomed man gets his sentence, but then resolved to brave it, follow it to its terminus, and look about for new circumstances. It took me to New York.

Shall I try to touch, in light and shade that Gotham? In its position, as a seaport, it is admirable; in its trade, immense; in the taste of its public buildings, miserable; in its finer shops, substantial and costly; in its population, from the extremes of wealth and want, of virtue and vice. As old Rome gathered all the gods of the world within its walls, so New York gathers into it all the villainy of other countries, all the vices and incontinences known on the earth, and tries to refine them into its ideas of civilization. It is a mighty maelstrom, ever sucking in, and in many instances sucking in to perdition the thousands who give themselves within its reach.—New Orleans, to all the aggravation of its former iniquity would not compare with it. Great is that there are the righteous there, and the resolute for good too, but it seems as if impiety had got such a headway that the pad, it and the paw cannot stem it:—as to the press, it is one of the surest evils, and adds to the current instead of restraining it. The great idea, and practice as well, of social life is bad, and it seems as if it must go on to worse. Even the churches have a stiff formal fashion in many cases; a cold elaboration about the sermons; and a polite respect, a kind of good mannered thing on the part of the audience. Of course there are exceptions, but comparatively few. I pass the political preachers, they call themselves preachers to the times. They want to be the Isaiah and Jeremiah of the christian dispensation, but though they have talent and wit enough, perverted them to the wrong day and place. It is very well, at the moment, to hear Beecher, for instance, but when you reflect, it feels a good deal like Sabbath profanation to be there. However, let New York, with its sorrows and its sins, its ministry and its minstrel-ic, its virtues and its vices, its business and its badness, it hopes and its hazards, pass on in our panorama. Every one in this country is supposed to know it, or at least about it; and only let me warn those who would go there that they will require to have on them a double suit of "the whole armor of God."

Extract of a Letter from the New Canadian Gold Region to the N. Y. "Tribune."

The Hon. Billa Flint, M. L. C. for Quinte Division, which embraces the northern locality, has discovered several apparently rich deposits, and in the faith he possesses has purchased from the Government something like a thousand acres of land, at the advanced figure now demanded. This, added to the several thousands previously owned by him, gives an extensive field for operation in the spring, which, it is understood, he intends to improve.

The Hon. Billa is an important man in this locality. In Elzevir he owns a village in the comprehensive sense that a man may be said to own a house—because he built it, and rules it—pronouncing what may and may not be practised within its limits.—"No spirituous liquors sold here" is one of the important edicts that have gone forth, and hence the thirsty coutiaux to thirst, for not in all the place can spirituous beverages be found. At this village—this model village—this village of Bridgewater, with its thousand inhabitants, the hon. gentleman of temperance and enterprise is now erecting a hotel to accommodate 300 gold-seekers. The work has commenced, and will early in the season be completed.

To the present time the Government has sold wild land at double its former value, viz., $1 per acre, to the extent following:—

Madoc, 4,300 acres, at $2 ...	$ 8,600
Elzevir, 5,500 acres, at $2 ...	11,000
Tudor, 550 acres, at $2	1,100
Marmora, 370 acres, at $2 ...	740
Total	$22,340

And purchases are still being made, faster, it is understood, than patents can be issued for them by the employees of the department. There is plenty of Crown Land unsold in these townships yet, however; enough, perhaps, to keep the clerks busy parchment-writing and record-reading for six months to come.

The Deputy-Commissioner of Crown Lands was here from the seat of government last week. The receipts of cash for lands at his department must have aroused him.

A traveller from one of the eastern townships reports gold found in Loughborough, 50 miles east of this place. He says in localities farmers have built fence with quartz rock, not knowing its character, and that fine specimens of gold are now being found in quarts that hitherto has been considered worthless. My informant being a most trustworthy gentleman, I have no hesitation in repeating his assertion.

An Adventure.

A gorernment employed of Gallic descent, returning from a social party a few nights since, was crossing the Suspension Bridge about midnight, when a man accosted him. The robber [for such he proved to be] was of a most ferocious aspect with long hair, and a fierce shaggy beard and haggard eyes. Presenting a pistol at the head of the unlucky wayfarer, he demanded "your money or your life." The gentleman searched his pocket-book but not a cent did he find therein. "I do not wish to search you," said the confiding bandit, "swear to me by the soul of your grandfather to do that which I direct you to do!" The dark river uttered its ghastly mutterings beneath, and the night wind stirred the long beard and raven locks of the wild-eyed robber. The gay Frenchman began to feel quiet uneasy, and to escape the awkward predicament, took the required oath. "To-morrow," returned the other, "you will return here with a fishing line, attached to the end of fifty dollars, and lower it from this side to the rocks beneath, I will be there to receive the sum. Fail not! Now go!" The affrighted monsieur did not wait a second bidding. Encountering a little further on a friend who was luckily out enjoying a walk in the bright moonlight, he related to him his singular adventure. Determined to get to the bottom of the mystery, the two immediately gave chase in the direction indicated, and overtaking the robber, threw themselves upon him. But the pistol was found to be nothing more than a well used pipe. In the scuffle of poisoning this formidable bandit, the black beard fell to the ground disclosing to the astonished captors, familiar features of a damsel well known to the rakes of the city. She was released on promising never to attempt such a mode of "raising the wind" in future.—Citizen.

ACCIDENT TO A SOMNAMBULIST.—A gentleman who is addicted to walking in his sleep, rose about three o'clock yesterday morning while yet asleep, and wrapping a blanket around himself, glided noiselessly towards the stairway. Just as he reached the head of the stairs, an alarm of fire was given directly in front of the house. Waking up with a start, he fell head foremost down the flight of steps, and by reasonable at the bottom. He was picked up, and it was discovered that he was bleeding pretty freely from a wound in the head. Medical assistance was procured, and no further danger is apprehended.—Citizen.

The public education in Spain is very backward, as may be imagined from the fact that out of a total of 72,187 municipal councillors, no less than 12,489 are unable to read or write. Among the number are included 423 mayors 933 deputy mayors.

An icicle in Newark fell and smashed a twenty dollar bonnet.

MASONIC LECTURE AND GRAND BANQUET TO THE GRAND MASTER OF CANADA.

On Wednesday, the Most Worshipful the Grand Master of the Masonic Order of Canada, Col. Wilson, of Simcoe, paid a visit to Peterborough, and in the evening delivered a lecture on the subject of Masonry, in the Victoria Hall. The wise precaution of admitting by ticket only was adopted, yet notwithstanding the house was really crowded.

The lecture was eloquent, and eloquently delivered, requiring for that purpose nearly an hour, and was most attentively listened to. It was a careful review of Masonry under its two aspects, that of being "operative" and "speculative," and treated of the order in respect to its antiquity and usefulness, and the teachings (to Masons) of its emblems; pointing out as they did—purity, justice, equality, and the strongest hopes of immortality; the order being founded on Faith in God, Hope in Immortality, and Charity to the Brotherhood. It was to Masons, at least, very entertaining, and although the general audience received neither signs nor passwords, they were equally pleased.

The members of the Fraternity came in a body, preceded by Principal King, who appeared to be Director of Ceremonies on the occasion; he was followed by the Masters, Col. Wilson, G. M., and then the Brethren. As soon as the Most Worshipful G. M. was on the platform, surrounded by Masters and Past Masters, by order of Mr. King, the Brotherhood received their G. M. with three times three. When announced, we expected to hear a perfect outburst, but the Fraternity do that with what we might call signs rather than sounds, and the mode was appreciated by the audience, if not understood.

THE BANQUET.

After the Lecture the members of the order retired in a body, but shortly after assembled at the Huffman House to enjoy a banquet given in honor of the distinguished visitor. The Bill of Fare was interesting and handled in good style. R. Dehnistoun, Esq., W. M. of the Corinthian Lodge, presided, having on his right Col. Wilson, Grand Master, Rev. V. Clementi, Grand Chaplain, Dr. Burnham, W. M. of the Peterborough Lodge, and A. H. Campbell, Esq., a member of the Grand Lodge of England; on his left, the Rev's Mr. Beck and McDonnell, W. Clinton, Esq., and others. About sixty altogether sat down. As soon as the edibles had been freely discussed and thanks returned by the Rev. Mr. McDonnell, toasts and bumpers became the order of the evening.

The usual loyal toasts, "The Queen and the Craft," "The Prince and Princess of Wales and the Royal Family," "Her Majesty's Representative, the Administrator of the Province," were all given by Mr. Dennistoun and received with all the honors, and songs followed by Messrs. Henderson and Davidson.

Mr. Dennistoun then remarked that having drunk the usual loyal toasts they had now come to the toast of the evening. He would not, however, make any lengthened remarks as they desired to hear the honourable guest rather than their own voices. He therefore, would announce the toast, "The Health of the Grand Master of Canada, Col. Wilson." This toast was received with three times three by the brethren; this, in masonic style is not very noisy, but is impressive, and must have been rather impressive on the maternal of which the building is composed, as it trembled during the operation.

Col. Wilson, on rising, thanked them for the manner in which his name had been received and his health drunk. It was no small honor to be thus received, and he regretted that it almost left him speechless. He, however, had occupied much of their time before in his lecture on the "Craft," and would, therefore, be excused from making a long speech just now, and more especially so, as the general order was short speeches and long drinks. He thanked them again for the honor conferred. He would, however, ask the favor of proposing a toast —one that would be received with a good will, he well knew, and that was "The Masters and Past Masters of the order in Peterborough." They had done much to establish the Brotherhood and to keep it active, and he knew their names now would be well received. (Applause.)

The toast was then given and received with Masonic honors, taken from Col. Wilson.

Captain Sutherland returned thanks, remarking that he had just learned that he was the oldest Past Master but one present. He, however, was not accustomed to talk on Masonry; the water was his element, and he would certainly be more at home in responding to the Navy. (Applause.)

Song by Mr. Lawson—"When my old hat was new."

Dr. Burnham, W. M. Peterborough Lodge, was then loudly called for, and on rising said he scarcely knew what to say, as the "old hat" had taken everything out of his head. He had pleasure in responding to the toast; he believed it was well merited, and the tribute paid justly deserved. He (Dr. B.) could say that the Masons of Peterborough had always acted faithfully and honourably towards each other, and he well knew that the two Lodges were in perfect harmony. They were alike interested in all that concerned the order, and also in each others welfare, as what would effect one was felt by all. The members acted in truth towards each other, and all hoped that the lecture of the evening and the example set by Masons would have the effect of adding to their number.

Rev. V. Clementi, Grand Chaplain, also returned thanks, rendering a well deserved tribute of praise to the Past Master, and especially to Capt. Sutherland, who once refused to give up his charter when it was sought to sever connection with the Grand Lodge of England. He (Mr. C.) felt that not at the dinner table but in the pulpit was his proper place as a speaker, for he believed that every man should follow that for which he was educated and he certainly believed that every man should not be a preacher. One true most important duties of every man was loyalty to his country, and he who was loyal and discharged his other duties faithfully did all that could be reasonably required of him. (Applause.)

Mr. King, Most Worshipful Senior W., then in very fitting terms proposed "The Grand Lodge of England."

A. H. Campbell, Esq., responded—doing so most gladly, as a member of that Lodge All masons must look back to that Lodge for their origin, and also as one of the oldest Lodges in the world. He added that masonry was everywhere the same and its principles in every country venerated.

Mr. Campbell had no sooner sat down than he was called on to propose a toast.—Although it was too much to do just after responding to one. He would, however, do so and as they in their Lodges were secluded and their teachings and principles in consequence but very partially known. He knew that the evening's proceedings and banquet would do much to extend those principles. He would make no further remarks, but merely propose "The Guests," coupling with them "The Mayor of Peterborough."

Mayor Scott responded in his usual happy style, referred to the interesting lecture, and thought he had learned something from the clapping of hands, &c., imagining that he could now do it himself if that would make him a Mason. He had been learning all he could, and did really receive instruction from Dr. Burnham's eloquent response, in reference to the duties of the Fraternity towards their Brethren, which he hoped would be of profit to him.

Rev. Mr. Beck followed in a short speech, also the Rev. Mr. McDonnell.

Mr. McDonnell was sorry he did not have the pleasure of hearing the lecture, as he was desirous of learning all he could—as desirous as any of the ladies that had been present, and that was saying much. He had also tried to learn from their acts to-night and he hoped had made some progress. The Craft claimed great antiquity, dating from Solomon's Temple by some, and from John the Baptist by others. One thing he had learned, which if true, was deserving of praise, that in the late rebellion the Masons were said to be the only persons who extended charity to their opponents.

Mr. Clinton also responded.

Mr. King then gave "The Grand Chaplain," referring in fitting terms to the doctrines of immortality and the last do ies to the dying and remarked that no one deserved better to be remembered than he who attended to those last duties.

Rev. Mr. Clementi in a few brief remarks returned thanks for the mention of his name.

"The Ladies" then came from the chair. Responded to by Rev. Mr. McDonnell.

"The Press" also came in for a share of the honors Responded to by Mr. Romaine and Dr. Poole of the Review and by our humble selves.

Then the Junior Warden, Mr. C. Cameron, gave the closing toast—"Happy to meet, sorry to part and happy to meet again"—which proved the sign for separation; when, after a very pleasant evening, all separated, after singing "Auld Lang Syne," the general expression of opinion being that a pleasant and instructive hour had been passed.

LECTURE.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson, W. M., delivered a very instructive and interesting lecture in the Methodist school room, on Wednesday evening last. Subject—"Man the Architect of his own fortune."

Wm. Clinton, Esq., presided during the lecture, before which he made some remarks in reference to the proposed subject and the truthfulness of it, as verified in the lives of many eminent men, and one referred to was Benjamin Franklin who rose from an obscure station to the highest positions in society.

The Rev. Lecturer being introduced commenced by asking, "what is man?" a question which he remarked was often variously answered. but it had been remarked by a celebrated poet, the proper study of mankind is man; man was the subject of the present lecture, not in a metaphysical sense, but in reference to the fact that he was "the architect of his fortune" in this life at least. He then laid down the principle that, every man possesses in himself the means of shaping his own destiny and position among men, through energy, industry and prudence, to take advantage of the tide in his affairs, which taken at proper times, leads to fortune. He then showed that fortune m ant variously. But the fortune which he would show man was Architect of, was situation in life and the happiness or misery arising therefrom. He dwelt at some length on the purposes, desires, principles and appetites of men and of the ruling causes of their actions, among which were thirst for wealth, love of applause, &c. He dwelt more largely on those principles which should govern all our actions, and keep us under moral control, and nothing was so powerful to this end as religion, and he referred to a saying of Patrick Henry as recorded in his will, viz:—"I have now," said he "disposed of all my property to my children. There is one thing I wish I could give them and that is the christian religion; if they had that they would be abundantly rich, but without it, though they owned the whole world, they would be poor indeed." He closed this most instructive lecture with some wholesome advice in reference to shaping our fortunes: and to seek the right and attainable only. He referred to the crowded state of the professions of law and medicine, and the results; but quoted the remark of an eminent lawyer, that there "was room up stairs."

The lecture was listened to attentively throughout, and by a large and appreciative audience, and we hope will not fail to be remembered by the young men to whom it appeared especially directed.

The Government mining engineer attached to the staff of Sir William Logan, chief of the geological survey department, having made his official report in reference to the Madoc gold fields, and that report being of the most favorable character, would it not be well for the people of our town to consider what interest they have in the matter. M. Michel remarks in his report that, "the Richardson mine is as remarkable for its richness as it is for the circumstances under which the gold is found." He says further, that in his opinion it is not an exceptional case, and that gold will be found in many other places in the locality. He himself visited a number of lots in Madoc, Elzevir Marmora and Hungerford; from his examination of them he came to the conclusion expressed above. Any person who refle ts for a moment must see that the finding of gold in one isolated pocket, in a region of country having the same geological formation, would be a very much more extraordinary thing, than finding it throughout the whole range. If this be so, we are naturally led to enquire, what is the extent of country embraced in what, for convenience, we will call the Madoc formation, and what general direction does the formation take, Madoc being the starting point It is much to be regretted that Ir William Logan has not given more attention to this part of our country, as if he had we would be in a better position to answer the questions proposed. From the best information that we can obtain, however, we are led to the conclusion that there is to the north and north east of Peterboro a large tract of country presenting the same geological features as the tract in and around Madoc. This statement involves the answer to our second question, viz, the direction of the range, it being north west from Madoc, if our information be correct as to places Peterboro is in an admirable position as a point of departure for the gold fields, and we think that our merchant would do well to take some steps to bring the fact before the public at a distance from us, say in the form of advertisement in New York and Boston in the East and Chicago and St. Louis in the West. We are aware that many wild and improbable stories are told, that men in their heat and desire make statements that are wide from the truth; or to say the least of it, they allow their heat and desire to run away with their judgment and imagination, everything that looks metalic bright and shining may be gold; after the tale has passed through some other hands the may be is dropped, and it really becomes gold. We base our conclusion that the coming spring will witness a very large emigration into our gold fields on these wild rumors, but as we have intimated upon M. Michel's report. Let the fact, then, that Peterboro is the largest town antiguous to the region be made known at the points indicated. Let it be known that it has railroad connection with the outside world; that everything that miners may need in the way of tools, clothing, food, tents, &c., can be had here at as cheap rates, yea much cheaper than in the United States, that any person wanting a good outfit of clothing could come and prospect and thus satisfy himself, purchase his clothing and save enough to pay his expenses should the gold turn out a myth, and we will soon find that this will be the great starting point for the gold regions

Superstition.

In the last issue of the Review there is a short paragraph, headed a "Charge Repudiated," in which a Mr. McDonald is said to express a desire to contradict the assertion that his child had the small pox, and the Editor of the Review forgets himself therein, and adds a word or two of his own—becomes an advocate for Mr. McDonald so as to get a fling at us. Now, a lecture by the Editor of the Review, on superstition, would be entertaining no doubt, instructive we will not add, till we hear. But whenever he announces his intention of delivering one on the subject, we will, if well, go and hear him; if he write an essay thereon we will read it if possible. But we would remind the refuter and the writer of the refutation that there is a character of whom it said, "nor whosoever loveth or maketh a——"

We make this remark because we know that the Editor was fully aware even while penning it, that what was stated was not true. As to following the example of the majority referred to, there is a trite saying that we prefer, viz:—"Go not with the multitude to do evil." Perhaps he prefers company at the risk of travelling the "broad way," and entering at the "wide gate" of destruction, because "many there be that go in thereat." Certainly he must be fond of the doubtful when he willingly publishes a falsehood to gratify any one. We assuredly will travel alone rather than keep his company in that path. Truth may be blamed, but never shamed.

Madoc.

From the Madoc Mercury we learn that the gold fever still exists there, and has extended also to the United States. Last week a correspondent of Harper's Illustrated Weekly paid a visit to the mining district to learn particulars. The lots where the most active work is going on are, 20 in the 9th con., also 22; lot 20 in the 6th con., 24 in the 4th, 23 in the 6th. About 2000 persons from Prince Edward Co., alone, it is computed, will have visited the place ere the snow goes away. The Mercury also says that it is reported that 8000 Chinese may soon be expected from California. Lumber is in great demand at the place. New mining companies are being formed.

Some time ago we referred to an instance of careless driving by which an old man named Robert Erskine was run over, and received severe injuries, consisting of bruises and a broken arm. We are glad to be able to state that he is recovering from the effects of those injuries. The person who caused them has had to pay for his carelessness. He compromized the matter and gave Mr. Erskine $20, besides paying the doctors bill. We learn that his name is Hendrahan and lives in Douro; not Hendrou of Dummer as first reported.

Lecture at Lakefield.

On Tuesday next, the 5th of March, a Lecture will be delivered in the School House, Lakefield, by the Rev. Vincent Clementi, at 8 o'clock in the evening. The proceeds of the Lecture will be devoted to the fund now being raised by the Building Committee of the English Church, for the purpose of paying off a portion of the debt ($1000) still outstanding against the church

New Store.

It will be seen by our advertising columns that E. Lawder & Co. have opened an extensive establishment of ready-made clothing and Dry Goods, in the shop lately occupied by Messrs. Scott & McDonald George Street, where they offer bargains to all who may favour them with their patronage.—They advertise a complete suit as $12, and invite an examination of the stock.

A grand banquet was given at Portsmouth by the Mayor to Lord Monck on the 30th, in special acknowledgment of his services as Governor General of Canada.

The Leader's London correspondent says there is a rumour given on something like authority, that a residence is about to be established in Ireland for the Prince of Wales, who will pass a certain portion of the year in that country.

The London correspondent of the Irish Times states the project of a Loyal visit to Ireland in the course of the year is still under consideration:—"The Prince of Wales, it is well known, is anxious to have an Irish residence, and to spend at least as much of the year there as the Court ordinarily does at Balmoral or Osborne; and the Princess, who has as yet seen only England and Scotland, is, it is whispered, almost inordinately anxious to see the third of her future kingdoms; and imagines it must be rather like Denmark in its general aspect, which, I dare say about the Giant's Causeway it somewhat is. The interesting condition of her Royal Highness's health at present forbids, of course, any immediate consideration of the project. Then there come the Court duties of the season, the State visit of the Czarewich and his bride to England; but it is expected here, and I believe strongly hoped by the Government, that the Court of the Prince will be established in Ireland for some months of the Autumn."

AN ELOPEMENT CASE.—A minister named Vandenburg, living at Lachute, lately eloped with the sister of the gentleman with whom he boarded, taking, alas, a horse and sleigh which he sold. The girl pretended to be going to Montreal to visit some friends. Vandenburg offered to drive, having some business in the city. There were no suspicions until a neighbor arrived from the city and informed the gentleman that he saw his horse and sleigh at the American Hotel, in the possession of another man. Vandenburg and the young woman, it was discovered, had stopped at the Albion, as Mr. and Mrs. Wood, from Friday to Monday and then set off for the land of free love. The scapegrace, it is said, leaves a wife in a dying state at Cobourg.

"Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine," for March, is now before us. It is a very good number. The plates will be appreciated by the lovers of fashion, and the reading is in the usually attractive style of the Lady's Magazine.

COUNCIL OF SMITH.

SMITH, Feb. 18th, 1867.

The Council met. All the members present.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following By-laws received their several readings and were passed.

A By-law to amend By law No. 196 in respect to statute labor to be performed by persons between the age of 21 and 60 years of age and not otherwise assessed, and searching for and taking timber, gravel, stone or other material for making and keeping in repair any road or highway, &c.

A By-law to amend By-law No. 176 in respect to geese and other poultry trespassing upon the property of the neighbors of their owners, &c.

A By-law to appoint Over-seers of Highways, Poundkeepers and Fence Viewers for the present year.

The auditor's report was read and adopted, and the Clerk instructed to have 150 copies printed in sheet form.

A motion was passed directing that the amount to be paid for a certificate to obtain a license to keep a tavern should be the same as in the past year, viz., $20.

Below will be found a short note from the Rev. Mr. Johnson, concerning the case of small pox alluded to by us a few weeks since. We would not have referred to the matter again but for the unblushing untruthfulness of the party who thus seeks to free himself—rather herself—from the charge of indifference to the life of her child, by exposing it to the inclement weather; and, also, of risking the health of others, because of what we justly styled her "superstition," it became a matter of veracity with us, and Mr. Johnson's note will set that to rest:—

MR. STRATTON.

DEAR SIR,—In compliance with your request, I make a brief statement respecting a case of small pox, which came under my notice.—About four weeks ago, I met upon the sidewalk near the parsonage a woman carrying a child in her arms. She accosted me by inquiring my name, and informing me that she was on her way to my house to get her child baptized. I asked her where she was from? and she replied, "From Emismore." Knowing that there were cases of small pox in that Township, I inquired if her child was well, to which she answered, "Perhaps you would not like to have me take the child into your house, as it is just recovering from the small pox" Upon which she uncovered the child's face and showed me several spots or pustules, which certainly, to an unprofessional eye, had the appearance of the small pox. I am not sure that she mentioned her name, but she informed me that she was the sister of Mrs. —— of Ranksmore, whose husband had died recently of that disease. On my expressing a willingness to call at the hotel where she might be staying and baptise her child, she informed me that she kept her child at Mr. B's store, while her husband was shopping in the Town.

I may add that I learned from a gentleman at Bridgenorth a few days previously, and who had himself taken the small pox at the same house, where I met him while this woman's brother-in law was dying, that the children of this woman were all then sick with the small pox, and either the woman herself or her sister was present and heard the statement without contradicting it.

You are at liberty to publish this statement.

I am, sir,
Yours truly,
J. H. JOHNSON.

An Editor on a "Wild Goose Chase."

(For the Examiner.)

DEAR EXAMINER,—Perhaps it will be amusing to your readers to learn that a certain Editor of not 20 miles from Peterborough has lately had what may justly be termed "A Wild Goose Chase." It happened in this wise, one or two of our citizens had been to the back country, and brought some sand containing what bore strong resemblance to the yellow trash, known as "gold." This was subjected to the keen eye of the "keener man," and pronounced "rich," to himself of course, when immediately he and another friend went on a "chase after the Golden Goose. Northward! Northward! Northward! full forty-eight long weary miles did they eagerly drive, imagining that every stone in Burleigh, Anstruther and Chandos was gold, but to their dismay, horror and dissatisfaction they did not find even a golden "gosling." They retraced their steps, sadder but wiser, declaring the whole a "hoax," and fully convinced "that all is not gold that glitters."

Yours, &c.
GOLD.

THE CONFEDERATION BILL.

The following appeared in the Globe of Friday last, anent this question:—

We received last evening from Mr. J. Gordon Brown, who is at present in England, a synopsis of the changes made in the Confederation scheme by the Delegates from Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Mr. Brown had not seen Lord Carnarvon's Bill when his despatch was made up, but we have no doubt that the measure will be found to be in harmony with his information.

The name of the new Confederation is to be CANADA! Upper Canada is to be styled the Province of ONTARIO; Lower Canada is to be called QUEBEC; and the other Provinces are to retain their present designations. We fancy this is as good a selection as could have been made.

The general features of the scheme of the Quebec Conference are maintained; but we deeply regret to learn that there have been several very important modifications made in matters of detail

And, first, a serious change has been made in the annual grants from the Federal chest for the support of the Local Governments. Under the Quebec scheme it was provided, that each Province embraced in the Union should receive from the Federal treasury an annual grant equal to eighty cents per head of its population, as established by the census of 1861—such old to be in full settlement of all future demands upon the Federal Government for local purposes. The annual burden thus imposed on the Federal chest was as follows:—

Upper Canada, pop.,	1,396,091	$1,116,873
Lower Canada, "	1,111,566	889,253
Nova Scotia, "	330,857	264,686
New Brunswick, "	252,047	201,638
Total annual grant, ...		$2,472,450

These annual grants were not to increase in future years with the increase of population, but to remain permanently at these figures. But this principle, it now appears, has been overthrown by the Delegates so far as regards New Brunswick. That Province is to receive an increased subsidy from time to time, as her population increases, until she has 400,000 people and her grant will amount to $320,000. Then the increase is to stop, and her grant, like that of the other Provinces, is to remain stationery—but at $320,000.

It will be recollected that under the Quebec scheme, New Brunswick had a special advantages over the other Provinces. The 65th resolution declared:—That "the position of New Brunswick being such as to entail large immediate charges upon her local revenues, it is agreed that for the period of ten years from the time when the Union takes effect, an additional allowance of $63,000 per annum shall be made to that Province." Our despatch does not say that this special grant is to remain a part of the scheme, in addition to the new boon conferred on New Brunswick—but we infer that it is; and if so, very great injustice has been done to the other Provinces.

But this is not the worst. It appears that the Delegates have agreed to increase the grants to all the Local Governments; and that not on the just principle of population adopted at Quebec, but in a manner totally irrational and most unjust to Upper Canada! In addition to the eighty cents per head distributed as already shown, the Delegates have agreed that the following annual grants shall be paid permanently from the Federal chest:—

To Upper Canada	$50,000
To Lower Canada	70,000
To Nova Scotia	60,000
To New Brunswick	50,000
Total additional grants	$265,000

Had this sum of $260,000 been distributed according to population as determined by the census of 1861, the distribution would have been as follows:—

Upper Canada	$117,449
Lower Canada	93,513
Nova Scotia	27,854
New Brunswick	21,204
Total	$260,000

The whole grant for local purposes under the scheme as amended will now be as follows:—

Upper Canada	$1,196,873
Lower Canada	959,253
Nova Scotia	324,686
New Brunswick	314,638
Total	$2,795,450

These grants, at the estimated populations of the several provinces on 1st January, 1867, give the following rates of grant per head:—

	Population.	Per head.
Upper Canada..	1,802,056	60 cents.
Lower Canada..	1,288,880	74 "
Nova Scotia....	368,781	88 "
New Brunswick.	296,064	110 "

Nothing could be more scandelously unjust to Upper Canada than this, and we are amazed that Mr. Howland could be a party to it.

The second departure from the Quebec scheme is, that until Prince Edward Island comes into the Union, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick shall have between them the four seats in the Upper Chamber that the Island was to have had. The distribution will now be as follows:—

	Population.	Members.
Upper Canada	1,802,056	24
Lower Canada	1,288,880	24
Nova Scotia and New Brunswick	663,884	24

There is nothing to palliate this change. Under the Quebec scheme, the injustice to Upper Canada was marked enough—but to add to it in this manner was totally indefensible. Why, the three Provinces of Lower Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick united have but 150,689 people more than Upper Canada, and yet they are to have 48 Legislative Councillors and Upper Canada but 24. Every Upper Canada Councillor will thus represent 75,085 people, while the average of all the rest will be but 40,682.—The thing is utterly unfair.

The House of Commons will start with the following distribution of seats and remain so until the Census of 1871, when Upper Canada will get a number of additional seats:—

Upper Canada	82
Lower Canada	65
Nova Scotia	19
New Brunswick	15
Whole House.....	181

The third departure from the Quebec scheme is that the Crown is to have power to enlarge the number of Legislative Councillors to a limited extent, when necessary to prevent a dead-lock. This is an unquestionably an improvement upon the original scheme.

The fourth departure from the Quebec scheme is the transference of control over the Fisheries and over Penitentiaries from the Local to the General Government.—It is just putting in the wedge of Federal interference in local matters. The most distinct and apart are the duties and functions of the two governments the better.

Last, but very far from least, comes the Sectarian School question. And here, as the wording in not so clear as we could have desired, we give the ipsissima verba of our despatch:—

"In reference to the School question, clauses have been introduced, first, stating that any privileges granted to Separate Schools in Upper Canada shall also be granted to Separate Schools in Lower Canada; and second, that all measures about Separate Schools shall be subject to an appeal to the Governor-General in Council."

As to the first of these provisions, it seems very harmless. There is not much danger of an Upper Canada—we beg pardon—Ontario Legislature passing laws for the further extension of sectarianism in the working of our Common School system. The meaning of the second provision is, unfortunately, not clear. The 51st resolution of the Quebec scheme provides that "any Bill passed by a Local Legislature shall be subject to disallowance by the Governor-General within one year after the passing thereof;" and if nothing more is done in the Confederation Bill than to confirm this power of disallowance, and to tasic the precise mode of bringing objections to any Separate School Bill fully under the notice of the Federal Executive, with a view to its disallowance—there can be no possible objection to that. So long as the power of interference of the Federal authorities is merely negative, little harm can result. What was to be feared was the outrageous proposal to clothe the Federal Parliament with the right to legislate in school matters in direct defiance of the Local Legislature

These we understand to be the whole of the departures made from the original Quebec scheme. Some of them are quite unreasonable and exceedingly unjust; and we can hardly understand how the representatives of Upper Canada have consented to them. There may possibly be yet an opportunity of amending some of them. When we have the Bill at full length, we we will be in a better position to survey the whole question. But, meantime, we have no hesitation in stating our opinion, that if the whole tale has been told in our despatch —if there are no other changes to be heard of—the Bill, with all its defects, will be an immense boon to the people of Upper Canada and we will heartily rejoice when it receives the royal sanction.

CABLE ITEMS.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—The session of the first Parliament of the North German States was formally opened yesterday. The King of Prussia, the members of the Royal Family, and Herr Von Bismarck were present. The King in his speech from the throne said, he was encreased as no German Prince had been for ages. All hopes for the future welfare of the nation now rested on an accomplished fact of a united Germany. He recommended the Parliament to form a new constitutional union, which would be defensive in its character, and give unity, liberty and power to the fatherland.

FLORENCE, Feb. 24.—A telegram, from Naples, reports that a magazine of gunpowder exploded at Posilippe, near that city, and a number of lives were lost.

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—Despatches have been received here which state that all the non-German members in the Austrian Diet have united.

MADRID, Feb. 25.—The Government of Spain will immediately form a Board of Public Works for Cuba.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 25, noon.—The Arabian from Liverpool, for Savannah, was lost on Tucker Rock, off the coast of Ireland, yesterday. No particulars have been received.

LONDON, Feb. 25, midnight.—In accordance with the programme announced by the Government on the 11th inst., resolutions on Reform were introduced in the House of Commons this evening. M. Disraeli, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, opened the debate on the part of the Government. He proposed four new franchises and the change of some borough seats.

Mr. Bright followed and made a strong speech in opposition to the scheme of the Derby Administration.

A despatch from Tientsin, China, reports that the Tycoon of Japan had been shot.

OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.—The Minerve returns to this subject, and reaffirms the statement that hereafter the management of all the Catholic Schools in British North America, is to be by law taken out of the hands of the existing lay corporations, and placed in the hands of the Roman Catholic Bishops. There may be a great deal said on the merits of that change in itself; but what an insight does it furnish as to the nature and consequences of the mode in which the Confederation scheme has been worked, when the people of these Provinces, who are said to enjoy self-government, and to have asked for the enactment of this plan, hear of one of the most important clauses of it for the first time from a Catholic journal published in Cincinnati. We venture to say that this clause could be carried in none of our existing British North American Legislatures, and, after Confederation, could be carried in only one of the new legislatures which will be established by that measure, and yet it is to be made law for us in England, on the solicitation of Archbishop Connolly, of Halifax, almost before any in these self-governing colonies had even heard of it, had not an organ of an ecclesiastical body in a foreign country permitted to exercise its gratification at the concession which that body had obtained. The Globe pr fesses to doubt this intelligence; but there is no reason that we can see to doubt it, and we already perceive indications of its convic ion of the fact in the toning down of its utterances upon the subject, preparatory to accepting it with all the rest of those unconstitutional proceedings against which it has so long professed to struggle, but to which it is now exerting itself to give effect.—Herald.

A TENDER HEARTED BUTCHER.—The Toronto Evening Telegraph is responsible for the following curious story:—A few days ago a respectably dressed woman entered a butcher's shop on Queen street, and ordered some meat. The butch r pretended to cut off the piece she desired, and while doing so noticed her pick up three or four pounds of sausages and hide them under her cloak.—She was a regular customer of the butcher, and occupies a good position in society.—So thoroughly surprised and pained was he at the theft, that the knife he was using dropped from his hand, and he fell to the floor, while a stream of blood ran from his mouth. Medical attendance was immediately procured, and it was found that a blood vessel had burst, and that the man was in a very precarious condition. We are pleased to state, however, that he is now recovering. The woman who, by her thieving propensity, so nearly caused the man's death, left the shop in dismay. It is to be hoped that this will cure her of her kleptomania.

The Quebec Mercury laments over the failure of justice at the recent criminal term in that city. "A woman murderer of the most brutal character, and who fully qualified himself for the gallows, escaped with a conviction nor manslaughter only. In another case a citizen crippled for life by an assailant who had fired upon him three times, had the satisfaction of seeing the acquittal of the defendant on evidence which nobody seemed to have believed except the jury, and possibly the judge, a comparative stranger to the district, and to all the parties who testified in the case, and the class of persons to whom they belong. In another case of a most atrocious character the accused were discharged from the absence of witness whom the country does not chose to lodge and board until the trial of the cases they are bound over in."

ILLness OF MR. T. C. STREET.—The St. Catharines Journal of Tuesday evening says:—"We are sorry to learn that Mr. Thomas C. Street, M. P. P., for Welland, is suffering from illness. His nervous system has been somewhat unstrung by the suspension of the Bank of Upper Canada, while the heavy losses he has sustained have produced most serious effects. Not only is his nervous system unstrung, but his eyes

The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some au port from parties who do not care what they sell. It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any other ever discovered. Families, livery-men and painters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Baines & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofulous Affections of the Glands, commonly called Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tetter, and all Skin Diseases.

GALENA, Ind., 8th June, 1866.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel in my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous taint in my blood, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it breaks out in ulcers on my neck and arms; sometimes it turns in my throat, and distresses me for days. For years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and got physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was reduced to read in the Gospel Messenger that your had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful per a month, and used almost three bottles. Sore and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I can say when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and remain ever gratefully Yours,

ALFRED R. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Lebanon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many inveterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward S. Marrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A daughter-in-law from one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, but at length been completely cured by your Extract of

A New Discovery better than the MADOC COLD.
Notice for a Cold—Relief in five Minutes

WHY do you suffer with a bad Cold when one bottle of Morris's Electric Invigorating Fluid will cure the worst cold in three days. It is far superior to any pain-killer or Liniment or Ready-relief. Try it once and you will not keep your house without it, for after all other remedies have failed it has cured hundreds of rheumatism, frost bites, chilblains, burns, scalds, bruises, sprains, pains in the bowels, fresh cuts, lame back, headache and all pains internal and external. Sold everywhere at 25 cents per bottle. Retail and wholesale only by MORRIS, Peterborough, C. W. Guaranteed to give satisfaction or the money refunded. Every one should have a bottle.
Peterboro', Jan. 30th, 1867. 5

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed with out assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

AYER'S
CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? Then symptoms are often the precursors of serious illness. Some fit of sickness is coupling upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and expel out the diseased humors—purify the blood, and let the fluid move on unobstructed in health's channels. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. Then, if not relieved, it must upon its neighbors and the surrounding organs, producing general congestion, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.
ADA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.
From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.
From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR, AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we are in the habit of curing with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 1, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.
Yours with great respect, ED. W. PREBLE,
Chief of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.
From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1866.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so inveterate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALEX'R HALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.
From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best agents I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.
From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in ministrations. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.
JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.
From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. Members of our fraternity have found them an efficacious aid here, they should join us in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the precursor of others that are worse. I believe no liver complaints to the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent promoters of the natural secretion when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1854.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has wrought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effect was like instantaneous. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1853.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands is dangerous in a public pill. Even the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.
Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterborough by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter.—In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF CONSUMPTION
BY THE
GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y & C—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say—I feel pleasure in let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died. I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to it, and came about two hours. When there I saw Esq., Wellington, and inquired to see to him. "I wish you could give me something to relieve me enough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced. Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through me whole system at night I took a 2d spoonful, and rested well in the night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the diseased lungs to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance

The following Report we have copied from a Glasgow paper, at the request of a number of our readers. We wish, however, to be understood as dissenting from the spirit of the Report, generally. It may be considered witty, but it certainly is too partial and touches the religious feeling of a large class of Her Majesty's subjects, too tenderly:—

Extraordinary Intelligence.

Intercepted Report of the Opening of the Infernal Parliament for 1867.

Intelligence has reached its from an unexpected quarter. The circumstances, which will have interest for the curious, are these:—On the night of the 4th, the s s Flying Dutchman (Capt. McGammon) cast anchor in the latitude of 51° 30' north, and in longitude 3° 0' west, to fish for trilobites. On getting under weigh again, early in the morning, it was found that the anchor had brought up with it a cable of very singular appearance. It seemed to be gelatinous in its substance and semi-transparent, and altogether so like a long thin snake, that some of the sailors, who were possessed by the superstitions of their class, declared that it must be the tail of the great sea serpent and were anxious to have it dropped again into the water. Captain McGammon's curiosity, however, having been excited he had several fathom of the cable drawn on board and examined, and on finding that were strand of wire in the middle, he immediately sent below for Sir William Thomson, who was fortunately on board with his instruments, making experiments on the conductivity of salt water. Sir William immediately pronounced it to be an electric cable, but of a construction altogether different either from the Atlantic cable, or any of those laid across the Channel. He accordingly "tapped" the wires and applied his pocket instrument. It was some time, however, before any signals came; but by and by they began to come, and with astonishing rapidity. At first they were entirely unintelligible, but by a careful notation and comparison of the various signals, Sir William was enabled, in less than an hour, to decipher their meaning, and found (with what feelings may be better imagined than described) that the messages were coming from the Lower Regions. So far as intelligible they were all taken down in the order of transmission; but many of them are of so personal and startling a character that they will not, in the meantime, be made public. One important piece of intelligence received amongst the rest was that the Parliament of Hell had been opened that night—that the Houses were still sitting—that a great debate on the policy of the Infernal Government was in progress in the Lower House, between the party of the Old Serpent and the party of the Roaring Lion—and that full details would be sent on in the course of a few hours. Sir William at once communicated this to Captain McGammon, and prevailed upon him to drop anchor again and keep the ship stationary till this report should be intercepted. At half-past six A. M. the report began to come, and was completed by ten o'clock, shortly after which the cable was dropt into the sea. It has been deemed necessary in the meantime, to suppress a few passages in the Devil's speech, but otherwise we give the despatch exactly as received. The report is as follows:—

INTERCEPTED REPORT.

The Imperial Parliament of Tartarus has been opened this year by his Satanic Majesty in person. In honour of the event, there was a magnificent display of fireworks, for which these regions have always been justly celebrated. The Parliament doors were thrown open at midnight, and from that time there were constant arrivals of Princes and Powers of Darkness. The House was soon crowded to suffocation, and was insufferably hot on account of the heat from the subjacent fires. It is said that Maurice & Co.'s patent L'Extincteur is to be tried upon them soon; but metaphysical contrivances have hitherto been found not to work in so high a temperature.

With the exception of the front seats, most of the benches were occupied by ladies of infernal rank, conspicuous amongst whom there was the Scarlet Woman (who is still an exile from her throne in England) also the Inventor of Crinoline, and several distinguished advocates of woman's rights The side galleries were occupied for the most part by blue devils and foreign ambassadors, though there was a good sprinkling of railway speculators, apocalyptic frogs, speculative stock-brokers, iron riggers, men of fashion, publicans, and other sinners.

The Beast, with the number XXX beautifully branded on his forehead, apparently with hot irons, took his seat on the front Ministerial bench. He was followed by Belial, Bacchus, the Earl of Hypocrisy, Lord Mawworm, his Highness the Golden Calf, and other magnates. Precisely at one o'clock, the Usher of the Black Rod summoned Lord Chancellor Avarice to attend his Majesty. There was a hoarse blare of trumpets outside, and in a minutes after his Sable Majesty, preceded by Moloch, who bore the sword of State, entered the House, the assembly rising to receive him. The King wore round his head a huge snake, the glittering folds of which contrasted finely with the dark and scowling visage beneath. It is believed that this head-dress was adopted on the present occasion in honour of the Old Serpent whose foreign policy of Styx has yielded such astonishing results. As soon as his Majesty had taken his seat upon the black throne the Commons were summoned to attend and there was immediately a rush of imps, demons, and bob-goblins of all kinds, to the bar.

The following is the text of

THE DEVIL'S SPEECH.

Princes and Powers of Darkness,—It is with much satisfaction that I again have recourse to your assistance and advice.—In regard to domestic affairs it is my purpose, as usual to say as little as possible.—The reports of the Immigration Committee make it manifest that the prosperity of the Empire, and especially of the Immigration department, is apt to suffer materially from reports being made public in regard to the working of our domestic institutions. Suffice it to say, in regard to the volumes of smoke which have hitherto rendered it impossible for us altogether to conceal from the world the nature of our operations, that the Consumption of Smoke Act recently passed has had a good effect, and has been happily and unexpectedly aided in its operation in the upper world by various ingenious contrivances for referring the smoke to other and natural causes. The consequence is, that vast numbers of people there have already been persuaded that there is no Hell at all. Much, however, remains to be done, and measures are being taken to get the Act more energetically worked, and to impress those who are in charge of the furnaces with the extreme importance of preventing any flame, smoke, sulphurous smell, or other indication of their work from finding its way into the upper air.—Further details connected with our internal administration will be laid before the House in Secret Committee.

Passing to colonial and foreign affairs, I rejoice to see that in almost every part of the world my interests continue to prosper. We have had within the last few years a magnificent return of wars, murders, rebellions, brutalities and gigantic swindles. It is gratifying to observe that the most precious of these contribution have been furnished by Christian nations.

In Europe, I observe with profound regret that the Conservative and Roman Powers are on the wane; and that the Roman Pontiff has been almost entirely stripped of his temporal power. For that Sovereign personally I have no particular regard, but his temporal power has always been a rich source of tyranny, persecution and religious hate, and the entertainment he has furnished us with in the comic almanacs which he has published under the title of Encyclical Letters, entitle him in present circumstances to our commiseration.

In England a most suspicious movement is in progress in the Established Church, having for its object the discontinuance of the business of saving souls, and the conversion of the Church into a large establishment for the exhibition of dolls and other fancy goods, and for the performance of symbolical gymnastics. Should this desirable consummation be attained, it is thought that the penny theatres may be discontinued, and that the subsidies which our Government has hitherto granted to these excellent institutions may advantageously be transferred to the English Church.

In Ireland matters are in a very gratifying condition. The Protestant Establishment, at the origination of which I had myself the honor of presiding, is yielding an unusual crop of discontent and mutterings of armed rebellion. It has already done immense service in the way of converting Romanism into Rebellion, Protestantism into Orangeism, and religion generally into a system of mutual execration and hatred; and there is every reason to hope that, as long as that establishment is continued, Protestantism will be impotent, Popery exasperated, and the misery of Ireland secure.

In Scotland, I observe with annoyance that things are still in a backward state.—Several goods trains have been set agoing on Sunday, and some fruit and confection shops are opening on that day in the large cities; but my agents throughout that country continue to meet with the most aggravating opposition. Happily the reports received from Sir John Barleycorn, my special plenipotentiary in Scotland, continue to be tolerably satisfactory. My plenipotentiary still finds himself in a condition to baffle all schemes for the elevation of the masses. His magnificent agency for the transference of human souls to the Pit has been spread like a network over the land, and is under the protection of the Legislature. In the city of Glasgow alone he has more than 1700 such agencies in full operation, most of them with branch lines from his uncle's Golden-Ball estates, falling into the Reckless Junction. The traffic along this line is immense—ardent spirits going up, human spirits coming down and no return tickets granted. The shares on this railway continue to sell at an immense premium.

More energetic steps for the promotion of Vice and Infidelity in Scotland are still called for; and I trust the measures that are to be laid before you relative to Scotland will receive your most careful attention. In the meantime, my Government is doing everything in its power to retard social and political reforms and to keep alive sectarian squabbles and dissensions in the Churches.

As soon as the Speech was over the Commons retired, and his Majesty left the House accompanied by a large number of illustrious fiends, and escorted by a troop of the Black Guards. The cortege at once proceeded to the railway station, where his Majesty attired himself in broadcloth and a novel hat before taking the special train which was in waiting to convey him to England, where he purposes, during the present crisis, to conduct his affairs in person.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Their Lordships resumed at four o'clock, when the Lord Chancellor took the chair.

Lord Sneer-at-the-Bible took the oaths and his seat on being created a Peer of the United Kingdom of Earth and Hell. Lord Flowin Cooks-the-Books and Lord Holy Poker also took their oaths and their seats in the Upper House. The Earl of Ironriggs took the oaths and his seat as a Representative Peer for St. Mungo. Lord-Lieutenant Brandered took his seat as a Representative Peer for Jamaica, but the taking of the oaths was dispensed with in his case, as he had taken a sufficiency of them already.

The Royal Speech was then read, and Lord Scoffer moved the Address in reply. It was seconded by the Marquis of Wylie, who congratulated the Infernal Powers on the vigilance and activity of the present Government, and on the gratifying success which was attending its new policy of sectarianism, by which its ends in Christian countries were being achieved by cunning and fraud, instead of open force. It was impossible to dissociate this remarkable success from the admirable diplomacy of the Old Serpent—(hear, hear)—the illustrious statesman who now occupies the position of First Minister of the Crown.

Lord Cholera Morbus, who presented a ghastly appearance, and whose filthy integuments hung loosely round his shrunken body and limbs, said he could see no reason for joining in these congratulations. He had just returned from Britain—if, indeed, he had not rather been bundled out of that country neck and crop—in time to be present at the opening of Parliament; and wherever the evidence of the vigilance and success of the present Infernal Government was to be found, it had certainly not come in his way. He wanted to know what the Government had been about that they had permitted such progress to be made by the enemy in the way of sanitary improvement. It was infamous. What with cleansing, draining, ventilating, fresh water supply, city improvement scheme and the like, that country would not be fit to live in, by and by, for any respectable pestilence or epidemic. Was this the sort of success the Noble Lord was on the other side of the House were felicitating themselves upon? ("Hear, hear," from the Earl of Dirt.) He (Lord Cholera Morbus) remembered the time when, in his periodic visitations to Britain, he used to find everything prepared for him, and could take up his quarters in London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh, or where he pleased, and hold high carnival with Death, and slaughter his hecatombs day after day. What was the state of things now? He saw on the cross bench a Noble Friend (Lord Stink of Clyde), whose guest he had often been in Scotland, and who, he was happy to see, was still strong and in a flourishing condition. The presence of his Noble Friend suggested the city of Glasgow, which, at any rate, furnished one of the most prominent examples of the mischievous changes to which he (Cholera Morbus) had referred. He had visited Glasgow in the fall of last year, expecting to find his old quarters in the Lower parts of the city, as also in Bridgeton, Calton, and Gorbals, open to him, and everything ready for operations on a great scale.—Instead of that, he found the whole city cleaned; the lanes, rennels, and closets whitewashed; almost every house proof against him; and scarcely a gutter left in the Goose-dubs for him to lie down in. He found that the whole city had been divided into districts, and every church had got its own district to attend to, and had appointed sanitary inspectors and visitors, who went about and saw that every place was kept clean, and the houses thoroughly aired.—He had alsoked about day after day looking for an asphit or any dirty hole or corner to hide in; but these people were always poking about, and gave him no chance. If he crept into a sink he was turned out; if he tried the ashpit he was driven away with chloride of lime. Everywhere he was insulted, knocked about the head with besoms and brooms, slushed with carbonic acid, and turned about his business. In despair, he had crept away to the house of one Mrs M'Larty, where he had always found a home and good feeding before; but Mrs M'Larty had got the closet whitewashed and her house cleaned; and no sooner did she show his face than she seized him, thrust his head into the jawbox, and spouted Loch Katrine water in his face, till he was only too glad to escape with his life. And all this in a city where, only a few years ago, the people had turned white with terror at his approach, and he had swept them down by the hundred. Was this, he asked again, the sort of success that the Noble Lords on the other side of the House were felicitating themselves upon?

Lord Canning said there was no one in that House who did not deplore the sanitary measures which had been adopted and carried out with such unexpected promptitude by the enemy. But it was a mistake to suppose that the Infernal Government was responsible for this. Every possible effort had been made to prevent those measures from being looked upon by the people as necessary or practical; and, even when they had been adopted, every effort had been made to prevent their being carried out. Laziness, Slovenliness, Recklessness, Insolence, False Notions of Independence, and numerous other agents and friends of the Devil's Government, had done their best to thwart and discourage the Sanitary Committees and stir up the people against them. These efforts had not been very successful as long as Cholera Morbus was known to be in the country; but they were not to be relied, and it was hoped that by and by people would fall back into their old habits, in which case Cholera Morbus and his Epidemic relatives would have an opportunity of falling upon the people unawares and avenging himself for his present humiliation and defeat. (Hear, hear.)—The Old Serpent had not retired from the field; he knew what he was about; he was only biding his time.

After some remarks from Lord Siren, the amendment was withdrawn, and the Address in reply to the Royal Speech was agreed to. Their Lordships then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The House resumed at four.

In the absence of the Speaker (caused by a sudden attack of spontaneous combustion), his place was occupied by the deputy the venerable Nick. There was a large turn-out of members, especially on the Ministerial benches, where Mr. Mawworm Mephistophiles, Mr. Almighty dollar Mr. Sharen-crown, Mr. Cant, Mr. Crawley, Lord Perjury and Lord Backbite re-appeared in their usual places. The Opposition was represented by Sir Lord Blasphemy, Mr. Barefaced Liar, Mr. Lusty and Lord Whiskey.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer gave notice of a bill to open negotiations for purchasing the Pontiff and transferring him to England.

Various other notices having been given, his Satanic Majesty's Speech was read from the chair.

Lord Crafty moved the Address in reply. It was seconded by Mr. Glozier, who descanted at great length on the success which was attending the policy of circumvention introduced by the Old Serpent.—The new application of that subtle policy in the very heart of Christendom, and to Christian Churches and Christian people, soaking the life out of them, and giving rise to jealousies and sectarian feuds, had marked a new and promising era in the body and limbs, said he could see no reason for joining in these congratulations. He had just returned from Britain—if, indeed, he had not rather been bundled out of that country neck and crop—in time to be present at the opening of Parliament; and wherever the evidence of the vigilance and success of the present Infernal Government was to be found, it had certainly not come in his way. He wanted to know what the Government had been about that they had permitted such progress to be made by the enemy in the way of sanitary improvement. It was infamous. What with cleansing, draining, ventilating, fresh water supply, city improvement scheme and the like, that country would not be fit to live in, by and by, for any respectable pestilence or epidemic. Was this the sort of success the Noble Lords on the other side of the House were felicitating themselves upon? ("Hear, hear," from the Earl of Dirt.) He (Lord Cholera Morbus) remembered the time when, in his periodic visitations to Britain, he used to find everything prepared for him, and could take up his quarters in London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh, or where he pleased, and hold high carnival with Death, and slaughter his hecatombs day after day. What was the state of things now? He saw on the cross bench a Noble Friend (Lord Stink of Clyde), whose guest he had often been in Scotland, and who, he was happy to see, was still strong and in a flourishing condition. The presence of his Noble Friend suggested the city of Glasgow, which, at any rate, furnished one of the most prominent examples of the mischievous changes to which he (Cholera Morbus) had referred. He had visited Glasgow in the fall of last year, expecting to find his old quarters in the Lower parts of the city, as also in Bridgeton, Calton, and Gorbals, open to him, and everything ready for operations on a great scale.—Instead of that, he found the whole city cleaned; the lanes, rennels, and closets whitewashed; almost every house proof against him; and scarcely a gutter left in the Goose-dubs for him to lie down in. He found that the whole city had been divided into districts, and every church had got its own district to attend to, and had appointed sanitary inspectors and visitors, who went about and saw that every place was kept clean, and the houses thoroughly aired.—He had also ked about day after day looking for an ashp put that question to the illustrious Fiend (the Roaring Lion) on the other side of the House. Was it by telling the people that the love of money was the root of all evil? (Hear, hear, and laughter.) Was it by saying to them, "How hardly shall a rich man enter into the kingdom of Heaven?" Was that the way to which he had made it the fashion for men to sell their souls for money? On the contrary, it was by making men fancy that wealth meant happiness, and that they could make sure of getting into Heaven by putting gold into the church plate and leaving a few thousand pounds to the Church when they died. Then thousands and tens of thousands of men were brought within reach of the Devil by guile, who would have fled at the very first if they had a clue to whose den they were being enticed. (Hear, hear, and cries of "That's so!") Look, now, at the service that was being rendered to their cause by parties in the Christian Church. Look at the work of the Rationalists on the one hand and the Ritualists on the other:—Look at the bidding that had been going on about Sabbath observance in Scotland, and the service that was being done to infernal interests both by the ultra-Sabbatarians on the one hand, and by the ultra-Latitudinarians on the other. The one party was doing service to the Devil by trying to make the Sabbath a day of austerity, gloom, and hypocrisy; the other party was doing still better service by trying to make it a day of license and sport. It was admitted on both sides of the House that all those parties were helping to further the Devil's interests. But was it supposed by a single fiend in that House that any of these parties imagined they were doing so? (Hear, hear.) They knew, on the contrary, that the whole of them imagined they were fighting in the service of Truth.—When his illustrious friend, the Roaring Lion, was misleading the people of the Church of England in his character of Rum priest, why had he found it necessary to put on a sanctimonious face and conceal his tail so carefully under his ecclesiastical millinery? Was it not because the people, if they had caught a glimpse of his tail and discovered who it was that they were following, would have run from him in terror? (Hear, hear.) Did the illustrious leader of the Opposition really think that his victims in the Church would have continued to follow him as they had done, if he had shaken off his disguise and let them hear his roar? And yet, what was it that the armed men called upon the House to do? To recognise publicly their indebtedness to parties who never meant to serve the Devil at, and who in the services they actually rendered, thought all the time they were serving the truth! What would be the effect of such recognition? (Hear, hear.) What would be the effect of sending the Venerable Nick to the Rev. Dr. Pusey to thank him for his services in leading the his party back into idolatry, and offering him in recognition of his services the mark of the Beast? What would be the effect of publicly recognizing the unintended services of Renan and Dr. Colenso? He would like to see the fiend who would undertake to go to Professor Gibson, of Glasgow, with the Devil's compliments, to tell him how much we were all indebted to him for stirring up so much bitterness and strife in this case of Walter C. Smith's, and for forcing the Free Church into so embarrassing a position—(hear, hear)—and, in the meantime, to offer him the medal of the Roaring Lion, or the insignia of Auld Clootie, and express our hope that he would keep pegging away.—He would like to see the fiend who would venture to do that. All those who were exciting bitterness and dissension in the Church—all those who were shaking people's faith in the Bible, or leading them back into Ritualist and Romish idolatry, would recoil from their work if they saw whither it tended; they were persevering with it under the delusion that they were extending for truth; and, therefore, to retain their services that delusion must be perpetuated and strengthened, (Cheers.)—That was the principle on which the present Government was acting, and its success had already been beyond anticipation. But the Honourable Friends on the other side of the House not only wanted the recognition of unconscious friends, they wanted open and undisguised war with the enemy. Now, what had been the effect of such policy in past times? Look at the persecution of the Covenanters in Scotland. It was deservedly diabolical work at the time, but it had only buried Presbyterianism deeper than ever into the heart of the people.—See, on the other hand, what valuable triumphs were resulting both in that country and in England from the present policy of sapping and mining, and setting Christians by the ears. The Churches were already everywhere in a state of disquietude and agitation; loose and sceptical views rapidly spreading;—(hear, hear)—the Church and the world were getting mixed up together, the trumpets were giving all sorts of uncertain and queer sounds, and the confusion of tongues was coming back. (Cheers, cries of "That's so," and laughter.) The churches were all being agitated by internal feuds. In England, Ritualism was pulling one way and Rationalism another, giving hope that the Church would split, and one part fall back into Scylla and the other into Charybdis. The Scottish Establishment was gifted with an annual colic of Dr Robt. Lee and his innovations; the Free Church was distracted over the case of Walter C. Smith, the U. P. Church was labouring under a chronic apprehension of organs; and the Reformed Presbyterian Church had already burst asunder in the middle. Such was the result of the present policy of the Government in the very Churches which had only been unified and roused to more determined resistance by the policy of open war and persecution. (Hear, hear.) But let it not be supposed that he (the Old Serpent) overlooked the value of that policy in its own place. On the contrary, it was the very mode of action for which the present policy of the Government was busy preparing the way. (Hear, hear.) There was a time for uncovering the enemy's works, and there was a time for explosion—(hear, hear)—that time was coming. (Hear, hear, and loud cheers.) Mr (the Old Serpent) was not mistaken in his view of the present state of things in England, that day was not far distant. In the meantime, till the moment for throwing off their disguise had come, it was the interest of every loyal fiend to give his utmost aid to the Government in preparing for this diabolical consummation.

The Old Serpent resumed his seat amidst loud and prolonged applause. The House then divided, when there voted—

For the amendment.....	8
Against.....	140
Majority against.....	132

The amendment was accordingly rejected, and the Address in reply to his Majesty's Speech agreed to.

COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY.

At the close of the debate the House resolved itself into a Secret Committee of Inquiry.

Mr. Mumbo-Jumbo wished to know what steps were being taken by Government for preventing the spread of Christian Missions.

Mr. Wide-Awake said that his Majesty's Government were quite alive to the dangerous character of these enterprises, and were aware that if every Christian who found himself amongst the heathen was true to his profession and lived a Christian life the consequences would be most disastrous to the interests of the Devil. But, fortunately, Christian people thought that the whole work of conquest belonged to the Missionary, and that if he lived like a Christian they might live as they liked. Besides, mission enterprises were conducted on a scale of ludicrous minuteness. If any foreign State—Oude or New Zealand, or Texas or Mexico, or Schleswig-Holstein—had to be wrested from its temporal prince, thousands of men and millions of money, with warships, guns, and all appearances, were ready at a moment's notice; but when some country or continent was to be wrested from Satan and the Legions of Hell a divinity student or one of the harmless individuals who go in Scotland under the appellation of "stickit ministers" was sent out to try and do it—(derisive laughter)—and money enough even for his subsistence could only be extracted from the pockets of Christian people by piteous appeals made to them periodically for the purpose. These appeals had often to be addressed to Mr. Mammon and other agents of his Satanic Majesty.—(Laughter.) It seemed to be thought that Heathendom could be bought from the Devil with money that was his own already. (Renewed laughter.) The Government was of opinion that the checkmating of these amusing little sparts of Christian enterprise might be left with perfect safety to Christian countries themselves. It was found that for every missionary they sent out to convert the heathen, they sent out a score or two of white scoundrels to cheat and abuse them. Grog-sellers, with logwood rum bottles, were generally on the field as soon as the missionary, and always did more to make the people worse than the missionary could do to make them better.

Mr. Rowdy wished to know if it was true that the Fashionable Boulevards by the side of the Road to Destruction were being widened and beautified at immense cost by the Government, to please a set of fastidious people who were coming down, but did not like to be jostled on the common road, or were afraid of getting their feet wet and catching cold. He looked on such a proceeding as a sheer waste of money. These people, with their silks and satins, and jewellery and lavender kids, and all the rest of it, would have very little choice of company when they got to their destination, and they might as well consort with dirty sinners on the road as afterwards.—As for their feet, they would get them dried soon enough here, and have any cold they might catch on the way taken effectually out of them. This toadying to fashionable sinners was sickening.

Mr. Devil-in-Pluh would remind the Honourable Member that the toadying which was so offensive to him would cease as soon as these people were got inside the iron gates. (Hear, hear.) There was no toadying after that. But if there were people in the world—as there were thousands of them everywhere—who might be shocked and turn back if they found themselves at once side by side with common blackguards and scrumpets but who could be lured down to destruction by pandering to their gentility, why should they run the risk of losing so much human prey? (Hear, hear.) In a matter like this, he thought no expense should be spared to ensure success. (Hear, hear.) The more roads they opened, and the finer they made them, the more victims they would lure into their toils.—And really it did not matter in the end which road they took, if they could only be kept from going in at the narrow gate that led away to Life.

In reply to a question put as to the action taken by Government in the matter of church organs,

The Foreign Secretary stated that every effort was being made by his Majesty's agents in Scotland to prevent that question from being settled either one way or the other. The mere question of whether a congregation had or had not an organ to direct the singing was one of supreme indifference. But great service had been done to the cause of Dissension and Hatred by raising petty questions like this, and stimulating Christians to quarrel and fight over them. It turned their attention away from vital religion; and the energies that might otherwise be devoted to Christian work were happily spent in struggling about some trivial matter that left people no better than it found them. It was hoped that this organ question, trivial as it might seem might, by dexterous management, be made the occasion for splitting one of the great Presbyterian Churches into two. [Laughter and cheers.] He was perfectly serious. The case stood thus:—The United Presbyterian Church was negotiating for union with the Free Church.—Now, the U. P. Churches in England wanted the organ, and found they could not get on without it, while the Free Church stood against it the very mention of it. The consequence was that the United Presbyterian Church in Scotland was distracted what to do; whether to permit the organ, and so raise up a bar to union with the Free Church, or forbid the organ, and compel the churches in England to leave her.—His Majesty's Government was doing what it can to get her induced to choose his latter alternative, for it was believed that if her English congregations were once cut off they would come more than they were at present under the influence that Satan had at work in England; while, at same time, the cause of contention would still be left in the Church in Scotland to bear the same fruit of bitterness and division there. If the organ was made a matter of indifference, like choirs and postures, and congregations were allowed to have it or not as they pleased, it was feared that strife would soon be at an end, but this unanimable termination of the dispute his Majesty's Government will do its best to avert.

Mr. Ghould wished to know how far the policy pursued in Scotland, of making worldly people rich, and getting the people to keep their ministers in a state of poverty, was strengthening the case of Infidelity, and helping to ensure its victory in the coming struggle.

The Foreign Secretary was glad to say that the policy referred to by the Honourable Member was working admirably. It caused the clergy to be distractedly pecuniary difficulties; it diminished their usefulness; it broke them down before their time; it deterred young men of rank and talent from adopting that profession; and it lowered the status and was paralysing the influence of the Church. Unfortunately, it was in the power of the Church to alter this state of things at any moment, and a present there was a great deal of talk about doing it; but the Devil was on his way to Scotland, and would if possible prevent it. Fortunately, the people were stingy in religious matters, especially the rich people. A man who called himself a Christian would sooner give £20 extra to secure a handsome horse or a more stylish coachman than he would to secure a better minister; and he and his wife would spend more for one dinner or dancing party than they would give from one year's end to another for the support and spread of the Christian faith they professed, but for lack of, which they would, he hoped, find themselves in an unexpected place at last.—[Hear, hear, and a voice—"We'll give them a hot welcome;" followed by Satanic laughter.] This state of things should be encouraged. [Hear, hear.] The great aim of the Devil's Government at the present time was by every means in his power, to draw talent and wealth and rank and fashion into worldly and unchristian channels; to make the Church as poor and weak and degraded as possible; and to undermine the most heavenly system, and all other bulwarks of religion; and when this had been silently accomplished, then would come the day.—[Hear, hear, and loud cheers, in which the conclusion of the sentence was lost.] They knew what he meant: the day for the Roaring Lion and his friends would have come at last. [Cheers.]

The House then adjourned.

CONFEDERATION.

A Bill for the union of the Provinces has at last been published. It occupies a large space in the dailies. Yet we may naturally expect that this bill will undergo some changes ere it becomes law. It is hinted that several changes have been made. It is very little use now to talk about what is right or wrong in it: all that appears useful is to lay before our readers its contents, but this would require more space than we can spare. The name of the new Confederation is to be the "Dominion of Canada." Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick are to be united at once and arrangements are made for the introduction of the other Provinces in the union as soon as those Provinces shall so desire it. The new Dominion shall be divided into 4 Provinces—Ontario (U. C.), Quebec (L. C.), Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. The Executive is still to remain in the hands of the Queen. Ottawa is to be the capital until otherwise directed by the Queen. The Parliament is to consist of a Senate (Upper House) and House of Commons. The Senate is to be appointed by the Governor General; their number not to exceed (at any time) 78.

The House of Commons is to consist of 181. For Ontario 82, Quebec 65, Nova Scotia 19, and New Brunswick 15.

In regard to our own County we find that it is divided, not only to send members to the Local Parliament, but also to the Confederate Parliament. The division of the County for this purpose has been given before and need not now be repeated. The new Dominion of Canada is to be liable for the debts of each Province existing at the union. Ontario and Quebec shall be liable to Canada for the amount their debt exceeds $62,500,000, and are to pay 6 per cent. per annum for the excess. Nova Scotia, in the same way, with her excess over $8,000,000. New Brunswick with her excess over $7,000,000. And in case their debts do not amount to these sums respectively, then five per cent. is to be allowed for the amount it may be less.

In and for each Province the Legislature may exclusively make Laws in relation to Education, subject and according to the following Provisions:—

1. Nothing in any such Law shall prejudicially affect any Right or Privilege with respect to Denominational Schools which any Class of Persons have by Law in the Province at the Union:

2. All the Powers, Privileges, and Duties at the Union by Law conferred and imposed in Upper Canada on the Separate Schools and School Trustees of the Queen's Roman Catholic Subjects shall be and the same are hereby extended to the Dissentient Schools of the Queen's Protestant and Roman Catholic Subjects in Quebec:

3. Where in any Province a System of Separate or Dissentient Schools exists by Law at the Union or is thereafter established by the Legislature of the Province, an Appeal shall lie to the Governor General in Council from any Act or Decision of any Provincial Authority affecting any Right or Privilege of the Protestant or Roman Catholic Minority of the Queen's Subjects in relation to Education:

4. In any such Provincial Law as from Time to Time seems to the Governor General in Council requisite for the due Execution of the Provisions of this Section is not made, or in case any Decision of the Governor General in Council on any Appeal under the Section is not duly executed by the proper Provincial Authority in that Behalf, then and in every such Case, and as far only as the Circumstances of each Case require, the Parliament of Canada may make remedial Laws for the due Execution of the Provisions of this Section and of any Decision of the Governor General in Council under this Section.

From the wording of the Bill, it would appear that South Monaghan is joined to this County for municipal as well as for election purposes. The wording of the bill, as we find it, is:—

"The County of Peterborough to be divided into two Ridings to be called respectively East and West Ridings. The West Riding to consist of South Monaghan (taken from the County of Northumberland) North Monaghan, Smith and Ennismore and the Town of Peterborough."

And, indeed the propriety of the measure will be admitted at once. South Monaghan lies more contiguous to us than to Northumberland, and the inhabitants of that Township, already, do a large share of their trade here. All that is wanted to ensure more of that trade (if not the whole) is to open up proper means of communication, and when they find good roads, an extensive and favorable market for all they have to sell or require to purchase, they will find it to their interest to draw closer to us than heretofore. A movement has been made to open up communication with part of Monaghan by means of a bridge at Hales' saw mill. This should be encouraged and the roads leading thereto, as well as to the other bridge improved, and then we might rest assured of receiving the trade of that flourishing township.

NEW STEAMER.

On Wednesday we had the pleasure of witnessing the launch of the new Steamer which has been built this winter at Buckhorn for Messrs. Tate & Hall. She is to take the place of the old "Victoria," which has been running on the back lakes for the past eleven years, and was built by Messrs. Craigie & Stephenson of Ashburnham, for the late A. Sawers, Esq., who ran her for a few years and sold her to the Messrs. Church, who ran her in opposition to the Ogemah. She then fell into the hands of Messrs. Tate & Hall, who have used her since in towing their lumber from the mill at Buckhorn to Lindsay. This new vessel is to take her place. She is very strongly built and capable of doing a great deal of work besides carrying passengers; an improvement on the old one is intended in the way of having a cabin on deck instead of below deck. The boiler has been refitted with new plates and is now capable of carrying over 125 pounds of steam.

At three o'clock word was sent round the village, and the inhabitants with their friends began to flock down to the yard where the vessel was to be launched. We observed a great many people from Peterboro, Lindsay and Bobcaygeon, who had came to enjoy the sight of the first launch of a vessel at Buckhorn. When the word was given to knock the braces away to let her free, a great many ladies and gentlemen got on board to enjoy the first sail on the new boat. When everything was clear and she began to move, Mrs. Rose, wife of the Captain who has had command of the old boat for a number of years, came forward and broke a bottle of wine on her bow, christening her "Victoria." A finer sight could not have been seen than that of the new boat gliding off the runways into the water. As she touched the water a flag was run up on the flag staff, with the name of "Victoria" on it. The river above the dam is quite clear of ice, so that there was no interruption, and it must be a great satisfaction to all concerned to see everything pass off so satisfactorily.

Before the launch took place, a shooting-match was got up at a range of three hundred yards, which was well contested by a number of crack marksmen.

In the evening a ball was held in a large building, where every one who wished to trip the fantastic toe could do so. Thus ended the day's proceedings of the first launch of a steamer at Buckhorn, and we hope that the business will so increase that there may soon be occasion for another.

Board of Trustees.

The Board of Trustees met on Wednesday evening.

Present—The Chairman, Col. Haultain, Cluxton, Coulter, Stevenson, Dumble and Cameron. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The Secretary read a communication from Mr. McFaul, teacher of the 4th division, asking that he be allowed time to perfect his plans for the erection of his literary structures. The Board received the letter and ordered it to be laid on the table.

The next thing before the Board was some business that had been laid over at last meeting, in reference to reducing the salary of the Secretary. Mr. Cluxton who had moved for the reduction, asked leave to withdraw the resolution and explained his reasons for doing so. The request was granted.

The Chairman of the Committee on Appointments remarked that a meeting of the Committee had been called, but no one attended, and, therefore, his report was merely his own.

After some discussion the matter of appointing an assistant for the primary department was referred to the Committee on Appointments, with power to fill the place with out reporting to the Board.

The Committee on Property was directed to have some changes made in the water closets.

A Report of the Principal was received and adopted.

The Board adjourned.

Fatal Accident.

At Mr. Nelson's shanty, in Harvey, on Friday last, a man named John Buckley was killed whilst helping to unload some logs. Mr. Buckley who was a resident of Douro, had gone to the shanty the day before, and had, as we were informed, just brought his first load unto the ice and went to help another teamster to unload. In doing so a log rolled back on him, and passing over the unfortunate man injured his skull to such a degree that he died in two hours. He was being brought to Lakefield but died on the way; a coroner's inquest was held on the body. He was a single man and resided, we understand, not far from Lakefield.

Literary Re-Union.

The third Re-union given by the Literary Club will be held this evening in the Good Templar's Hall, Scott's Block. The cause of holding this one in the Templar's Hall is the want of room in the Firemen's Hall. The programme presents the usual attractions and we hope to see the Hall well filled. The Club deserve the encouragement of the public for the successful efforts to afford amusement.

In the Leader's correspondence of yesterday, it is said that the Hon. Mr. McDonald, of Kingston, was married on the 16th ult., to a Miss Bernard. The ceremony was performed by the Metropolitan of Canada, all the Delegates and their families being present. The four Bridesmaids were dressed in white silk with white grenadine peplums, and trimmed with blue silk. Two with rose bonnets to match the trimming and white tulle bells falling over the back. The bride was in white satin with tulle bell and orange blossom wreath.

The Perth Courier believes that the Hon. Mr. McDougal will not run unopposed in North Lanark. Dr. McNarin Shaw is spoken of as the Reform candidate. Mr. Caldwell will also run in the same interest.

ITALY.

From a letter in the New York Observer from its senior editor now in Florence in reference to the manners and moral of the people of Italy, but especially Florence, we extract a few remarks. First, in reference to the King himself. It is said, "Perhaps the name of the King, Victor Emanuel, the best of all names for a sovereign, has given the impression that he is a good King, one of the best of men, and especially raised up of God at this time to lead the Italians to unity, greatness and religious liberty. Well, he is not a good man, as the good people of our country estimate goodness, and if he is a good King he is one more illustration of the fact that a man may be a good soldier, statesman or prince and yet be a bad man." " " "He is widely regarded as half inclined to Protestantism and one of the most hopeful champions in the great battles against the Pope. These impressions are erroneous. Victor Emanuel is a loyal son of the Church of Rome, and has no more idea of encouraging Protestantism or of fighting Popery than than he has of mending his life and putting away the sins that make him an offence even here in Florence. " " " It has been supposed, and so far as the course of Europe are concerned, it is supposed with truth, that there is a great change for the better during the present century.—Certainly the externals are better. Even the court of France maintains a decent show of propriety, and the sad stories that are told in private may be set down for scandal, or believed according to the taste and credulity of the hearer, but there is no concealment about the matter in Italy. Indeed its remarkable moral atmosphere surprises quite as much as the peculiarities of the climate. Unless all history is false, the celibacy of the Clergy has worked a fearful deprivation of morals in the country. No licentiousness this side of Turkey or Utah has exceeded that of some of the Holy Fathers of the Church—even in the Pontifical chambers, and this has gone such lengths, and has so permeated the moral sentiment of the people, that the idea of virtue has no existence whatever in the domestic creed of Italy.—The King sets an example that is in the last degree disgusting. His amours are so notorious that they are the town-talk, and his behaviour is the subject of frequent censure. And these things are condemned not by his enemies merely, but by foreigners, and by those few of the native population who have a sense of the fitness of things in the life of their ruler. They have believed themselves taught by example that these sins are among the most menial and easily forgiven—if they require any forgiveness at all. It is positively surprising to observe the coolness with which the matter is spoken of by the devout sons of the Church, of whom you would expect better things. But is only to be accounted for by the peculiar light in which the sin is regarded—even by the teachers of religion—in this seat of the Church."

And then follows a description of the morals of the upper classes of society that is really disgusting beyond all our ideas of character or chastity. But the writer declares that in all these things a want of charity is a greater sin than a want of chastity. The great mass is so corrupt and corrupting, that it is said that the whole community is given to sensual indulgence. The writer concludes thus:—"It must be enough to say that from the King of Italy, through the nobility to the people, the weakness of morals and manners are abhorrent to our ideas of right, and are fatal to the moral elevation of the Italians. It must be observed also that vice is not estimated here as it is in countries where the Protestant religion has given tone to public sentiment. Hence we may not hope to see any very marked improvement in social morals here, until celibacy, venal indulgences, penance, and human absolutions are swept out of the Church, and the commandments of God take the place of the traditions and inventions of men."

"Church Union."—We have received a copy of a new periodical with the above title, published in New York, and having for its objects—"An open communion, the recognition of an Evangelical Ministry by the interchange of pulpits, and thus to make visible the unity of the Church." The paper is neatly printed and contains a great deal of reading matter. The unity of Christian people is much needed, yet many will have their own ideas of the best way to bring that oneness about. The desire is no doubt commendable, but the work will be difficult.

Shooting Affray at Smith's Falls.—On the 28th ult., a dispute arose between two brothers, Captain Chambers and Dr. Chambers, concerning the keys of the store, when the captain called his Brother a liar, where upon the latter drew his revolver and shot the captain through the breast inflicting what is believed to be a fatal wound. The doctor has been arrested. Dr. Chambers is father to the member for Brockville.

From the Aurora Banner we learn that Reform meetings have been held in Whitchurch, Aurora and King, and delegates and committees appointed.

Queensland.—To encourage the settlement of farm lands in the colony, an Act has been passed by the Queenland Legislature enabling persons to lease from 30 to 2,560 acres on the following terms: Any of the country lands, which are frequently being put up to auction, beyond the distance of two miles from the boundary of any town or village, at an upset price of 20s an acre, if not sold at the auction or by selection within 30 days after being offered at auction, will be leased to the first applicant at an annual rental 2s 6d an acre, paid in cash, or emigrants' land orders, the eight payment to secure the full purchase of the land, after which a deed, or grant in fee simple, will be issued by the Government. This is specially intended, and will no doubt have the effect of encouraging the settlement of sheep farmers with limited means, as well as of agriculturists on the extensive and fertile lands throughout the colony. The extent of the new colony of Queenland is nearly twelve times that of England and Wales.—Australian paper.

The Madoc Gold Mines.—C. P. Aylsworth, Esq., P. L. S., just arrived from Madoc, informs us that there is great activity amongst the gold seekers there. Large grounds are constantly going and coming from the mines, and there is every prospect of a stirring time when Spring opens. A large crushing machine is being manufactured in Brown's foundry, Belleville, for the owners of the Richardson mine, and will be put in operation as soon as circumstances will permit. A town site has been laid out and lots are being sold at enormous prices. A large number of buildings are being put up for the accomodation of miners, and no less than six hotels have been erected since the gold excitement commenced.—Citizen.

Extensive coal beds have been discovered in British India. It is believed that this will lead much to the civilizing of the natives.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, March 4th, 1867.

The Council met on Monday evening. Present—the Mayor and Messrs. Chamberlain, Leonard, Stevenson, Doherty, Kennedy, Wrighton, Patterson, Dixon and Toole.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Communications were read from Mr. Caisse, requesting payment of a balance of his account which had been disallowed by the Finance Committee of last year, and setting forth that if not paid he should take steps to collect it.

From Mrs. Haultain, Secretary to the Protestant Home, asking the Council for a grant similar to that of last year.

Also from Widow Hurley, asking for assistance.

The Communication of Mr. Caisse was referred to the Finance Committee; the other two were referred to the Committee on Charities.

An account from R. Dennistoun, Esq., for law expenses, $2.00; and from H. Crone, for carting, $1.10, were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Wrighton, Chairman of the Fire Committee, read and submitted a Report which was received and adopted.

The Council adjourned for a week.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

The Council of Ashburnham met on Monday evening. Present—the Reeve and Messrs. Sutherland, Ledgate and Bennett.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Several petitions were presented for Tavern License and on motion, R. Morgan, Esq. re Reynolds and W. Swanston were recommended to receive the necessary certificates, on complying with the By-laws of the Village and the statutes. Thomas Armstrong and Jos. Roberts, a shop license, the rate for the same to be $45.

Several accounts for lumber for sidewalks were ordered to be paid.

The Council adjourned to meet on Tuesday evening next.

For the Examiner.

British American Order of Good Templars.

Pursuant to notice, a County Grand Lodge meeting was held in the Hall of Unity Lodge, No 370, Peterborough, on Friday the 22nd day of February, 1867, at which five lodges, strongly represented by delegates and representatives, assembled at 2 o'clock, p. m.

The meeting was called to order by the Provincial Deputy, after which the Rev. Bro. J. R Gundy invoked a Divine blessing on all present and for the extention of moral principles throughout the world.

After receiving the credentials and reports of the several lodges, the election of officers was declared in order. The following shows the result, viz:—

After which, the officers elect were installed for the current year.

Several important resolutions were then read and adopted, principally in the action taken by this County Grand Lodge, for the extension of the principles of temperance in these Counties, and for the higher attainments and development of the fundamental principles of our order.

The meeting then adjourned, to meet again in the Town of Peterborough on the last Wednesday in June next, at 2 o'clock, p. m.

SOCIAL AND TEA MEETING.

A little after seven o'clock, the Templars Hall was filled with the good friends of temperance, who had met to greet each other upon the great temperance platform.

After tea had been served, the chairman called the meeting to order. An impressive prayer was offered by the Rev J. H. Johnson, M. A., Wesleyan Minister, Peterboro, who was also then introduced to the meeting. He made a most eloquent and impressive address—dwelling forcefully upon the duty of the church, in relation to the temperance movement. The address was listened to with marked attention.

The Rev. W. L. Scott, Wesleyan Minister, Omemee, was next introduced to meeting. His address was also an impressive one. Those present must have felt the force of his arguments in his advocacy of this great and noble cause, and its claims on christians, yea, on all mankind.

The Rev. J. R Gundy, C. G. C., was the last speaker introduced to the meeting, and was received with applause. He, also, dwelt upon the duty of the church in this matter, especially, the claims of every christian minister, to advocate and exert his influence on the side of morality as well as the christian religion. The appeal was a most searching one, to ministers and people, and it is hoped may have its influence on the minds of many that were present.

After singing the National Anthem, and the benediction pronounced, the meeting dispersed well pleased with the evening's exercises.

JAMES A. BARCHARD,
County Secretary.

The Millbrook Messenger says that Mrs. Clark, aged 65, of the 7th concession of Cavan, committed suicide on the morning of Sunday last. It appears she has been laboring under a depression of spirits, for some time past, owing to religious views, and, on Sunday evening, the family of her son, Mr James Clark, with whom she resided, attended a lecture, somewhere near Springville; on returning home, late at night, the deceased retired to bed. The next seen of her, was about nine o'clock on Sunday morning, when she was discovered in the wood shed, hanging up by the neck, and had been dead for some hours. Deceased was much respected, amongst her neighbours.

The Paris Exhibition.—A correspondent of the Montreal Witness after relating a joke at the expense of Dr. Tache, one of the commissioners to the exhibition, passes the following suggestive remarks about Dr Tache's colleagues: The Hon. T. D. McGee has also gone over, but not to represent mechanics. Mr. Joseph H. Dale goes with him; we all know what particular duty falls to him. Why, sir, in Paris persons of intemperate habits are locked down upon in pretty much the same light as we should look upon the most miserable vagrant.

Good Times.—A contemporary, the Cobourg Sentinel, observes that Rev. Mr. McMahon is keeping the library of the Provincial Penitentiary and Col. Patrick Rose Lynch has the interesting duty of packing shoes in that celebrated institution.—Sun.

Rev. Mr. Muir.—We learn that the Rev. Mr. Muir, Pastor of St. Andrew's Church in this town, has accepted a call to Galt, and that he is to be inducted into his new field of labor on the 28th instant.—Victoria Warder.

THE IMMIGRATION OF 1866.

(From the Canada Emigration Gazette.)

During the season of 1866 the total number of emigrants landed at Quebec, via the St. Lawrence, was 28,648, against 21,358 in 1865; showing an increase of 7,293 souls,—viz., 4 in the number of cabin and 7,289 in the steerage passengers.

Distinguishing the countries from whence they came, the following remarks appear:—

	Cabin.	Steerage.	Total.
From England.....	1,340	6,895	7,235
" Ireland.....	183	2,017	2,230
" Scotland.....	164	2,058	2,222
" Germany.....	...	3,330	3,330
" Norway and Sweden.....	...	13,506	13,506
" Other Countries.....	...	125	125
	1,544	27,924	28,648

11,630 came by steamers and 17,009 by sailing vessels. Of the former, 6,853 embarked at Liverpool, 2,214 at Londonderry, 1,213 at Glasgow, and 259 at London.

Their nationalities were:—

English.....	3,380
Irish.....	3,422
Scotch.....	2,074
Germans and Prussians.....	4,0 3
Norwegians, Swedes, and Danes.....	14,968
Other countries.....	791
	28,648

And the trades and callings of the steerage male adults emigration are stated to have been as follows:—

Farmers.....	[illegible]
Labourers.....	3,888
Mechanics, tradesmen, &c.....	3,201
Professional men.....	138
Servants (male).....	4
Clerks, traders, &c.....	283
	13,010

The season's emigration may be said to have been of a remarkably healthy character.

Amongst the emigrants from the United Kingdom, but 8 deaths occurred at sea; while the mortality on board the ships from foreign ports bears a smaller percentage than ordinarily.

The very large emigration observable from Norway is attributable to the growing preference entertained by the Norwegians for the St. Lawrence route, as a highway to their settlements in the Western States.—The attention of our government has been aroused to the importance of securing to this country a portion of this valuable immigration; and measures, having for their object the establishment of a Scandinavian settlement within the province, where every facility and inducement will be held out to the foreign settler, are, it is anticipated, shortly to be carried into effect.

The Cookery of all Nations at the Paris Exposition.

Every nation is to have its restaurant, with cooks in native costume. Six Chinese damsels are already on their way with their chopsticks and tea urns. Six Japanese will stand beside them. More difficult it will be to arrange a snow-drift for the Laplander, with room for his sledge, but the reindeer and his master will certainly be there.—Ovens are to be constructed for roast beef and plum-puddings, and Johnny-cakes are to be given piping hot from the pan. Still we fear they will not be good, for Europe does not produce good Indian meal, and that which crosses the sea has never more the genuine flavor of that which is eaten on American soil. It gathers a dampness on the voyage from which nothing can purify it. Russians from the Steppes are constructing a cabin like those which shelter them from the "frozen north;" the Russians are weaving a tent of purple and gold; the Turk is erecting a mosque, the Chinaman a pagoda, and the Hottentot a hut, in which we are to see how families live in these several habitations. There are to be miniature forests, parks with deer, prairies with herds, and mountains with their untamed tenants, lakes, rivers, and cataracts, and all these features have begun to assume form and comeliness. Half the space in the great building is already occupied and the French department is nearly complete. England, Norway, Sweden and Russia have sent nearly their quota and the wonderous machines and "cunning inventions," which are to represent America are beginning to be adjusted to their places.

The utility of such an exhibition could doubtless be far greater than it is, but the benefits of those which have had place have been visible or there would have been no more. In this, all who exhibit, have more regard to the good of a great number than has been the case at any of the others. In the Old World, every where, we see comfort and luxury enjoyed by the few, and the many left to poverty and suffering, because what they lack is too expensive for their means. This is beginning to be understood, and, as a consequence of what they saw at the Crystal Palace, the continental manufacturers are preparing "things of beauty" in humbler forms and in diminutive proportions.

Our French neighbors, the Rouges, are already beginning to take the alarm about the expense of Confederation, on which one of their organs says:—"With Royalty will come a court, nobility, titles, decorations, orders, the pleasures and privileges of majesty, a pension list, &c., &c. " " "

The representative of the Queen, whilst called Governor-General, is to have $50,000 a year for ruling 3,750,000 people, while the President of the United States has only $25,000 for governing 35,000,000; and the Governor of the State of New York, with almost the same population as the Confederate provinces, has only $4,000; that is to say, the embryo viceroy is to have twelve and a half times as much for the same service as the Governor of New York." So says the Pays.

The sons of Garibaldi have gone to Canada to help the Candians against the Turks.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Spraine, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Ames, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your colorated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

EVERY BODY SAYS SO.

That is all who have either used the article themselves or witnessed its effects when used by others; all such, and they are only it to judge, are unanimous in the opinion that "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy" is superior to anything of the kind heretofore or at present in use for Coughs, Colds, Thick Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses. As a Condition Medicine it has no equal; there is nothing in it which can injure a horse whether sick or well—nor need the horse be kept from working while using it; it is just the article which all who own horses require, and which they should have constantly on hand.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C.W., proprietors for the Canadas. Sold by all Medicine Dealers. 47

IMPORTANT TESTIMONIAL FROM
J. E. GUILBAULT.

MONTREAL, Jan. 20th, 1866.

MR JOHNSON BRIGGS,
Sir,

I have used your Prof. Velpeau's Hair Restorative, having been troubled with an itching scalp and loss of hair.

A few Applications of the Restorer entirely cured me, and stopped the Hair from falling off.

My family have also used it with satisfaction, and I give it the preference over any other article I have ever used as a Cosmetic or Hair Restorer.

Yours truly,
J. E. GUILBAULT,
Proprietor Zoological Garden and Museum.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat. Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c.

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly, and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Ordersare coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, andeach testifying as to the universal satisfaction itgives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it, and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

THE Edinburgh Life Assurance Company offer to the public the advantages of a Canadian as well as a British Company. They have invested a large amount of money on securities in this country, and the Toronto Local Board have full power, by an Imperial Statute, to take risks, make investments, and settle claims in Canada without reference to the Head Office, Edinburgh. Some of the old Policies in the Company, which became claims during the past year, were settled by payment of amounts double of those originally insured, in consequence of the large bonuses that accrued on the Policies.

Every information that intending Assurers may require can be obtained on application to

GEO. A. COX, Agent at Peterborough.

Peterboro', Jan. 30th, 1867. 5

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who resided in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the invigorating Fluid,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed affected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the great est boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Price of the Remedy in large Pints, $1.

For Sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

OTTAWA CANCER INFIRMARY,

Sparks street & Maria street, Ottawa, C.W.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or a sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Have you cast off color, with yellow spots or pimples over your face? Is your breath offensive, your tongue coated, your stomach sour, your bowels costive? Are you dull, drowsy, and stupid? Have you no appetite, or a craving for unnatural things? Are you subject to frightful dreams, and do you imagine ghosts? If you have any of these symptoms, you are diseased, and should be cleansed by a cathartic medicine. Ayer's Pills will do it. Nothing else can put out the diseased matter—purify the blood—and set the whole system to rights. Nothing else can so thoroughly expel the humors that breed disease. Nothing else can so completely restore the healthy tone and vigor to the stomach and bowels. While in this condition, you are liable to take Ayer's Pills, and not know directly they relieve the diseased action of the system, and with it the whole feeling of health applies. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the more violent and dangerous diseases. The same purgative effect expels them. Cleansed by these agents from the impurities that depress the energies of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. Even when the disease has fastened so firmly upon the constitution as to be beyond the reach of cure, these Pills will greatly mitigate the sufferings and prolong the distressed life they save.

Endorsements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons

From a Prominent Merchant of St. Louis, Mo., 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the purgative of all that is great in medicines. They have cured me of many a bilious attack, and relieved my children of the worst complaints to which they are liable, with the most pleasant remedy we have ever used, and we know how to value your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA HORSFORD.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their searching qualities surpass any compound I ever employed. They are mild, but very complete and effectual in their action on the bowels, which renders them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Dyspepsia, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR DR. AYER: Everybody around you asked me if I have cured with your Pills. I have them to say of that on your head with a positive confidence. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contact with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

Pneumonia, Pain in the Side, Lungs, &c.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache and pain in the side by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to relieve them in a few minutes, which they always do at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PRINCE, Clerk of Hanover Church.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Hall, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1866.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease on which I did not readily yield to them. Yesterday yours, ALEX. W. HALL, M. D., Physician of the Interior Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best cathartics I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœas. Their purgative qualities make them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in sickness. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as effectual as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe sincerely, to originate in the liver, but your Pills relieve that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. R. Sweet, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find you as true types of your pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent preventive of the maternal sorrows when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and bowels. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkins, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

BENETT CHERBOE. Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1865.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT ELIBEL.

Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours. While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him: "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and have as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

DARLEY'S Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural tone, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, restoring the silk, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.
